Joe Hietter of Prairie Players is the next community theatre president presented to you in this series. Joe joined the Prairie Players in 1963 and became very interested in the workings of community theatre. He began by helping out backstage, then progressing to acting. He has appeared in several shows including "Bell, Book, and Candle," "Four Poster," "Write Me a Murder," and "Mary." His next adventure was directing a one act, "Blue Concerto" for Prairie Players.

During the time he was actively engaged in production activities, he also held executive posts with the club. Hietter served as treasurer and promotion manager for two years. While serving in these capacities Joe instituted "Traveling Children's Theatre" that has brought considerable prestige and income to the theatre group.

Peoria, Ill., is where Joe calls home, and Bradley University is where he received his education. In Peoria Hietter was a disc jockey for WMMJ Radio. Married and the father of five children, Joe presently is employed by the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company.

One of the major highlights of Hietter's activities since joining Prairie Players was making commercials for a local television station. He and some other local actors made the Delgano cheese commercials which are still being shown on the Mike Douglas program. Joe was chosen for the job because of his ability to speak various dialects.

The new president's aims for the '66 and '67 season are increased membership, purchase of new lighting equipment and inaugurating a program that will attract teenagers and interest them in taking an active part in the club's productions.

Community theatre advocates like Joe Hietter and respect him for his accomplishments with Prairie Players.

Columbus Boasts Of First In Safety Education

Columbus can boast of an all-time first in the nation: The Junior High School Safety Program.

Since its founding two years ago, it has received national recognition and has established a blueprint for similar junior high organizations throughout the country.

The Columbus Board of Education, the Police Department, the AAA and Safety Council of the Columbus area are responsible for the establishing of the Junior High Safety program.

Each of the 19 junior high schools in Columbus has a safety corps headed by two students, a coordinator, and an assistant coordinator with the aid of advisor, Mrs. Jeanne Bray of the Police Department.

The organization produces outstanding programs throughout the year such as essay, poster, slogan, and scrapbook contests.

Students have written eye catching slogans on safety such as "Life is too short to take chances," "Safety first—second may be too late," and "If you smoke in bed the ashes you leave may be your own."

Projects have ranged from disabled dummies to locker cleanouts, windshield washing, discussion of safety rules for baby sitters, removal of snow and ice, distribution of safety bookmarks, and warnings not to run in hallways, throw things or walk in the street and more.

Many of these projects have won awards sponsored by the AAA which included prize trips to Washington, D.C., Dearborn, Mich., and Cedar Point for the winners.

Why institute a safety program on the junior high level? Elementary schools have intensive instruction on safety and traffic patrols, high schools have driver education but junior high schools throughout the areas were lacking in a permanent safety program.

Essentially this program was designed to fill gaps in safety education throughout the junior high level, and to safety on impressionable imprint the importance of minds.

THE SPECTATOR SUPPLEMENT

Military Look Big For School Fashion

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

Now is the time for all good mothers to get ready and set for back-to-school . . . so . . . get into those mothballs . . . haul out the remains of last year's stock . . . and take inventory.

You know, even before you start, that there's some shopping to do, so get organized Decide what's needed and make a list. You'll probably save both time and money if you watch the current newspaper advertising (especially The Spectator) because most all of the merchants who deal in children's apparel are well aware of this seasonal demand and have ample stocks to supply your needs. Right now racks are jammed and stocks are overflowing with exciting new clothes for you to pack away next spring.

It's three cheers for the red, white and blue in both adult and children's fashions this fall and the littlest Americans are apt to be the biggest flag-wavers. They may be too young to vote for president but when the count is in on back-to-school fashions, it takes no sampling of the public-in-miniature to figure the landslide for the Military Look.

Children always look good in bold, brave colors and classic lines so the brass-buttoned take-off on the Officer's Coat is bound to be a favorite for little girls this season. Little boys will probably prefer a copy of the more rugged pea-coat. Incidentally, Mom and Dad can find the same stylings in their sizes if they want to join the military fashion parade.

Another current fashion trend for the younger citizen is the Carnaby look . . . a look that was born and developed in Carnaby-st in London. It's definitely a young look, kind of off-beat and so popular that it's obvious in boys' and girls' departments from 3-6X to the Teens. Young swingers love the skimpy "poor boy" sweaters tucked into "hipster" skirts and pants . . . They love the scrambled colors and patterns and girls especially love the little "mini-prints" in dresses and shirts, always with the stark white collars and cuffs.

Helen Lee is one designer of children's fashions who has probably done more than any other to translate adult fashion trends into terms appropriate for the younger set. Miss Lee (actually a grandmother herself) advocates simple classic styles done in smart colors and fabrics. McCalls September Fashion Digest (available at most department stores free of charge) features patterns designed by Helen Lee. In it you'll find a wealth of current new fashion looks including Carnaby and "poor boys" and even a spiffy pants suit, just like the big girls.

For you ambitious mommies who like to sew, it's probably needless to point out that do-it-yourself fashion looks are also available. Fabric departments are featuring all kinds of easy-care fabrics, knits, coating materials. Pattern companies nowadays also keep up with all ready-to-wear trends and offer simple designs and helpful fabric suggestions.

Now is the time also, Mom, to get those important school shoes.

The week of Aug. 28 is Leather Promotion Week and local stores will be featuring leather.

Children's shoe departments are bulging with the newest stylings in boots and shoes in brushed and smooth leathers . . . in all fashion colors and featuring the same fullness and blocky shapes that are scoring successes in grown-up styles. One final word, when back-to-school shoe shopping, remember the National Shoe Institute's caution . . . The most important consideration in the purchase of children's shoes is proper fit.

Trinter Assumes Duties As New W-R Principal

Raymond Trinter has begun his duties as principal of Walnut Ridge Junior-Senior High School, 4811 E. Livingston-av.

Trinter replaces Don Thatcher, new director of adult education for Columbus Public Schools. Prior to coming to Walnut Ridge, he was principal at Clinton Junior High School for six years and, prior to that, principal of Starling Junior High School.

Three new athletic coaches have also assumed their duties. Don Wynkoop becomes head basketball coach in addition to his football coaching duties. Ralph Readout has taken over as reserve basketball and junior high baseball coach and Steve Moeller is a new assistant football and track coach.

Mirror Test Gives Lighting Guide

How to determine whether study lighting is right? Make the mirror test for glare.

So says James V. D. Quereau, M.D., a Reading (Pa.) eye physician and a director of the Pennsylvania Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolargyngology.

Place a mirror on the reading or working surface and look into it from the "studying" position. If a bright source of light is visible in the mirror, lighting should be corrected.

For glareless light, move the light source or reflective Surface (desk or table) until the light in the mirror vanishes.

Or, try using a floor lamp or pin-up wall light, so positioned that the light comes over the child's left shoulder.

Gifted Students Get To Go To College

Education To Surpass Defense Industry By 1975

School Revolution Has Impact On Economy

American education is in the throes of revolution.

THE REVOLUTION is transforming the things students learn in the schools and colleges and, more dramatically, the ways they are taught.

And, the revolution is having a major impact on the American economy. Education, already a major industry, in less than a decade will become the nation's largest.

In the academic year ending last June, $34 billion was spent on formal education in the United States. By 1975, according to conservative estimates, the bill will amount to $61 billion.

IN OTHER words, unless there is a major war, education by 1975 will replace defense as the nation's single largest industry.

And these predictions involve only spending on formal education — the schools and colleges, both public and private. They do not include the vast sums spent on education under the war on poverty, or the education and training budgets of other government agencies, t he military, and industry.

What is behind the revolution and education's new prominence in the economy?

EDUCATION Facilities Laboratories, a subsidiary of the Ford Foundation, that concerns itself with improving buildings and equipment for education, offers this analysis:

There are more Americans than ever before and, more of them are spending more years in the education system. Education is becoming a lifelong process.

Scientific and technological advances mean that more knowledge must be imparted to students at all levels if they are to become productive citizens.

But the supply of talented teachers is inadequate to meet the twin challenges of the enrollment explosion and the knowledge explosion.

FACING the problem, educators have sought ways to make more effective use of a limited supply of good teachers and, at the same time, more fully develop the potenal of individual students.

The results include new patterns of instruction, such as team teaching, and new tools for learning, such as television, programed teaching machines, and even computers.

The new patterns are aimed primarily at giving more youngsters exposure to the best teachers and at educational arrangements that permit the individual pupil to proceed through the curriculum at his own best rate.

THE NEW tools are expected to free teachers from the time-consuming and repetive chore of transmitting facts to students. Instead, they will have time to work with students as individuals and in small groups, functioning as the catalytic agent a good teacher must be.

And, the new tools will be used to handle the knowledge explosion. Human retrievers — the librarians — will be aided by computers, microfilm, and television in their efforts to make the multiplying storehouse of knowledge available to the world's scholars.

It all means that education dollars will be spent on much more than the traditional items — teachers' salaries, books, pencils, and classroom construction.

Increasing amounts will be spent on sophisticated mechanical and electronic devices, many of them not yet invented, to aid in learning and in the retrieval of knowledge.

INDUSTRY, aware of the educational revolution, already is working on new products and systems to serve the new education. Giant corporations, such as IBM and Xerox, are buying smaller, education-orien t e d or publishing-oriented companies to aid their development efforts.

Recently, Times, Inc., and General Electric agreed to cooperate in forming a third company that will develop and produce equipment and materials for education.

And, a number of aerospace and electronics firms, concerned at the ups and downs of defense contracts, are seeking ways to produce educational hardware.

IN SHORT, the educational revolution will mean new jobs for many Americans and greater job security for many others.

The schools and colleges are coming to mean more than education and a future for the children of American families. They also will mean dollars and cents in many a family pocketbook.

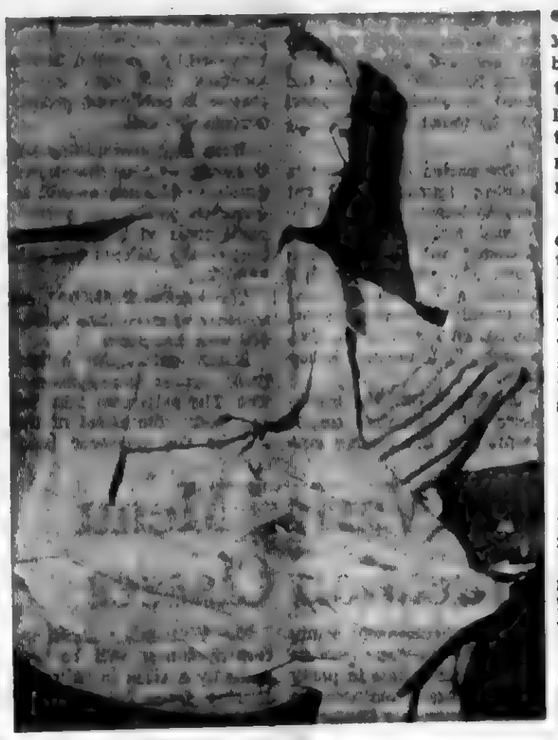
New Worthington Teacher 'Fresh Off The Boat,' Ya!



For those people who still envision the high-school langauga teacher as a decrepit senile old biddy who learned French at the Sorbonne or German at the Reichstag building are in for a pleasant surprise when they get a look at Worthington's new German and freshman English teacher.

Mrs. (sorry gentlemen) Hudwig Schmidt, is, as they say, fresh off-the-boat. She came from Frankfurt about four months ago where she recently completed her studies at the University of Frankfurt.

Mrs. Schmidt is blond, blue-eyed with an Ayran look about her. If you saw her on a college campus, you would probably peg her as a freshman. She speaks impeccable English, which was her major in college.

How Mrs. Schmidt happened to join the Worthington teaching staff is a complicated story. While still living in Germany, she wrote for information concerning an Ohio teaching certificate. When she visited her husband's parents early this year, she filled out the proper forms and was awarded her teaching papers.

When she arrived in the United States for good, she landed a job teaching English at Gahanna. But, not wanting to teach English without German, she turned the offer down. On that same day, Worthington superintendent H. O. McCord was conferring with the Gahanna superintendent over the telephone when McCord remarked that he needed a German teacher. The Gahanna administrator told him of Mrs. Schmidt and McCord called at her home in Granville.

MRS. SCHMIDT relaxes at her Granville home until school starts, which for her is Sept. 6. Students will report the next day.

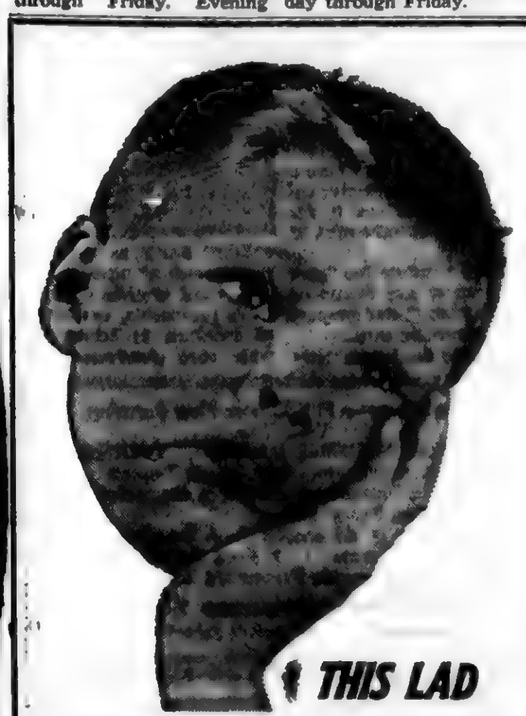
MRS. SCHMIDT said that she was pleasantly surprised with the United States. Her only association with Americans in the past was with servicemen stationed in Germany. There, in fact, she met her husband whom she married eight months ago.

She said she thought that Germans were mildly resentful of Americans, but she attributed the resentment to the fact that any people dislike armies of occupation.

Germans are complacent about their split country, she said. "About the only political-minded Germans are those in Berlin," she added.

"IF EVERYTHING stays as nice as it has so far, I'm sure I'll always be happy

State Employment Service Provides Job Help



The Ohio State Employment Service, a division of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation, provides a variety of services to the employers and employes of the Columbus area.

The basic function of the Employment Service is to provide employers who have job openings with qualified applicants who are referred to their business establishment so that those best suited to the job requirements may be hired.

Employers can take advantage of this service by calling in the specifications of the job, which should include the duties involved, years of experience required, working hours, wages and other pertinent details that will enable interviewers to do a better job of referring applicants. If available, several applicants will be referred so the employer will be able to select the ones who best meet the qualifications.

Persons looking for work need only to come to the Ohio State Employment Services where they fill out an application form summarizing their work history, educational background and other abilities needed to determine what line of work they are best suited for. If they wish they may use the testing and counseling services that are available.

Younger persons from 16 to 21 are asked to apply at the Columbus Youth Opportunity Center at 239 S. Fourth-st, where the same services will be provided for them.

Adult Education Enrollment To Rise Once Again

Some authorities contend that when the adults who will be returning to learning this fall are added to school and college enrollme n t s, nearly half of the population may be counted.

DIFFICULTY in estimating the number to be enrolled in classes for adult education arises from the vast number of special classes set up independently by individual industrial and business organizations for retraining employes to fit them for new types of jobs.

Last year's officially and conservatively estimated enrollment of approximately 30 million is expected to surge considerably this fall. There's hardly a community in the land that will not have some classes in adult education.

Study Shows 'Mature Coed' Welcome At OSU

All Ohio State coeds are not faced with the dilemma of whether to hit the library or the campus coffee shop.

Some, referred to as the "mature coeds," must choose between the library and making the bus that will get them to the kitchen before Johnny is home from school.

These are the women who are continuing their education after that 29th birthday cake is staler than yesterday's newspaper.

A SURVEY was recently made among the professors whose classrooms were shared by conventionally-aged and the "mature" student. (The word "older" or "aging" is avoided as carefully as "senile" in a Golden Age Club.)

The reactions of the professors and other students to these adults were explored and the faculty was queried on matters such as orientation, examinations, grading, entrance requirements and counseling.

One hundred twenty-five faculty members responded to the questionnaires, and as those in the teaching profession are cut from as many bolts as their students, the answers were anything but stereotyped.

HOWEVER, the motivation and discipline of the mature student were generally recognized, and an overwhelming majority of those responding believe the wider life experience allowed the contribution of these students to be unique — and profitable.

Acceptance of those who who have been voting for years (the average age of those studied was 37.4 years) by the "youngsters" was usually complete, but exceptions were noted.

These are to the adults who "overtry," challenge concept on little more basis than that it disagrees with their personal attitudes and are too talkative.

ONE PROFESSOR, for example, made it clear that he felt none too sympathetic to women in his class who were "whiling away their time in their anecdotage."

Similarly, the well-accepted student is apparently the one who is ready to accept new ideas and does not regard his maturity as a license to dominate.

And the customary teacher-student relationship must be respected. (The woman in her fifties is hardly regarded as an apple-polisher who started out a conference with her instructor, "Now, sonny, let me tell you this.")

ALTHOUGH the survey indicated the mature student tests quite well and has not lost the skill of analytical reading, there seems to be an undercurrent of belief that many are not as well-read as they should be, and their library techniques rusty.

Recognizing that OSU is basically organized to educate youth, a number of respondents took the opportunity to suggest adjustments the university might consider to better accommodate the mature.

Intensive counseling was advocated to keep the adult from over-scheduling himself or herself, and waiving of certain prerequisite requirements for certain courses was suggested.

(THESE WAIVERS seem especially important to the students who are not "degree-oriented" and have reentered the academic world with the goal of self-enrichment.)

The tuition set-up was questioned as being impractical and sometimes prohibitive to the student taking only one course per quarter. With full time fees set at $150 and that for six hours or less a constant $75, it was asked whether part-time students should not be placed on a credit-hour basis.

Special curriculum needs were also touched upon.

FOR EXAMPLE, rapid technological advances during the last two decades have left many once reasonably well informed adults quite naive in any science more complicated than Newton's Law. It is pointed out many would welcome the opportunity to bridge this gap to make them at least conversant in the field.

All in all, the survey should be heartening to the woman who, no longer a spring chicken and past the responsibilities of early motherhood, is asking herself, "Should I go back to school?" and "If I do, can I 'cut the mustard'."

At Ohio State the answer is "If you are motivated, if you are willing to adjust and accept new ideas, and if you can leave 'pushiness' at home, a continued education can be extremely rewarding."

A FINAL WORD of warning to the mature coed might well be "Don't seek special consideration."

After all, a few gray hairs or past-presidency of the PTA does not a scholar make.

Schools, Colleges Grid For Record Fall Enrollment

By JAMES BRANDON

Cultivation of our greatest national resource — the youth of the nation—will be resumed shortly with the reopening of schools and colleges through the length and breadth of the land for another academic year of learning.

THERE IS just enough time left before classes start —while school authorities at all levels bend every effort to make expanding facilities ready to receive them—for them and their parents to get set for the new term.

It is to this purpose that this special section is dedicated.

Enrollments at all age levels will have increased again this year. The "education explosion," with its salutary effects discernible in terms of progress, continues to reverberate down the corridors of the years.

SUBSTATINALLY more than one fourth of the total population of the country will be actively engaged as personal beneficiaries. Some 2,000,000 teachers, and more, if qualified personnel can be found, will be on the job.

The nation as a whole is gaining immeasurably not only in terms of a better informed and better trained citizenry but also economically. The school boom has become a boon to business; is rapidly becoming one 'of the nation's most productive, namely, "job making" industries.

A STATISTICAL breakdown of estimated enrollments for the coming academic year, from the U.S. Office of Education, reflects the following.

More than 49 million children between the ages of five and 17—by far and away the largest number in all history—will be enrolled in elementary and high school classes in public and private schools this fall.

More than five million 800 thousand — also the largest number in history — will be going to public and private institutions of higher learning: — the colleges and universities.

The total:—55,800,000, an increase of more than 2,800,000 over last year.

SOME authorities believe these figures to be conservative. The estimates take into account the effect of the end of the post-war baby boom, which is slowing the rate of growth of both high school and college enrollments.

But, say these sources, more children are remaining in school for more years of their lives; more high school graduates are qualifying for entrance into college, and a reduction in the number of dropouts appears to be in the making.

The cumulative effect of all this can send the total enrollment for 1966-67 soaring beyond the estimates.

ADD THE uncounted number of adults who will be going back to classes this fall for retraining in new skills required by automation and a computerized society and also by those who require further education just to keep in step with the demands of their supervisory and management jobs, and it is safe to estimate that more than one half of the population will be involved in the "education explosion."

Not too long ago education was looked upon as simply "something we owe our children." Now the view that it is an essential productive enterprise, in terms of trained people, an economic good and more jobs, is apparent from the number of industrial enterprises involved in building facilities.

THIS IS contributing to the growth of opportunity for the better trained, better educated.

Meanwhile industry itself is hard pressed to keep up with the demand.

The problem of providing classrooms and in colleges, housing, as well as teachers, is acute. Some elementary and high schools are forced to use portable classrooms, split shifts and even round-the-year semesters.

Universities in many instances this year have found it necessary to stiffen their entrance requirements as one control over overcrowding.

MOST colleges are taking steps to cope with a "bigness" that otherwise would "lose the individual in the crowd."

In all schools, the development of a vast variety of "learning machines" is being utilized to save teachers more time for personal attention to students.

Elementary schooling is where the learning disciplines are acquired.

HIGH SCHOOL is where a broadening of perspective occurs, and sometimes is focused into a specific area of activity.

College is where the "men of tomorrow are separated from the boys" and prepared for rewarding careers.

These are the things parents should ponder as they move to make their children —of all ages—ready for the return to school this fall.

JUST LIKE at home, is the warmth of attention the little child receives from today's personable, well trained teachers, in bright new wide open classrooms.

YWCA Offers Varied Menu Of Adult Education Classes

The Columbus Young Women's Christian Association is offering a choice of 59 Adult Education classes during its fall term. Classes at the Hilltop YW Center and at Central Building will begin week of Sept. 26 while those at North Community start week of Sept. 20. A bruchure describing these offerings is available on request from the YWCA.

Clothes remodeling is being added for the first time this year to the list of household arts classes which include the ever popular sewing, tailoring, millinery, knitting, interior decorating, furnture refnshng, decoupage, cake decorating and ikebana or Japanese flower arranging.

Crewel embroidery and oil painting are being offered at both the Hilltop and North Community Centers.

Classes in hooked rug making and puppetry and story telling will be held at North Community YWCA on Tuesday mornings from 9 to 10 a.m.

For the hostess who wants to become the "mostest" an eight weeks course in party giving is being featured by North Community Center on Wednesday mornings. The sessions will be held in private homes with the hostess demonstrating how to put on a successful party for a special occasion and will feature a wedding reception, a children's party, an open house, a brunch, a patio meal, a theater party, a theme party and entertaining in general.

For the more psysically minded an extensive program in swimming and sports will be available for persons of all ages. These range from the twice a week combination tiny-tots program in the highly skilled synchronized swimming classes.. Most of the classes for school children will be held on Saturdays with the classes "for boys only" being held on Friday afternoons after school and an all-level class for teenagers on Mondays from 5-6 p.m.

A special feature of the swimming program in the aqua gym class, an holf hour of exercises whose value is enhanced by performing them in the pool.

On Friday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. and on Sundays from 5 to 6:30 p.m. the YWCA swimming pool is reserved for family swimming.

The swimming program at the YWCA is continuous and participants advance at their own rate. However, as the fall series of swimming classes begin the week of Sept. 12 it is recommended that participants register at the beginning of the term.

The Wednesday night orchestra dances will be preceded by a class in ballroom dancing from 7:3 0to 8:30 p.m.

Instruction in the correct use of the trampoline as well as the tumbling and apparatus work will be given in the trimnastics class Tuesdays from 6 p.m.-7 p.m.

In addition to these formal and informal recreational and educational classes the YWCA has a great variety of clubs and interest groups.

For young mothers there are ladies' day-out programs at five convenient neighborhood locations where mothers can enjoy a holiday from spron strings while their preschool children are being cared for by experienced staff in the YWCA playrooms.

For the more mature woman there is the varied and stimulating Thursday at the Y program consisting of book reviews, a home-spun period and a world affairs hour.

Beginning Oct. 6, the world affairs hour will featpre a four weeks' program on updating geography with addresses by Dr. Henry Hunker and associates in the Georgraphy Department at Ohio State University.

For the young career girl, a supper club will be held on the first aand third Wednesday evenings and activities or clubs for men and women are held on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

The YWCA is one of the 69 United Appeals Agencies and receives one-fourth of its budget from the annual United Appeals campaign.

Would a Huntington Back-to-School Loan help your budget?

The money you need is as near as the Huntington Office most convenient to your home or work. Tell us how much you need and pick your own repayment schedule. You get the cash at once.
If your budget seems to be short each week, your fixed monthly payments have probably grown too large. Add all you owe and the amount of the monthly payments you are expected to make. Borrow enough to pay off everybody. That stops all your present payments. Make a single repayment to the bank each month and you'll find that it is about half or less of your present payment schedule.

Shoe Institute Provides Handy Fitting Suggestions

Ninety-eight percent of new-born babies have perfectly formed feet. Yet by the time a child is 10 years old there is a 50-50 chance that his feet have already begun to give him trouble, and a shocking nine out of 10 adults have foot problems.

To help parents care for their children's feet during the critical years of most rapid growth, the National Shoe Institute has compiled answers to a list of questions parents ask most frequently.

Q. When should I buy my baby his first pair of shoes?

A. As soon as he stands without help. It is vital that his first pair of shoes have an extremely soft, flexible sole and plenty of toe room.

Q. How can I be sure my child's shoes fit properly?

A. In general, it is best to rely on a competent shoe salesman who can fit your child's shoes and also spot any problems at an early stage. However, for a handy guide be sure there is plenty of room—½ to ¾ inch—between the big toe and the end of the shoe. Check shoe fit frequently, at least every two or three months. (Clip the attached chart and post on the family bulletin board for handy reference.)

Q. How many pairs of school shoes should my child have?

A. A minimum of two. The same pair shouldn't be worn every day. They need a rest of 24 hours or so between wearings to give the lining a chance to air thoroughly. Also, a wise mother will see that her children change their shoes before going out to play after school. Socks too.

Q. How about sneakers?

A. Sneakers are fine. Most now have built in arch supports. Children like them for climbing and running and they are good shoes for a child to wear while his sturdier ones are taking a 'breather.' They shouldn't be allowed to take the place of well-made, more sturdy footwear, however.

Q. Shoes are so expensive now. Should I allow my younger child to wear shoes her older sister outgrew?

A. Never. It is important not to think of shoes as a long term investment, even though they always seem outgrown before they wear out. A shoe conforms to the wearer's foot and, since no two people have feet of exactly the same shape, it can never be the proper shoe for another child, even though it's the same size. It's best to discard shoes when they're outgrown and buy new one for each child as he needs them.

Q. Shoe salesmen often check the soles as well as the uppers of the shoes they take off my children. Just what can they tell by this?

A. A number of things. Sometimes the sole of a shoe receives uneven wear. This tells a well-trained salesman that either the size or shape of the shoe was wrong for the foot, causing uneven walking. A salesman can also tell by the sole of the shoe if the metatarsal arch (the arch that runs across the ball of the foot) is low. Uppers can be creased in such a way that he knows that the shoe was bad for the foot. All this is helpful to him in fitting your child properly in shoe shape as well as size.

MRS. NOVELLA HELWIG, second from left, accepts a manpower White Glove Award from Miss Eileen Nock, international director of the White Glove Girl program for Manpower, Inc. Looking on, are, left, George Beltzhoover, Manpower vice-president, and, right, George Dewey, manager of the local Manpower office at 342 S. High-st.

Manpower Gives White Glove Award

Mrs. Novella Helwig

Twenty years away from the business world wasn't much of an obstacle for Mrs. Novella Helwig.

The eight-time grandmother has successfully come back to work as a White Glove Girl for Manpower, Inc., which provides part-time office help throughout the nation.

Mrs. Helwig was recently presented a White Glove Girl Award at a Manpower fashion show. Presenting the award were Miss Eileen Nock, international director of the White Glove Girl program for Manpower; George Beltzhoover, Manpower vice-president and George Dewey, manager of the local Manpower office at 342 S. High-st.

Since returning to work, Mrs. Helwig has completed work assignments in more than 30 types of businesses in the Columbus area. She has worked at duties ranging from filing and stuffing envelopes all the way up to service as an executive secretary.

Mrs. Helwig's work still permit her to care for and enjoy her family and grandchildren. She recently cared for six of the youngsters while the parents took vacations.

In addition to her White Glove Award, Mrs. Helwig has received a letter of commendation and thanks from Elmer L. Winter, president and co-founder of Manpower.

Dewey reports there is an acute shortage of skilled office workers in the Columbus area.

Women considering part-time work are invited to visit the local Manpower office to get details on the White Glove Girl program.

'C' Can Be Good Grade, Explains Guide For Parents

A "good" grade for any child is the one that represents his best effort and the et fact that he has learned as much as he is able to learn.

So suggests the Public School System of Canton, Ohio, in a pamphlet entitled "What Parents Should Know" about grades.

A "C" can be a very good grade in a particular subject, whereas in another subject or another child it could be a poor grade, the pamphlet points out.

HOW TO CONVERT letter grades into points — for the "point average" most colleges require on a transcript of students' grades — is explained in the pamphlet. Here is how the conversion works, using as an example a high school student who has earned 17 credits:

Point Values	Credits	X	Points	Totals
(A — 4)	7½	X 4	—	30.0
(B — 3)	6½	X 3	—	19.5
(C — 2)	2	X 2	—	4.0
(D — 1)	1	X 1	—	1.0
			Total Points	54.5

The total points, 54 in this instance, are divided by credits for school work — here 17 — for a point average of 3.21. Elementary school grades can be converted to points in the same manner.

Adult Education Important In Suburban Districts

By PAUL S. NOBLITT

Adult education programs are becoming important adjuncts to the suburban school systems. Not long ago, individuals who desired to further their education were forced to journey to the central city. As a result, many would not or could not travel the distance involved.

NOBLITT

Adult education programs in the suburban districts offer opportunities for personal development, for job upgrading, and for learning new skills. These programs are located near enough so that citizens may easily take advantage of them. As a result the enrollment in these programs has grown tremendously in the past few years.

THE FEDERAL government has financed some courses and plans are now in process to provide much greater opportunity for citizens.

Suburban schools are not generally able to offer high-school courses for credit. This is because of the great number of requirements for graduation and the inability to obtain the required numbers of students to maintain such an operation. For this service, individuals still journey to the central city.

ADULT EDUCATION authorities expect a continued expansion in enrollment. Not only in the practical bread and butter courses concerned with job upgrading but in all areas are more people looking to the schools which have the space, the tools, the professional staff, and the willingness to provide the services.

In school systems where sufficient space is available, adult classes are conducted in the daytime as well as in the evening. More and more, adults are going back to school for many reasons and finding it rewarding and even fun.

Time To Think About Traffic Safety For School Children

The annual warning to motorists that they must shoulder a big share of responsibility for the safety of children of all ages who soon will be going back to school, is extended this year to the teenage group, by officials from every level of education as well as by police authorities.

THE EXTENSION of the warning to encompass the younger group of drivers is inspired by the considerable increase in the number of teenagers who are now driving cars to high schools and colleges.

A marked increase also has been recorded in the number of younger folk who are using scooters and motorcycles as well as bicycles, as their personal means of transportation.

THERE IS a special urgency this year in advice to all of these as well as to the adult drivers and the truckmen who are piloting their heavy vehicles over the highways and the byways, to take their vehicles into the service station for a safety check-up before the schools open. Make sure they are perfectly responsive to operation under any emergency condition.

Brakes, tires, motor, steering and windshield wiper operation all should be checked. Worn parts should be replaced.

DETERMINATION of servicing needs should be left to the experts, the officials say.

Importance of the responsiveness of the automobile or truck to emergency situations is needed basically because of the understandable irresponsibility of the very young, despite the careful schooling they are given in school safety classes. Those in the lower grades of elementary school do sometimes dart out between parked cars in the middle of a block.

DRIVER TRAINING for teenagers has helped their traffic safety record also, yet they are hardly beyond the experience of occasional lapses. Parental observation can help here.

School safety patrols will be on duty at public schools virtually everywhere, but it must be remembered that these well-trained youths operate normally only on the curb side of the thoroughfares.

OFFICIAL protection at school crossings may be provided most everywhere by traffic guards, mostly mature women in uniform, whose authority to halt the traffic flow must be heeded.

Watch for and obey all "Schools Open—Drive Carefully" posters which are placed at strategic points.

Central High Opens Doors September 7

The first day of school for the students of Central High is Wednesday, Sept. 7. There will be a full day of school.

Students who have questions concerning their subjects for next year are urged to come to school during August to check their schedules.

Since subject selections were given careful consideration last spring, and since each student gave written approval to the final subject selection, subjects will not be changed unless very unusual circumstances exist.

The school regrets that it cannot take time to give schedule information over the telephone.

Students who are new in the Central High School district should come to the school and register.

The Columbus Board of Education requires that students attend school in the district where their parents live. Students enrolling at Central must bring a statement from their parents verifying the fact that they live in the Central High district.

Residence with someone other than the parents does not qualify a student for enrollment at Central High School. Those who are returning or entering from a Columbus junior high school are already registered.

Students who have moved out of the Central district and those who will not be returning to school are requested to notify the school office.

Federal Grant Lets OSU Increase Therapy Program

A $27,603 grant from the federal Vocational Rehabilitation Administration is allowing Ohio State University to expose occupational therapy students to actual patients earlier in their academic careers.

Barbara Locher, director of OSU's division of occupational therapy, called the program "a brand new approach to occupational therapy."

Cooperating Columbus area hospitals and institutions will permit the students to deal with actual cases. The federal grant will provide quality clinical teaching within the basic professional curriculum.

Miss Locher said further financial support is expected from the VRA in future years.

Programs For All Adults Offered By Jewish Center

The Jewish Center, located at 1125 College-av, offers the community a variety of cultural educational and recreational programs for Young Adults through Golden Agers.

In addition to serving 6,000 members of all ages, the Center, through its unique committee system, designs and offers year-round activities to meet the continuing and expanding needs of the adult community.

The use of lay people in helping to guide the total program through participation of activity committees gives the adult an opportunity to be a sounding board of community opinions and needs. Committee participation helps the adult learn and develop leadership techniques so useful in everyday life.

The Cultural Arts Department under the chairmanship of Mrs. Melville Frank and staffed by Harold Eisenstein, offers programs for adults in dance, drama, art and music. The Gallery Players offers three major productions a year.

Adult classes in painting and ceramics are offered afternoons and evenings. Art shows and exhibits are displayed periodically during the year. All classes are taught by well-known professionals in the media.

Adults may register for instruction in Modern Dance, Social Dance and Folk Dancing. A performing Folk Dance Group also meets for the expressed purpose of providing dance exhibitions and clinics for organizations.

The Jewsh Center Orchestra offers the advanced musicians an opportunity to play and learn under the baton of an outstanding conductor This is the only community symphony orchestra of its kind in the area. The orchestra is open to the community and auditions may be arranged for new members by appointment.

The Cultural Arts Department offers many special events in addition to its classes and interest groups.

Dina Halpern, internationally known Yiddish actress, will perform in concert on Mar. 18, 1967.

A Jazz Concert is scheduled for Oct. 23. A classic foreign film series is offered during the year with discussion sessions following each showing. There will be three films offered this year.

The Adult Activities Department under the chairmanship of Dr. Harold Monett and staffed by Armand Cohn helps to enrich leisure time and provide practical skills for the adult to carry on into his everyday life.

The Institute for Family Relations provides an intensive series of discussion groups giving parents an opportunity to share and discuss problems of family life with an expert in the particular area of concern. Subjects range from the teenage rebellion to communications and sex relationships.

The Jewish Center Lecture Series seeks to provide an opportunity for individuals to attain a rich and stimulating Jewish cultural experience through provocational and stimulating lectures and discussions by experts of national renown.

A Public Affairs Forum gives the adult a chance to voice his views and opinions to the people directly related to the topic at hand. Both sides of every issue are discussed and participants are encouraged to react and support their point of view. The above three programs are open to the entire community.

Adults seeking to learn or improve specialized skills may register for any one of a number of courses offered by the Adult Activities Department. Such courses include beginning and advanced bridge, creative writing, gourmet cooking, Jewish cooking, Hebrew Instructions and woodworking.

Center adults are offered the opportunity to use their creativity in hobby displays, a literary journal, publicity, photography, a social service library and for special events such as Jewish Book Month, Israeli Independence Day and Family Camp.

Morning slymnastics classes, and evening volleyball are available for women. Men may participate in fitness classes, volleyball, badminton, handball and paddleball. Coed classes and leagues in tennis, bowling, golf, plus a vast swimming instruction program taught by Peggy Pierce, provide a multitude of healthful physical activities.

A complete Health Club offers the businessman or busy housewife the opportunity to relax in comfort or use the steam room, sauna, massage service, exercise equipment, vibrating table and the TV lounge of this modern facility.

How To Light A Desk Area

One of the "musts" for a home study center is proper lighting. And that means light which is evently distributed on the work surface with a minimum of glare.

A pair of adjustable wall or ceiling mixtures, a single long light source such as a fluorescent lamp are three ways to provide proper light for study.

However the desttop is lighter, have some general lighting on through the room to minimize contrasts, suggests the American Home Lighting Institute.

OSU Teaches Thousands With Electronic Devices

The Ohio State Telecommunications Center is one of the best examples of mass-education that is rapidly becoming evident in universities and colleges throughout the country, a spokesman said.

A center report shows that the main campus alone has 14 different courses televised on closed-circuit channels. These courses reach 28,317 students.

LAST AUTUMN quarter lecture courses instructed 4842 dental students as well as the thousands of undergraduates.

A similar circuit reaches Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton where 614 students look in on 42 graduate-center courses Ohio State offers there.

WOSU, which is part of the Telecommunications Center, broadcasts almost 30 courses to over 220,000 high school students in Central Ohio during the academic year. The programs include language instruction, science, physical education, art and music courses.

MISS DUELL

MISS DRUMEL
Columbia Gas of Ohio, Inc., makes available to church or service groups, men's or women's clubs and other organizations two public speakers and a number of 16 mm. sound, color films about the exciting natural gas industry.
Presenting programs that are informative, and entertaining, are the talented speakers Miss Ann Drumel and Miss Carolyn Duell.
TALKS
"THE LAND OF ENCHANTMENT — OHIO" . . . is a captivating talk and presentation of exciting, picturesque color slides of Ohio's natural beauty, industry, entertainment, and history. In this program Ann Drumel models clothes made from natural gas. Audiences are delighted by the magic of it all. Traveling the land of enchantment will be a fascinating 25 minutes of pleasure and education. This talk is suitable for both men's and women's organizations.
"IT'S THE FASHION . . . DOLLI" . . . is a unique fashion show and talk which relates the striking similarities in the development of the fashion and gas industries. Miss Duell, attractively attired in the latest natural gas fashions, illustrates the story with dolls that are colorfully dressed in authentic period fashions of the past, present, and future. This sparkling 25 minute program, designed with the feminine audience in mind, is also appropriate for ladies' nights and mixed groups.
"THE MAD HATTER" . . . Ann or Carolyn models the latest miracle fashions and takes the audience on a trip through a natural gas "wonderland". (25 minutes).
"THE SOARING SIXTIES" . . . describes the 1960's as an age of jets and rockets and tells how natural gas is a major source of "raw energy" in this new age. (20 minutes).
FILMS
"ENERGY ON THE MOVE" . . . is a talk and film presentation describing the exciting modern gas industry. The film features some of the 26,000 industrial uses of natural gas, and the speaker shows products produced by Orio industries using this versatile fuel. (Film: 14 minutes. Talk: 12 minutes).
"ENERGY ON THE MOVE" . . . tells the story of the natural gas industry's efforts to keep pace with today's and tomorrow's energy needs. It is the story of movement . . . convenience for our homes . . . power for our factories and progress for the future. It portrays some of the more than 26,000 ways natural gas is used in today's modern industrial world. (28 minute and 14-minute versions).
"THESE ARE MY PEOPLE" . . . tells of the discovery of natural gas and its use in "America's Original Natural Gasland", and the story of how people made the industry what it is today. (28 minutes and 13½-minute versions).
"THE UNDERGROUND STORY OF NATURAL GAS" . . . tells the fascinating story of how the gas company stores gas, piped to Ohio from the Southwest, by pumping it into the underground rock formations. (28-minute and 13½-minute versions).
To arrange for a talk by Miss Drumel or Miss Duell, or for the showing of a film, call THE GAS COMPANY, 228-5611, Extension 480.

Adults Offered Classes At Central YMCA

Adults of all races and creeds will again be coming through the doors of the Central YMCA at 40 W. Long-st, this September.

The Central YMCA, in its 111th year of operation, provides many opportunities for self improvement through its Informal Adult Education Classes.

These include fitness classes, volleyball, men's and family camping, athletic programs, and special activities.

This year over 5,000 men, boys, women and girls will find at the "Y" a pleasant and effective way to improve their hobbies, athletics, skills or just keep fit.

In the old days of the YMCA on Third-st, fitness was pioneered by having the business men members run around the State House Square. Now the men and boys use the 1/25th of a mile track at the Central building, one of the few indoor tracks in the area.

The pool is used for social family swimming, water safety courses, Scuba classes, and year around adult beginners and advanced swim classes.

Handball enthusiasts have six courts available. Three of these were opened a year ago and are the finest in Ohio. The annual city-wide championships, local and area YMCA championships are held at the Columbus Y courts. In addition there is one court equipped for squash and three courts are used for paddle racquets.

The weight and exercise area on the fifth floor has been remodeled and during the past year an Olympic 555 pound York Isotonic Power Rack was installed, plus other new equipment. Specialists in this area of exercise and fitness are available at all times for consultation and mapping programs of exercise.

YMCA members feel good all the way through when they join in any of a dozen or more sports and recreational activities. The "Also-Ran" club for runners, marathon swimming, judo, karate, wrestling team gymnastics and weight-lifting are some of the team events going on year around.

All these add up to good gets tough. Through sports develop new interests while health — the kind that will and games at the "Y" mem- getting into top physical stand by you when the going bers make new friends and shape.

"CAMPUS WITHIN A CAMPUS" APPROACH to the problem of "bigness" of today's universities, as interpreted at Michigan State, is pictured above. Classrooms, dining facilities, faculty offices and study areas are located in this group of co-educational six-story residence halls. This is but one area of the expanding institution, planned to assure students more individual attention.

Health services are available in the Business Men's Club such as massage service, sun lamps, heat cabinets, steam bath, etc., with two masseurs on duty six days a week.

In the Informal Adult Education program, classes are offered in season, covering a wide range of creative and stimulating topics, including crafts, languages, hobbies, social skills, religion and finances.

Classes scheduled for the fall term commencing the week of Sept. 19 are beginning bridge, ceramics, ballroom dancing, Latin American dancing, advanced first aid, beginning German, guitar, investments, Italian, nature appreciation, oil painting, photography, sketching, beginning and intermediate Spanish, yoga, needlecraft, grapho-analysis, self improvement through English, fall flower arrangement, Psychology of Religion, Psychology of Personality.

Social club activities include bridge, chess, hiking and youth hosteling.

Physical Department hours for all Central Branch YMCA members are from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. on Saturdays.

Further information may be obtained by calling the "Y" at 224-1131 any day from 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

sometimes join in offering freshman groups free help in specific courses.

AND EVERY effort — increasingly successful — is made to reduce the size of individual classes.

Surprising, Isn't It, What Some Teenagers Can Do

Classroom assignments given today's smart young teenagers can sometimes lead to surprising results.

Take the case of Cal Lewin, 14, and Chris Hardman, 15, both of whom attend Sherman Oaks High School in California.

THEY WERE assigned to a special report on some phase of American colonial life. Normally, such reports are done by pupils in the form of a composition.

Frequently the youngsters will find publications from which they can clip illustrations to dramatize their reports. There also have been instances of students making still pictures to illustrate their papers.

Cal and Chris, who had selected "Witches: — The Great Puritan Injustice" as the phase of history on which they would make their report, decided to go considerably further.

Colleges Act To Keep Students From Being 'Lost In The Crowd'

Under pressure of an incredible growth in college and university enrollments, educators are acting with unique resourcesfulness to make sure the individual student "doesn't get lost in the crowd."

Some notion of this problem of "bigness" is visible to the casual observer who has seen and continues to see the expansion of the physical plants on numberless campuses. But a clearer view of the problem of "bigness" may be had from a few figures.

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS made way for more than 3,700,000 students last fall. That was 270 percent more than in 1950. Private institutions enrolled 1,900,000 representing a 90 percent increase during the same period. Total enrollment ran more than 5,570,000 in 1965.

Although the U.S. Office of Education anticipates a fractional decline in the number of freshmen this year because of the waning effects of the big baby-boom years, educators think differently. With a greater percentage of today's high school graduates qualifying and clamoring for admission and with some decline in the college drop-out rate, they expect the 1966 fall enrollment to go considerably above 6,000,000.

That's a whale of a lot of students, who require much more than a seat in a lecture room, who need closest possible personal association with their teachers and also the stimulating comradeship of like-minded students, for a truly rewarding college career.

AND THUS it is that many college and universities are utilizing their already vast facilities and buildings and planning their new ones with the idea of dividing the huge masses into smaller, more intimately and personally functioning groups.

The direction goes toward resident halls incorporating study and class rooms often equipped with the "teacher saving," modern learning devices and sometimes, in addition, with quarters in which some members of the faculty may live so they may be readily accessible. Students whose academic interests are similar are assigned to these residence buildings. "Bull" sessions of evenings in such an atmosphere tend to amplify and accelerate education and also relationships with fellow students.

This type of residence hall is frequently referred to as a "living-learning" hall, ardently recommended by students who have experienced one.

THIS, IN A sense, is a reversion to the old classic "college" tradition, but with all the benefits of a big university in addition.

Other versions of the trend have brought the "campuses within the campus" developments, which are groups of residence buildings arranged around a classroom building with offices for teachers and labs and libraries.

AN EARLIER phase of the continuing assault on "bigness" was the development of branch campuses by huge state universities. Yet the branches also are growing in individual "bigness." They too are now moving toward "learning-living" buildings and "campuses within campuses."

Many of the public colleges and universities begin their efforts at keeping the individual student from "getting lost in the crowd," before their freshmen reach the campus. Faculty members go to high schools, or bring high school students to the campus before they enter, for orientation.

Most also continue orientation through the first year in many different ways designed to keep the student from getting "lost in the crowd."

THERE ARE informal welcoming parties for freshmen in which the president may be a participant; extensive counseling services involving scores of faculty members; "big brother" programs furnishing new-students with experienced undergraduates as "old friends;" private cost-free tutoring; arrangements for students of a foreign language, for example to lunch or dine together and talk the language they are learning.

Penney Stores Issue Catalog For Fall

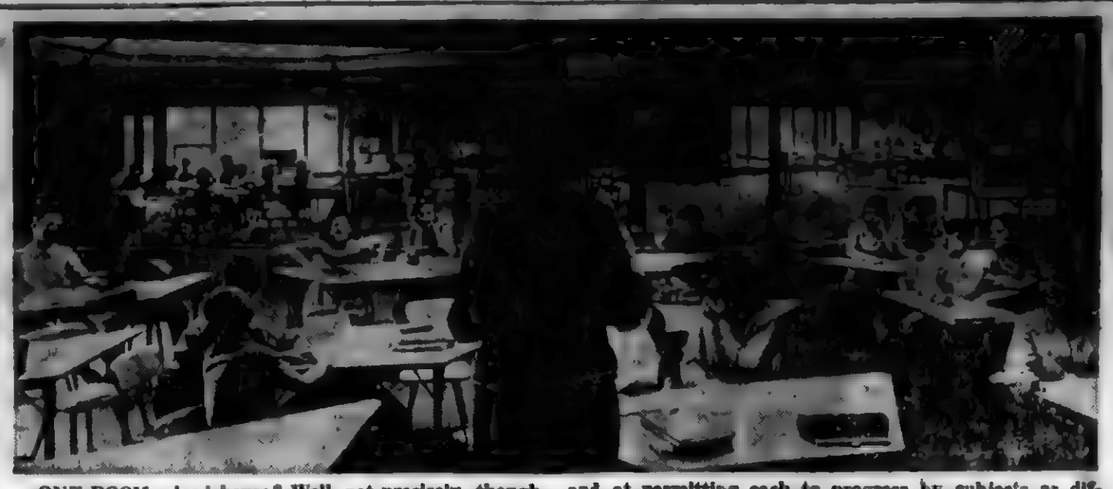
J. C. Penney Company's fall and winter 1966 catalog now being distributed has a strong "modern flavor," thanks to the collections of the company's four young international designers.

THE OPENING 31 pages of the 1,096-page book feature designs by John Michael and Mary Quant, both of London, and Ariel and Victoire of Paris.

In his first collection exclusively for Penney's, Mr. Michael brings the Young London Look to the U.S. One of England's top men's wear designers, Mr. Michael operates 17 shops in London which are considered fashion pacesetters.

MISS QUANT, who with Penney's, first brought the Chelsea Look to this country, continues to set the pace for the youth movement in fashion.

Her ninth collection for Penney's features the practicality of corduroy; the appeal of red as a pace-setting color, and the addition of gold as a contrast in imaginative new prints. A special heather plaid group with skirts, skimmers, straight leg pants and low-cut jumpers offers a number of coordinating possibilities.



IN THE hard goods area, the automotive section features Penney's unique "Triple-Guard" passenger tire guarantee providing for free replacement during the first half of the tire's stated guarantee period if it fails due to defects in materials and workmanship or road hazards.

Teachers Traveling Farther To Learn

There are teachers of the travel-is-broadening persuasion. This year, for example, some 1,600 teachers will take the tours sponsored by the Educational Travel Division of the National Education Association.

Where do they go? Literally everywhere — south of the border to Latin America, cruising to the Caribbean, touring Europe on a bus, "down under" to Australia and New Zealand, to Africa, and even behind the Iron Curtain to the Soviet Union and its satellites.

These teacher-travel buffs are convinced that with first-hand knowledge of a country or a continent, they can make it come alive for students in their classrooms.

ONE ROOM school house? Well, not precisely, though the above is a "wall-less" schoolhouse designed to accommodate the learning areas to modern teaching techniques which aim at more personal attention per pupil and at permitting each to progress by subjects as differentiated from grades. The above — an overall view of Granada Elementary School serving Belvedere — Tiburon, Calif.

Today's Learning Methods Transforming Schoolhouses

The revolution in American education is tranforming the schoolhouse.

The new patterns of education, like team teaching, and the new technology of teaching, like educational television, demand a new kind of educational space.

The traditional classroom, arranged in an egg-crate pattern of 30-pupil boxes, is giving way to spaces for large lectures, for seminars, and independent study.

Rooms of all sizes are designed to accommodate the latest in audio-visual and electronic teaching and learning devices.

And, because changes in educational patterns are expected to continue and accelerate, the walls within the schools can be taken down and rearranged easily and economically.

In some cases, interior walls have disappeared, transforming four or five classrooms into one open space for 100 to 150 pupils and their teachers.

These new patterns in the design of schools and, for that matter, of colleges, have been stimulated in part by the efforts of Educational Facilities Laboratories (EFL).

EFL was founded by the Ford Foundation in 1958 to help American schools and universities with their physical problems — the design of buildings and equipment to meet growing enrollments and changing educational patterns.

Many of EFL's findings are available to educators, architects, school and college boards, and to citizens interested in their schools. A list of EFL's publications, all available free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Educational Facilities Laboratories, 477 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10022.

And a free loan of EFL's 28-minute color film, To Build A Schoolhouse, narrated by Chet Huntley, may be arranged by writing EFL, c/o Association Films, 347 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10017.

Education Proves Vital Today

Is there any doubt in anyone's mind anymore that it pays to be educated — that the better one is educated the more one will earn?

Is there any doubt that, although education once may have been looked upon only as a consumer expenditure, it should now be viewed as an investment in "human capital"?

IF THERE IS, confirmation is to be found in a study prepared by Charles S. Benson, associate professor of education at the University of California, for three associations of educators and recently reported upon in Education News.

Perhaps the over-all most significant aspect of the study in this: — 21 percent of the growth of the nation's economy between 1929 and 1957 can be attributed to the "investment in human capital."

Another is the conclusion that 23 percent of the annual growth of Gross National Product is due to education's influence on improvement in the quality of labor productivity.

HOW MUCH ALL of this "value of education to the nation" has accelerated over the years has not been accurately determined. However, the need of business and industry for better educated individuals would tend to prove that the acceleration has been great.

The study is appropriately entitled "Education is Good Business."

It presents figures that show, for the period studied, average lifetime incomes of individuals multiplies substantially the more they are educated.

For those who completed only eight years of elementary schooling, the figure was $184,000.

For those who graduated from high school, the figure went up to $247,000.

For college graduates, average lifetime earnings were estimated at $348,000.

PROFESSOR BENSON observed that though citizens pay taxes in substantial amount for support of education, "if we paid lower school taxes, our tax rates for other governmental services might go up."

Inferior schools, he contends, turn out individuals prone to unemployment which necessitates large public expenditures on their behalf.

Active, attrative fashions help girls going back to school to lead their busy lives in comfort and style. Calico prints brighten Western-style dress, left, and sandwich-board jumper with separate shift. In Lowenstein fabrics; by Kate Greenaway.

Durable Press Can Lighten Neatness Problem For Mom

"Get rid of that iron."

This is an exhortation Mother has heard for years, with some skepticism, but with considerable gratitude as "easy care" developments have brought her, at the least, less ironing and fewer touch-ups.

But now Mother, as "keeper of the wardrobe" for active youngsters, has rising hopes of ready effortless upkeep for back-to-school clothing, plus a welcome expectation of an equally effortless neatness on the part of the children.

IT ALL COMES about as a result of "durable press" processes designed to keep out wrinkles — and keep in pleats, creases, shape.

Best indication that durable press is making "no ironing" an unshakable reality is seen in its rapid growth. First introduced in men's slacks in 1964, durable press enters the '66 school season with wide availability — in garments for men, women and children, in fresh-idea fashions as well as wardrobe basics, in fabrics from denims and twills to corduroys and batistes.

Present evidence is that modern laundry equipment achieves best results with durable press — automatic washing at warm or medium temperatures, automatic "tumble" drying.

With older laundry equipment or hand washing, special care may be needed.

DURABLE PRESS APPAREL is available in many price ranges. Additional wardrobe savings can result since, with care easier, a child may need fewer garments.

In the production of durable press garments, the aim is quality construction, since shape is "built in" for life.

Hang tags on durable press garments provide information about best care, washing-drying methods. Mothers shopping for back to school clothes should have no hesitancy in asking questions of store sales personnel.

SPACIOUS WORK AREA FOR TODAY'S busy student, planned around flat-surfaced desk, is a must. Overhead shelf is ideal for storing reference books, favorite reading. Bulletin board colorfully eliminates clutter. Proper lighting is achieved by fluorescent tube, shelf-mounted no more than 12 inches from desk front. From General Electric.

Home Study Area Is A Must For Student

Two year olds learning to read. Three and four year olds going to nursery school. Grade schoolers, in the very early grades, beginning their preparation for college. High schoolers getting an early taste of higher education by taking college courses. And over all, surging college enrollments.

It's all part of the "information explosion," and that, in turn, stems from the almost breathtaking changes and advances in the educational process during recent years — plus the incontrovertible fact that the values and rewards of a college education, in terms of both personal satisfaction and dollars and cents income, are growing ever greater.

How To Help?

As society's interest in education increases, so does parental concern, for the full realization demands support at home as well as at school.

How to help? The most practical answer is to provide good study facilities in the home, where the student may tackle the growing volume of homework. A well-planned, well-equipped study center that provides quiet and privacy is the ideal.

But where to put the study center? The space seems lacking in many homes.

The problem is getting a good deal of attention from authorities in the building field. They forsee the inclusion of learning centers in many new homes.

"With the accelerated development of teaching aids, many of which are now available to the public, homes of the future will probably include specially designed learning rooms," predicts Richard L. Bullock, editor of Practical Builder.

"They will feature — and provide a place for — tape recorders, slide projectors, language records, and even library and laboratory resources."

Look For Space

But what to do until the home of the future becomes a reality? Take a new look at available space, advises Mr. Bullock.

If there is only one school-age child in the family, a study area in his bedroom may be the answer. For two or more school-age youngsters, however, a separate study room is preferable.

Is a remodeling project possible? Look for study space in the attic or basement of the older home, in the utility room or unfinished attic of a newer home.

If remodeling is not in the picture, an extra bedroom might be converted into a study area.

When a separate study room just cannot be provided, there still are solutions. Does the home have a family room? Equip one part of it as a study area, and set a specific time when the room may be used for study only.

When two children share one bedroom, and space elsewhere is at a premium, aim for study-hour privacy by rearranging the bedroom to create a separate study area for each child.

Smith, Gregory Pick Up Fourth CMS Features

Close to 3000 fans were on hand Sunday night at the Columbus Motor Speedway when Columbus' Carl Smith maneuvered into the lead on the 11th-lap of the 25-lap late-model feature and then did a spectacular job of driving to notch his fourth headliner of the year on the South Side oval.

Less than a quarttr-lap separated the first six cars.

WHILE Don Gregory couldn't catch Smith in the late-model feature, he was able to pass Carl Poole on the 18th-lap of the 20-lap sportsman main-event to get his fourth win of the season in that division.

Neal Sceva and George Glick shared top honors in the two late-model heats and Gene Taylor of Huntington, W. Va., was the victor in a short two-lap Australian Pursuit.

This coming Sunday another eight-event program of late-model and sportsman races is on tap with two features and $1500 in guaranteed prize money.

SUNDAY, Sept. 4, the Williams-rd raceway will be the scene of the Labor Day Championship races for both divisions.

The program (will guartee $2500 in purses) will be highlighted with a 35-lap late-model championship feature and a 25-lap sportsmanship main-event.

Time trials, each Sunday, begin at 7 p.m. and the first race of the night is set for 8 o'clock.

Blackhawks To 'Break (Hockey) Ice' Oct. 12

sporting find — the Columbus Checkers — will make its hometown debut against the parent Chicago Blackhawks Wednesday, Oct. 12, (8 p.m.) at the Fairgrounds Coliseum rink.

The perennial NHL powerhouse will arrive with its full squad, including left winger Bobby Hull, recognized as the game's number one player.

HULL BROKE two all-time NHL marks last season —most goals (54) and total points (97). He is the only player to score 300 points in less than 10 seasons and leads all active players in hat tricks (three goals in one game) with 17.

The Columbus Hockey Club has announced that season ticket holders will get first option to purchase their regular seats for the exhibition match, a highlight of the local Columbus Day, USA celebration on the 12th.

Season tickets are available by contacting the Checker office (88 E. Broad-st) or by calling 228-4321, or at the Central Ticket Office, 37 N. High-st.

AFTER SEASON ticket holders have had their opportunity to buy, tickets for the hockey game — first ever in Columbus — will go on sale to the general public.

Checker season ticket sales currently stand at 250, the first season goal set at 1500.

Variety Appeals In Apparel For 'Learning Generation'

The new school clothes now available for grammar-graders offer the "learning generation" practical fashions in variety.

Tried-and-true favorites — jumpers, sweaters and skirts for girls; skirts, slacks and jackets for boys; corduroys and plaids for everybody — are scheduled for a return appearance, but styling is less classic, more lively.

NEAT-AND-convenient durable press fashions take the credit for part of this. For instance, now that boys need fewer basic slacks, thanks to easier care, it's financially practical to buy a few special fashions with a "different look." Same holds true of girls' fashions, of course.

The Mod look, the Western look and the fashions favored by the older campus crowd make their impact felt in grade school girls' apparel. From calico prints to fringe and furry pile, fabrics are fun but sensible, too.

Darnells Repeats As Whitehall Champs

Darnells completed its "cinderella" finish in the Whitehall Adult Men's softball tourney Sunday, gainings its second straight city championship with a big 11-8 decision over loop winner WBBA Coaches.

Darnells' big inning was the fourth when the repeat city kings exploded for eight big tallies to wipe out a 5-0 the frame innocently enough Coaches' lead.

BON DORSETT opened by drawing a walk but that was only the beginning as Bill Liston, Dick Petty, Bill Darnell, Emory Mahaney, Dale Runck, Joe Gilmore, Kaye McDonald and Kurt Pollack all hit safely in the big inning.

Doubles by McDonald and Pollack proved to be the biggest blows of the frame.

Top hitters for WBBA were Tom Burton (triple), Phil Dillon, Chuck Nonmaker and Chet Sharp while center fielder Roger Day turned in the top defensive effort for the losers.

JOHN BISHOP, chairman of Whitehall's Recreation Board, awarded trophies to the city champs and also presented the runnerup trophy to the Coaches.

Should Darnells win the city crown again next summer for their third straight, they would permanently retain the cup.

Recreation Director John Corte lauded all teams and players in the Men's Softball League this summer for their fine sportsmanship.

There's Good News To Tell On Dropouts

While the school dropouts continue to be a major problem because of the high rate of their unemployment and crime, there are other aspects of the over-all picture that are rarely emphasized.

So says Ben J. Wattenberg, author of a three year study of census figures titled "This U.S.A." done with the collaboration of Richard M. Scammon, former U.S. Census Director.

ON THE BRIGHT side, he says in the book published by Doubleday & Co. Inc.:

"The dropout rate is being reduced dramatically. In 1910, 17 percent of American youth age 25-29 had graduated from high school; in 1950, it was 53 percent; in 1960, 61 percent and in 1964 it had jumped to 69 percent."

But growing prevention of dropouts, he writes, has created another problem which he calls the "drop-in" problem. This one involves the millions of students who are persuaded to stay in school but who nevertheless fail to learn.

MR. WATTENBERG graphically protrays the significance of education in a paragraph from which the following is condensed.

"A democracy of eighth grade graduates could man a cavalry troop or even an infantry regiment, but it could not put an armored division in the field . . . could mine coal and cut lumber but could not provide the manpower for the 20th century system of banking and insurance. It could produce longshoremen but where would it find computer programmers?"

The Bexley Junior All-Star softball team trounced the summer champion Montrose team, 12-3.

The All-Star team's 17-hit attack was paced by shortstop Mike Gibson as he pounded out a triple, three doubles and a single in his three trips to the plate.

RIGHT FIELDER Jeff Shaw (pair of doubles and a pair of singles) and second baseman Biff Farley (pair of singles) were Stars' only other players to collect more than one hit.

UNDER 30

THE PUSSYCATS jumped off to an early lead and went on to defeat Williamson Furniture, 9-2, winning the Bexley Fast-Pitch Under 30 League championship trophy.

The second round winner Pussycats banged out five runs in the first inning and added two more in both the second and third innings to account for their sum total.

Sig Munster led the Pussycats' attack with a home run and a single while Stan Brown and Dick Goldstein collected a pair of singles each.

See your proprietor for information on AMF's go-go Bowling Sweepstakes. There are 2812 chances to win.

Local fembowlers in the Indianapolis PWBA were Loretta Linhart, Mary Little and June Kristof.

TO AID retarded children, deposit rags and used clothing in the green-roofed white sheds in parking lots of bowling lanes.

Why not make this "Take Your Boss Bowling Week?" If he's a bit grouchy from overwork (naturally) bowling is the perfect relaxation and a way to get rid of nervous energy.

Columbus ranked 273rd in contributions to BVL in 1965-66, the bowlers' charity for hospitalized veterans —only $141.00. In contrast, Lima, O., donated $2,281.69 and even Chillicothe gave $497.50. Springfield gave $251.00. Are we any less mindful of our veterans?

THE NEW bowling season is beginning and a rerun of basics will help you start the season right. Thus weekly we'll review methods which can add pins.

Today most bowling balls are made of either hard rubber or plastic. After drilling, a ball shall not weigh more than 16 pounds. Balls over 10 pounds aret permitted top and bottom balance variance of three ounces, and side to side or front to back variance of one ounce.

For balls under 10 pounds, the imbalance may not exceed ¾ ounce on any comparison. Greater imbalance not only will be illegal but jeopardize consistent scoring.

START THE reason right by having your ball weighed and tested for balance.

Etiquette demands that you do not use another player's ball without permission. Thus if you do not own your own ball, talk to the counterman and he will help you choose a suitable house ball and reserve it for your use in the league.

Two splits most encountered are the 7-10 (Bed Posts) and the 4-6-7-10 (Big Four) caused by the ball hitting the head pin directly on the nose instead of the 1-3 pocket.

THESE ARE the most difficult splits to convert. So solve this split problem by changing tarket, You can throw either a straight, hook or curve — but aim to that 1-3 site.

When you go to your league for the first time you will pay a sum which is a one-time cost. This will pay for your membership card. It will be needed when you participate in tournaments (and we hope you do).

Times A Changin' In Bexley Schools

By VICKI HOY

Seven rooms plus the principal's office in Montrose Elementary are carpeted for this fall in four colors. The carpet is on trial.

The building is so old that the floors cannot be sanded anymore. The wood floors must either be replaced or tile or carpet put in.

"Carpet is the cheapest way in the long run, I think," said Dr. E. D. Jarvis. "It is just as easy to keep clean, although it gets dirty very fast!"

There will be some new furniture in Montrose and in the high school as part of a three-year plan to replace all the furniture in all the schools.

There are 18 new staff members and for "the first time all the new people are experienced," said Dr. Jarvis.

There will be a full time psychologist, Mrs. James Harris, in the Bexley school system this year.

An early admissions for kindergarten is in effect this year. Those children whose birthdays are between Oct. 31 and Dec. 31, and whose parents want to get the children in school early can let them take entrance tests.

The children in kindergarten through third grade will continue as last year, to be "non-graded." This means that the children have no required time from which to move from grade to grade. It does not mean that they will not receive grades.

"It used to be that each child was expected to grow mentally at the same rate for nine months, then stop for three months' summer vacation and so on," Dr. Jervis said.

"This outmoded idea," he continued, "has been replaced by the theory that each child should have the opportunity to progress at his own speed."

The new theory is that children can progress at will. If they have the ability to complete one grade in three months then they can be advanced to another grade level.

"It will take three or four years before any reliable statistics can be compiled on the success of the non-graded primary," he said.

Of course even if the child passes standardized tests and the teacher believes the pupil is ready to be advanced early, the parents make the final decision.

Reynoldsburg Is Recruiting Adults For Night School

Reynoldsburg High School is recruiting adults to fill the night education classes which will begin the first of October.

Reynoldsburg High School principal, Joe Endry, said due to a lack of response previously there was some hesitation whether the classes would resume this fall or not.

"We'll teach anything as long as we have 10 people signed up for the course," he said. "At the moment we haven't any applicants."

Courses offered in the past were home economics, art, foreign languages, typing, shorthand and physical fitness.

"The most responsive classes were the business and physical fitness," said Endry.

He also explained that Reynoldsburg offers no adult education courses such as Whitehall or the City of Columbus where people may fulfill hours toward a diploma.

"There just isn't that need here," said Endry. "Most of the people have high school diplomas if not college degrees. We are offering mainly self improvement courses."

The classes will be offered two nights a week for 12 weeks for a fee of $8. Anyone wishing information should call Reynoldsburg High School at 866-6397.

Vision Can Be Student Handicap

Parents concerned over Johnny's inability to read may be startled to learn that in many cases his vision is the problem.

Studies have revealed that about one out of every four children of school age has some kind of vision problem, according to the American Optometric Association.

To assist parents and teachers in detecting signs of possible vision problems, the association lists a few symptions:

If a child frequently trips or falls over objects.

Poor eye-hand coordination for his age.

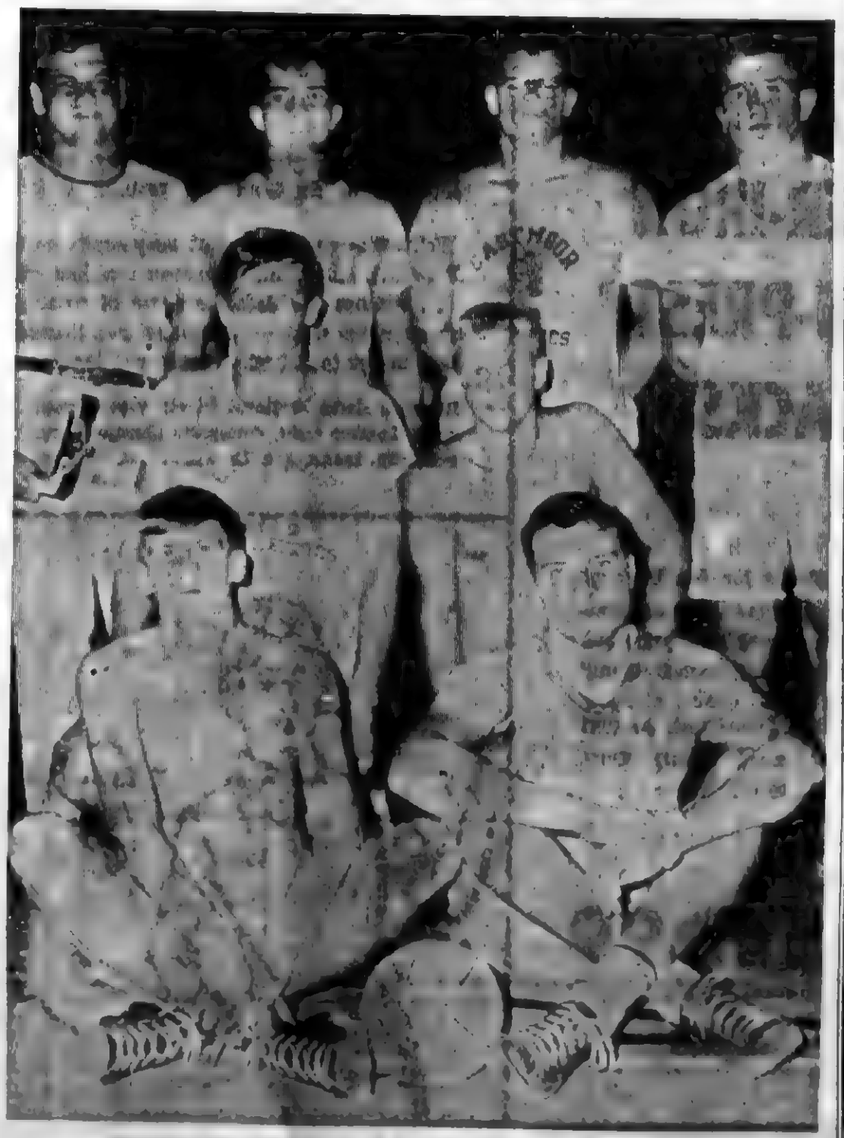
Short attention span, unable to concentrate.

Squinting or scowling while looking at distant objects.

Tilting of head noticeably to one side or tense posture when looking at objects.

Frequent blinking.

Tendency to rub eyes.



Complaints fo nauses, dizziness or headaches after visual concentration.

If a child continues to display one of these symptoms, should have his vision professionally examined. In fact, many authorities advise parents to have every child's vision professionally examined before school entrance and at least once a year thereafter.

Early detection and prevention of children's vision problems is important, to help them in learning now, and to protect their priceless eyesight.

Reading problems may come from eyesight problems. An annual professional check of the school child's vision is recommended by the American Opeometric Association.

MAVERICK

With Muddy Shoes

By RICHARD L. PAUGH

Just 130 years ago, young Sam Colt gathered together enough backers to start manufacturing the first successful repeating firearm.

At the age of 22, he found he could not rid himself of the thought of revolving chambers or barrels in front of the firing pin. The idea had plagued him for ten years.

WITH $230,000 borrowed, he made his first version of a handgun in Patterson, N.J. It wasn't until 1873 that his near perfect Peacemaker was born — 11 years after Sam's death.

The Peacemaker or more accurately the single-action Army revolver was made continuously until 1940. During those years, over 350,000 were made in 36 known calibers.

PAUGH

It was and is the most historically interesting gun of all times. It is a gun that the owners of the Colt factory can't kill. After 15 years of obsolescence, public demand caused it to be revived in 1955.

It remains one of Colt's best sellers today.

DAVID M. BROWN of Albuquerque, N.M., decided to collect Colt single actions back in 1943, after they had ceased to be manufactured. His collection started out with five weapons.

Today, he has all 36 calibers known to have been made, in his carefully culled aggregation of 62 guns. It took him 22 years to complete the task but he is the first man to have one of each of the 36 calibers.

His story is one of patience and the will to succeed. He has written the tale of his Colts into a book. It is so entrancing that I couldn't put it down, once I started it.

HE HAS confirmed the original owner and shipping dates of each gun by letter to Colt's. He tells how many of each caliber was made and when.

He reveals that there were 14 different changes in the SAA frame as it evolved down through the years and that there were three different ejector systems and three different types of barrel markings.

This might sound uninteresting to the average man on the street but woven throughout his book can be found a large helping of the history of our world.

FOR INSTANCE, on June 18, 1940, 200 Colt SAA revolvers were sold to the British Purchasing Commission for shipment to England.

The British found themselves holding a tiger (by the name of Hitler) by the tail and because of their strict firearms laws, didn't have enough sidearms to supply their officers.

Today, right here in Ohio, it's difficult to find the Colt you want, the demand has become so great.

NOT ONLY do householders want protection for their life and loved ones but a great many are being shipped individually to servicemen in Viet Nam where the presence of a familiar sidearm has brought many an American fighting man through battle.

David M. Brown's '36 calibers of the Colt is more than a list of guns in his collection. It's a never-before story of how this nation became self-sufficient.

You can drop him a line at 845 Louisiana-av, Albuquerque, N.M. (87108).

Football Previews 'Kickoff' Next Week

Dress rehearsals — gridiron-style — will be tried on the sports pages of your Spectator newspaper beginning next week.

Spectator sports writers Jack Wittenmeier and Bob Whitman will begin 1966 previews of your neighborhood high school football elevens, providing facts and figures and generally supplying their reports on how your favorite squad stacks up for its big opener —just 16 days from today.

WITTENMEIER and Whitman will take a look at some 40 area high schools during Spectator editions of Aug. 31 and Sept. 7, bringing you up to date on what's ahead for '66.

Beginning in that Sept. 7 edition, the "Fearless Predictor"—hated and harassed member of The Spectator Sports Department — returns for another ten weeks of gridiron forecasting. Expanded picture coverage of your high school favorites in action each Friday evening is another Spectator forecast for 1966 with five staff photographers covering area grid games each week.

YOU'LL FIND it all, right here in The Spectato sports pages — beginning next week with the first half of "Kickoff, 1966!"

SE Schools Ready To Post 'SRO' Sign

Southeast school administrators are anticipating more than a five percent jump in enrollment when schools open Tuesday morning.

Officials at Canal Winchester, Teays Valley, Hamilton and Madison believe their predictions are at least educated guesses but until noses are actually counted (around the second week of school to include those who miss the buses or are still vacationing on the opening day) the accuracy of their anticipated student population of 10,555 versus the 9,979 last October cannot be verified.

OF THE 435 certified personnel ready to take their places in the classroom, 120 will be new to the districts. Although at first glance this appears to be the unusually large turnover of almost 30 percent, new teaching positions created this year account for about 20 percent of the new faces. This brings the turn-over rate closer to normal rates.

Although Canal Winchester and Teays Valley are almost free from the problem of busing children to private schools, Groveport and Hamilton districts are trying to solve the problem of almost 400 parochial children which the Fair Bus Bill requires be taken to parochial schools of their choice.

GENERALLY, THOUGH the situation varies from district to district, classrooms are expected to be crowded with some elementary teachers required to teach as many as 40 primary students.

Building programs completed late this summer have alleviated the over-crowding in some areas.

A rundown of individual districts follows:

Madison

THE CRYSTAL ball of Supt. Phillip K. Williams, which has enabled him to predict enrollment with amazing accuracy in the past indicates that 3,375 youngsters and teenagers will show up within a few days after opening.

This is almost 300 more than the 3,375 counted in October, 1965 census.

Although five new rooms are now available at Asbury, all grades except the sixth will remain on half-day session. In spite of the opening of the junior high school with 17 rooms, the early take-up and dismissal times for the senior high students and the later times for junior high students will be continued. This is necessary to allow multiple bus routing.

SEVEN NEW teachers have been employed bringing the classroom teacher roster to 137. Twenty-nine teachers were replaced, setting the actual turnover rate at 22 percent.

Williams describes the bus situation as "tight" with 135 children making application for transportation to private schools. One new bus is on hand and four are on order, three of which are regarded as replacement equipment.

Hamilton Local

ENROLLMENT AT Hamilton, the largest district in the Southeast, is expected to jump from 3,596 to 3,800, according to Supt. John Savel.

Although a four-room kindergarten complex at Central recently completed has relieved the stress in that area and a 10-room addition serves a like function at the high school level, Savel sees the junior high and elementaries badly overcrowded.

"And the sad part," he commented, "is the problem will be more acute next year, and even more so the following year."

HE ADDED that at South he expects classrooms with as many as 40 pupils.

The Hamilton transportation problem to private schools is as knotty as any in the area. A call last Friday from Lockbourne AFB informed Savel that 80 children in addition to the 130 he had already routed were requesting bus service.

The schools which Hamilton will serve include St. Mary, Bishop Hartley, Wehrle Memorial, St. Ladislas, Holy Family, St. Thomas, St. Leo and the Columbus Academy.

SAVEL POINTED out that getting contract buses only until the district's own buses that are on order arrive is quite difficult as contract drivers are interested in nine-month contracts.

Faculty turn - over at Hamilton is the highest in the Southeast. Of the 154 classroom teachers, 58 are new to the district. Even considering that 17 of these are filling newly-created positions, the rate is figured at almost 30 percent.

Canal Winchester

Carl Miller, Canal Winchester superintendent, describes his prediction of 44 new pupils (bringing enrollment to 1,080) as "extremely conservative."

AT THE BEST, he sees 20 of the 26 elementary section (K through 8) with more than 30 pupils. According to Miller, this is particularly disturbing at the first and second grade level where he would like to see less than 25 students assigned to a room.

Canal Winchester is relieved from the problem of private school busing by the clause that limits such transportation to schools no more than 30 minutes driving time. (Miller does not believe his buses can safely make it to Columbus during heavy traffic hours in 30 minutes).

With the teacher roster stable at 46, the district employed eight new teachers.

KINDERGARTEN classes will not take up until Monday, Sept. 12.

Teays Valley

At least 38 new students are anticipated by Superintendent Benis Lutz of Teays Valley where an actual census is made difficult until actual registration by the large number of trailer homes in the area.

Even with enrollment of 2,300 or more, Superintendent Benis Lutz expects very few classrooms to have over 30 students. (The Ashville area, with no major subdivisions developed, has not experienced the extremely rapid growth that has swamped other Southeast schools. The new consolidated high school completed four years ago this fall has so far proved adequate).

FAIR BUSING has been handled with contracts with Hamilton and South-Western

12 Pick-Ups Planned

Groveport Junior High School students who formerly walked to school will be provided bus transportation to the new building on Hamilton-rd. Pick-up points along Main-st include its intersections with Tallman, Kessler, Madison, Lesleh, W. Church, Walnut, the High School Parking lot and Delane. The bus will also stop at College and Blacklick, Front and Blacklick, and Front and Elm Students are asked to be at the corner nearest their home between 9 and 9:15 a.m.

Bites The Dust

Mrs. Charles Morrison, wife of Ashville's mayor, has retired from a softball pitching career. In a recent attempt to cover home plate she fell over a rolling bat and although no bones were broken she is on crutches and thinks spectator sports are just about her speed for a while.

They Are Tuning Up

Persons "two to toothless" are invited to the shindig slated to begin at 7:30 p.m. this Wednesday, Aug. 31 at the Obetz Park in McFadden acres. Malcolm Coogan's Hillbilly band will play for country music fans and the Blue Marauders will be on hand for those with a yen for Rock 'n Roll. Hosts for the occasion when the pop will be on the house are Judge Richard Metcalf, Chalmers P. Wylie and County Commissioner Robert Southwick.

Miller Moves Up

Franklin Miller of Groveport has been elected president of the Ohio Vocational Agriculture Teachers' Association and with other officers of the professional society will serve as Ohio's delegates at the national convention in Denver, Col., Dec. 3-8. Miller, vo-ag instructor at Groveport Madison, is currently completing plans for the OVA convention to be held in Columbus Friday and Saturday, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

ISN'T IT A DANDY?

HALF THE FUN in catching a big one is having someone to show it off to, and the young man from St. Vincent's Orphanage found an appreciative audience after his fishing feat Saturday. He was one of the 45 youngsters who were the guests of the Southeastern Conservation Club at the annual picnic at the clubhouse and lake off Hart-rd. Sisters from the home and Fr. Raymond Goode were also among those entertained as Bill Stewart, 1108 Harrisburg-pk and Eddie Feil, 337 Welch-av, president and picnic chairman respectively played host.

PARENTAL CONTRACTS SOUGHT

City Buses Routed

Phil Williams, Madison superintendent, unfolded to his school board his blueprint this week to transport children to private schools.

It's complicated as there are about 135 children and six schools involved and as many opening and closing times.

It appears a couple of buses can handle the 101 youngsters going to St. Mary Elementary, the 18 to Wehrle and the 10 to Bishop Hartley.

The question of the handful going to St. Mary High School much earlier than the St. Mary Elementary students has been solved by the use of the district's utility wagon, but the two students going to St. Charles and the one to Columbus Academy present a real problem.

Williams is applying to the state this week to enter into "parental contracts." (Scioto Darby and Jefferson Districts have negotiated such deals.)

By this plan, parents will transport their children with reimbursement on a mileage basis. If the state deems the mileage allowance a fair one, and the parents refuse to go into the bus business, the school is still considered to have discharged its obligations.

A contract was awarded to 33 Lawn Service in the amount of $1,029 for the seeding of the grounds of the new Groveport Junior High School and one for the planting (trees and shrubbery) to Slemmons Gardens Inc. for $2,483.

The combined bids were only 39 percent of the highest of the five received. (Segaro's Nursery, Inc. bid the two proposals in at $6,500).

Four new teachers were employed, including Mrs. Bette Dunn for 42 days to substitute for the Groveport vocal teacher who is on leave of absence.

Bill Grabiel Is Named Common Pleas Bailiff

William Grabiel, 1207 Norman-dr, has been chosen as bailiff and court constable by Judge Henry L. Holden of the Common Pleas Court.

Grabiel, a graduate of Hamilton Township High School and son of Ernest Grabiel, Hamilton Township trustee, will serve "at the pleasure of the Court," but with Holden's term having four years to run, it is assumed the 28-year-old insurance agent will be in office at least that long.

Grabiel has been active in public affairs for several years, and was a candidate for nomination as the Democratic candidate for the Ohio Legislature last fall.

His father, who is a practicing attorney, served as referee for Probate Court Judge Cloys P. McClelland for 18 years.

The East Columbus man whose background includes study in the School of Business Administration at Franklin University is married and has two children. His term will begin Sept. 1.

Art Day And Pals Promise 'Pink Treat'

Do you remember Art Day, the winsome Cleopatra with her jewels tucked here and there during the Labor Day parade a few years back?

Or the same Art playing a roly-poly Little Lord Fauntleroy?

Or his masterful portrayal of Snow White and his seven little drawers?

IF YOU LIVE around Canal Winchester, you probably remember them all.

After all, the Cornservatory Players Club of that village have an indefinable aroma unforgettable as any broadway ham.

But this year, Spectator sleuthing has learned the theatrical (to use the word loosely) group is out to attain new heights.

As a responsible home newspaper we won't give their secret away, but here's a hint.

NO SOCIAL event has ever hit the village that will compare to the tableau the Cornservatory members have dreamed up for this year's parade.

Some might compare its pomp with a coronation, but others might say a mere coronation would pale in comparison.

Discretion restrains us from saying anything more except that a lot of staunchly conservative Republicans will have a pinkish tinge come Labor Day.

The first innovation of this year's celebration will be noted when the girls competing for the title of Miss Canal Winchester at 8 p.m. at the High School this Friday make a double appearance.

ACCORDING TO Miss Linda Epps and her co-chairman Mrs. Dominic Cocci, the judges will give the girls the once-over both in bathing suits and evenings gowns.

Judges announced for the beauty contest for the four divisions (six through nine, 10 through 12, 13 through 15 and 16 through 18) include Michael Montaney, Revlon representative from Lazarus; Joseph DeLuca, well-known hairdresser and beauty salon operator; Robert Southwick, county commissioner and Mrs. Dianne Courtright- McCloy, former Miss Ohio and runner up for the title of Miss America.

With a $50 defense Savings bond going to Miss Canal Winchester, there are tiaras, trophies and flowers for big and little queens as well as gifts contributed by local businesses.

THE CROWNING will be done by Kathy Knowlton, Linda Taylor and Janet Hanna, Miss Canal Winchester, Junior Miss Canal Winchester and Little Miss Canal Winchester of 1965.

The impressive roster of judges promised for Monday's float parade include Congressman Sam Devine,

TAKING her Dad's ribbing, good naturedly, that she is a perfect 24-24-24, Susan Ricart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ricart has high hopes as she enters the little Miss Canal Winchester contest. After all, she was first runner up last year—and with measurement's even less impressive than those sported this year.

Shamansky Calls For Legislation For Cities

Robert N. Shamansky, Democratic candidate for Congress from Franklin County's 12th District, charged yesterday that U.S. Rep. Samuel Devine "acts as if Columbus were part of the rural south."

In a speech to the Whitehall Kiwanis Club, Shamansky called for legislation to meet the urban needs of Columbus.

"We are a sprawling metropolis, with large suburbs," Shamansky said. "Yet Devine's voting record indicates that he sides with the southern Dixiecrats as far as legislation for cities is concerned."

Shamansky said that he, "unlike some people," recognizes this fact and plans to go out and get the money needed for our capital improvements.

"He (Devine) has voted against urban transportation, which every big city needs," Shamansky said. "His voting record shows negative ballots on water and air pollution control as well as regional development."

The attorney said that "even the city's intellectual growth has been threatened by a negative vote on virtually all education bills."

In a news release, Shamansky said Devine's "no" vote on the federal Urban Mass Transportation Act "indicates he may still be satisfied with the horse-and-buggy era."

"If Mr. Devine thinks I have overstated my case," Shamansky said, "then I would suggest that he move his office to Columbus and ride to and from work each day in the bumper-to-bumper traffic that is the lot of our downtown office workers."

He said it was possible "to be a Republican and be concerned with metropolitan problems," pointing to Republicans William Ayres of Akron, William Minshall of Cleveland and Mrs. Frances Bolton of Cleveland, all Republicans who voted for the act.

"Does Columbus deserve any less representation than these cities?" Shamansky asked.

Buses—

The others are Mrs. Jessie Cherry of Columbus who will teach Groveport kindergarten; Mrs. Mildred Martin of Reynoldsburg who has been assigned to the Groveport second grade, and Miss Edna Pfaltzgraf (employed on a temporary basis last year) who will take a fourth grade at Brice.

Other business at the special meeting called primarily to get final board okay for bus routes was the approval of admission of nine underage children to kindergarten and one to the first grade and denial of like requests to three kindergarten children and one first grader.

The next meeting of the Madison School Board will be held at 8 p.m. Monday, Sept. 12 at the new junior high building.

Schools—

School Districts for a couple of students living on the fringe of the Teays Valley District, leaving only a few students to be transported to St. Joseph at Circleville.

The 19 percent turn-over in teacher roster is the highest in recent years too, according to Lutz. The 98 teachers employed total one less than those employed last year. (A replacement was not available for the vacancy created by the resignation of the guidance counselor).

State Representative Tom Herbert, Judge Leonard Stern, Judge Richard Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schmidt and Alva Boystel.

Mrs. Paul Beaty and Mrs. William Fagan are chairing an event new to the traditional celebration — a talent show.

DUE TO STAGE on a special platform erected on the football field, the show will begin at 4:30 p.m. Monday afternoon. After the go-go girls, the tap dancers, the folk singers and the Western music is judged, five cash prizes will be awarded with the ranking amateur made $25 richer.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stouffer of Columbus have agreed to judge this event and Fred Clemens, popular toastmaster, will emcee.

In the early evening hours on the blacktop northeast of the school the Teen Canteen will sponsor a dance, featuring the Bracceros with admission 75 cents a person.

OH YES!

We understand that he is quite a formal guy.

American Designers Raise Eyebrows With Showings

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

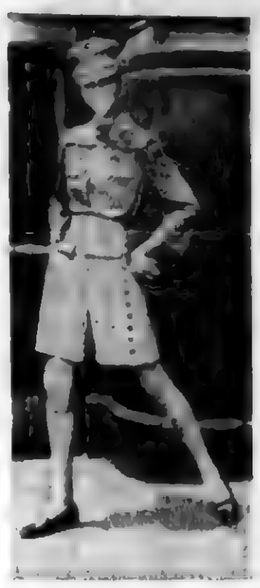
Surprised by today's accompanying photos? Well, fashion editors usually poker-faced, showed varying degrees of controlled reaction when these garments were presented in New York recently during the American Designers showings.

Of course, the ladies of the press have learned to expect the unexpected when it comes to viewing the imaginative creations of our leading artistic fashion designers but the mid-calf skirted suit was quite a surprise after seeing the skirt lengths in most collections about two inches above the knee.

The longer-skirted suit was shown as the grand finale of the Tiffeau & Busch showing and was the brainchild of Jacques Tiffeau, the designer of the collection.

The commentator of the show, Eleanor Lambert, who is the director of the American Designer Series, pointed out to all the members of the Press . . . "Remember if Paris does it, you see it here first." (By now you have heard that Paris did do it.)

Tiffeau (coincidentally?) was born in Paris and is an accepted trend-setter of ladies' fashions. Let's hope his brain-child is slow to develop because when it does our current wardrobes will be obsolete . . . kaput . . . or in French, finis!



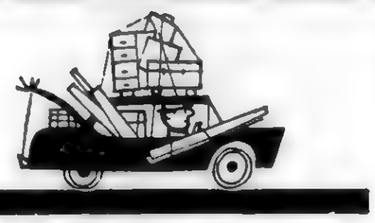
Jacques Tiffeau, at 39, is a well respected designer and he has the awards to prove it. He won the Coty Award in 1960 and a Return Award in 1964 . . . the National Cotton Award in 1962 . . . The International Fashion Award in London in 1964 and the Neiman Marcus Award in 1966.

Another surprising collection that we saw in New York was presented by the Persian Lamb Institute. In addition to the very continental short-pants suit in the photo . . . would you believe a Persian Lamb bikini? Or a red, blue, green and yellow Persian Lamb poncho? Well, they're available.

The members of the Persian Lamb Institute claim the the only way to gambol (you know like a lamb) freely, is in their lively fur . . . and from all indications their fashions covered every occasion. They included free-stride fur dresses worn over body-stockings and panty-hose for street or travel comfort; trim pant's suits for walking, and numerous suits . . . suited to a round-the-clock schedule of appointments. All this, and coats too . . . in blocks, stripes, even free-form Op effects . . . in colors like moss green, magenta, royal blue and even tangerine and yellow.

One last surprise that we saw in New York was an accessory . . . an earring. It's been said that this is the "year of the ear" . . . and it's true. Necklaces and pins, for after-five especially, were bypassed and the sparkling evening fashions were shown only with extravagant earrings. Without a doubt, the most extravagant one shown was a single long strand of brilliants that fell below the bosom!

Do you get the feeling that designers are going to "great lengths" to get our attention???



LEO RITTER'S Surprise: A shorts costume of greige and brown processed dyed lamb. The yoked jacket is cocoa brown and belted matching leather over greige shorts marked by side buttons.

A PROPHECY of tomorrow, the longer skirted suit in grey Shetland wool and brown double faced fabric with ribbed knit blouse and matching gaiters. A look to remember.

WILLIAM S. WHITE: The Assault From Within

WHITE

WASHINGTON — Democratic super-liberals are backing away from their long attack upon President Johnson's foreign policies and are opening a second kind of assault from within, this time on the Administration's domestic urban-aid programs.

The undoubted leader of this new revolt is Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York.

But the rebellion is manifestly ebbing away, in part because every objective test shows the country in no mood to turn tail and in part because the responsible anti-Viet Nam War politicians are finding the involuntary embrace of peaceniks of open Communist taint to be too much to stomach any longer.

Still, the long, hot summer for the President is yet far from over and yet far from cool. The Kennedy forces, whose political base is mainly in the big cities, are developing a novel if determined indictment. This is that there is something penny-pinching and niggardly about a Johnson Administration which is already spending many times more on city problems — schools, Medicare, rent subsidies, urban renewal, mass transit, antipoverty and all the rest of it — than any Administration in history, including that of the late John F. Kennedy.

Two very "in" people of the Kennedy administration, Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach and Robert Weaver, the present Cabinet Secretary for urban matters, are finding that the Robert Kennedy they once knew as a comrade seems to have become a tireless and an unappeasable critic instead.

President Johnson's unexampled largesse to megalopolis is in the deepest sense open to objective criticism — but for being far too large rather than much too small.

The common explanation for this instance of the world turned upside down is that the Robert Kennedy who, as a powerful member of his brother's Cabinet surely did not demand urban schemes of staggering scope, now sees as a Senator a need to differentiate himself sharply from the Johnson Administration in pursuit of Presidential ambitions. It may well be, too, that the years in between have changed his mind as to the gravity of the urban mess.

This is a politics of megalopolis first, second and always that could become bitterly divisive and also could, by overpressing and overdemanding, produce not bread but stones from a predominantly non-magalopolis Congress.

BARRY GOLDWATER: Dissent, Yes. Violence, No!

GOLDWATER

Non-violent protest, a tactic in which violence has always lurked, is no longer worthy of that name. Raw violence, rage and riot are the actual and inevitable truth behind the fable of non-violence. Every citizen has seen evidence aplenty in the past few days and weeks.

The U. S. attorney general, in congressional testimony, gave the most astonishing official excuse for violence when he said that individuals are not to be held responsible for riots — that "disease and despair, joblessness and hopelessness" are the sole agitators responsible. Again, Lyndon Johnson has set the same sort of pace after the Watts riot with his highly conditional condemnation of the violence and his provocative suggestion that the violence was understandable.

Understandable or not, violence is violence, and officials who will not hold individuals responsible for it inevitably encourage it.

Other non-violence, turned to violence, can be seen in the actions of those so-called pacifists who have taken to throwing themselves on roadways and train tracks in order to block supplies intended for Viet Nam.

Pacifists may insist such actions are "passive" and thus non-violent, but they insist it against all common sense. Halting military supplies with a wall of bodies is as much an act of violence, at its heart and in its intent, as would be any other means of halting the vehicles. It endangers life, attempts to deprive men under fire on a foreign field and inevitably provokes and properly receives the counterforce of those whose wholly legal jobs demand that they get the supplies through to those who need them.

One thing that cannot be supported is the claim that these acts fall within the protection of our right to dissent, a right which I support and use. Dissent, yes. Violence, No!

It is time for all those who treasure that right, as I do, to take a closer, far more sober look at the disservice being done to dissent by protest that is merely provocative and non-violence that makes a mockery of its name.

"I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man."—Thomas Jefferson

Robert Burdock, Editor and Publisher — Don R. Bucknam, Advertising Director — R. H. Rogers, Business Manager

Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday, August 31, 1966

Home To Roost

The chickens of austerity are coming home to roost.

The state of Ohio's dwindling level of support to local schools is directly to blame for the current shortage of qualified teachers to staff classrooms this Fall.

Ohio's average salary to teachers last year was a non-competitive $6350. Indiana, which does not have all the wonders of wonderful Ohio, manages an average of $7500.

Tax is a dirty word here.

The state administration is moving to meet the teacher crisis in typical business-oriented fashion. It will simply lower the educational standards required of teachers and fill the posts with those who will accept the sub-standard salaries.

That way the state can hold up its end without increasing its costs. It amounts to cheapening the product but maintaining the price tag.

The product? The children of The Wonderful World of Ohio.

Jammed Solid

Gov. Rhodes' unquenchable thirst for publicity has turned Columbus' East Side into one big parking lot.

What better, the governor thought, than to open a new stretch of freeway the same day the grand and glorious Ohio State Fair opened for business.

So with his usual "damn the torpedoes" gusto, Rhodes hurried the Highway Department and the contractor into opening the freeway months ahead of schedule and weeks before the city of Columbus could adequately prepare for the massive load of traffic dumped on the Livingston-Main-Alum Creek complex.

At 10 a.m. Thursday, Rhodes' wife and granddaughter smiled their best political smiles and snipped the ribbon. Seven hours later, hundreds of cars sat, and sat, and sat in one of the worst traffic jams in the memory of East Siders used to colossal tie-ups.

Rhodes won't be blamed for the jam. The state won't be blamed. Most of the blame will be tossed on the city, which wasn't even officially informed of the freeway opening.

Your move, governor. Maybe you can move in that mess. Nobody else can.

Don't Be A Drop Out

Almost one-third of the 10 million Americans under 25 in the labor force has not completed high school.

It is feared another 900,000 will walk away from their high schools this year. In 10 years the nation can be faced with 32 million adults with thwarted hopes and minimal jobs — if they are employed at any level.

The profile of the school drop out has been drawn — a 16-year-old boy, a sophomore with reasonably high IQ who is failing at least one subject and from a family where school achievement is given little value.

The immediate reason for his leaving school is usually directly connected with trouble at school, trouble at home or trouble with a girl.

Once he becomes a drop out it is known what he faces statistically: a double unemployment rate, lifetime earnings cut in half and manual labor.

Youngsters better listen to their school bell when it rings next week.

It is a matter of common sense as well as dollar and cents.

But community and industrial leaders also have a grim fact to face.

The nation's economy cannot afford 43 percent of its labor force to be without the skills demanded by modern technology.

Keeping these kids in school—whatever it may cost—is an indispensable investment in the future of the U.S.A.

Check, Mate

By The Spectator's
TED BEARDSHEAR

Getting a check cashed in the city has all the intrigue of a James Bond novel.

One never knows if one has the required identification, the required thumb print or the required honest smile for an identifying picture.

BEARDSHEAR

In fact, it's getting almost impossible to cash a check unless the cashier has known you from birth.

One time in Jacksonville, Fla., I was bereft of funds. Having some $600 in a New York bank, I felt sure I could raise enough money to get back to New York.

Wrong again. I had to wire home.

One place in this city wanted so much identification they made me feel badly I didn't carry a photostatic copy of my birth certificate.

Banks, usually a nice place to get a check cashed, are getting tougher all the time. Frequently, they refuse to cash all checks unless the party is a depositor.

Perhaps the apex of ridiculousness was the story of a young housewife of my acquaintance. She went to the supermarket to do the weekly shopping.

At the check out counter she tried to cash a check. The cashier called the manager. The manager asked for a driver's license. She didn't have it.

The manager asked for some credit cards. They were in another purse. The manager, in desperation, asked for anything that would prove her to be the same person who signed the check.

Suddenly the young housewife had an idea. She rifled through her purse until she came up with a round, plastic container.

Inside the container was a written prescription from her doctor. It immediately identified her as herself.

After all, who else would be carrying her birth control pills?

"See Bobby Run. See Lyndon Run. They Are Running To Help Their Fellow Party Members, Of Course. They Seem To Be Running Very Hard"

MARQUIS CHILDS: Capacity For Folly

WASHINGTON — The volleys fired from Capitol Hill across the Potomac at the man in the Pentagon are slightly off target. What is more, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara seems not in the least disturbed as the shot and shell fall around him.

Of all the strange aspects of perhaps the strangest war in America's history, the conflict between McNamara and his Congressional critics ranks high. The conflict in and of itself is more of the same. Civilian secretaries have traditionally been the target for political critics.

CHILDS

But with McNamara determined to hold down costs and his Congressional attackers bent on forcing him to spend more, it is the reversal of the traditional roles that makes this remarkable. Even those who talk loudest about economy have been helping to load the defense budget with a half billion to a billion dollars of unwanted money. The Secretary is, of course, not compelled to spend funds that Congress appropriates above budgeted requests.

While it is an oversimplification, the fundamental difference between McNamara and his Congressional critics is that he believes the Viet Nam conflict can be kept a limited war against the view of those in Congress who want to pull out all the stops. Thus far the President has given unqualified support to his Secretary of Defense, whom he rarely fails to praise in glowing terms.

It is not that McNamara is unaware of the escalating cost of the Viet Nam war. He is engaged in calculating how much of a supplemental appropriation he will have to call on Congress for, and until all the returns are in, he will not give even a general estimate of how many billions will be in this added bill.

Until recently he had been confident that he could put off the grim day until early January. Now there is some doubt as, with the movement of troops up to 350,000 into Viet Nam, the costs mount correspondingly. Congress, called back into session after the Nov. 8 election to vote the additional billions, might also be called on for a tax increase to pay for it.

"As matters stand," McNamara said recently, "our present Selective Service system draws only a minority of eligible young men. This is an inequity. It seems to me we could move toward remedying that inequity by asking every young person in the United States to give two years of service to his country—whether in one of the military services, in the Peace Corps, or in some other volunteer developmental work at home or abroad."

Again and again McNamara has shown that he is a rarity in the Johnson Administration. Above all, this is because of his readiness to supply fresh thinking for old problems even as he tries to hold a tight rein on the wild horses in the Pentagon. Who is man? he asks. And he answers with his own conviction that he is a rational animal with a near infinite capacity for folly.

They Said It

"Americans believe in free speech, so we say. But sometimes honoring that right is another matter . . . Though we say honor a man's right to think what he wants to believe there have been too many occasions recently when fighting, disorder and bloodshed have resulted from citizens speaking their minds . . . Free speech is only possible where we honor the rights of others to speak for a cause with which we disagree, perhaps violently." — Weedville, Pa., News.

Letters To The Editor

Wants Solution

To the Editor:

I suggest, sir, that you have failed to consider carefully both sides of the problem discussed in your "Cat and Mouse" editorial in the Aug. 10 Spectator.

Did you, for example, consider the fact that Western Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors are all located outside the Columbus city limits, but that many of the employes' children attend Columbus Public Schools? If we provide educational opportunities for these youngsters, why should some other school system reap the harvest of property taxes paid by these large industries?

In addition, Columbus has thousands of tax exempt properties which bring in no revenue to keep the schools operating.

Columbus has gotten "the short end of the stick" in a number of like situations, and it hardly seems fair.

Perhaps you would care to investigate further to see what equitable solution can be made.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Charles Lewis
145 W. Kanawha-av

Letters for publication must bear the writer's name and address. The editors, at their discretion, may permit use of initials or pseudonyms if this is requested for a good reason. In general, preference will be given to writers willing to take responsibility for their views. Letters should be kept as short as possible. All letters are subject to editing.

Triple Talk?

To The Editor:

In line with your brand of Charlie McCarthy journalism, the enclosed clipping from a recent editorial page of your illustrious little journal is a good example of talking out of three sides of your mouth at the same time.

The "Meddlers" are those people who take the trouble and have the courage to condemn that with which they do not agree but which you approve. The "Bless 'em Alls" are the same kind of person, willing to get involved, but not stepping on your pet toes.

Further, the late Harry Hopkins set the stage for his and later Democratic administrations — "tax and tax and spend and spend and elect and elect."

If the Federal Government did less of this, Upper Arlington would have the money to provide its citizens with necessary services without slapping on additional taxes on an already overburdened group of home owners.

Inconsistence, thy name is Spectator.

Sincerely,
Carson

Lauds Welfare Coverage

To The Editor:

I want to express my appreciation to The Spectator for the excellent coverage given the United Community Council's appeal for a letter writing campaign to Governor Rhodes regarding welfare benefits.

I know that your front page story on this vital issue has brought it to the attention of many Columbus citizens and that considerable action on their part has been forthcoming as a result.

We will continue to be in touch with you as our Public Welfare Education Committee works to bring information to the community about the need for more adequate public welfare services.

Mrs. Robert Lazarus, Jr.

John Kirwin Honored In San Francisco Meet

John F. Kirwin, executive secretary of the Ohio State Pharmaceutical Association, who resides at 2667 St. Patrick-rd, was among 12 of the nation's association executives who received the Chartered Association Executive (CAE) award of the American Society of Association Executives recently at the Recognition Luncheon of the Society's 47th annual Meeting at San Francisco, Calif.

John F. Kirwin

The CAE Award is special recognition of qualified association executives who have acquired broad backgrounds in all phases of association management. The award is granted for high standards of service and professional responsibility by outstanding achievement and contributions to association management.

AND SO IT GROWS..

"Basis Plants for a Perennial Garden" is a new booklet that'll give you down-to-earth suggestions whether you're a beginning gardener or an old hand for planning a perennial flower garden.

Included is specific information on the care of such basic perennials as daffodils, tulips, peonies, irises, day lilies, phlox and chrysanthemums. Planting dates for some of these are coming up, so you'd better get a copy from your county Extension agent soon. Single copies are free to Ohio residents.

WATERMELONS are ripe when the underside in contact with soil changes from a greenish white to a yellowish green or yellow, say horticulturists. The outside also will change from a shiny to a dull green.

If you prefer using the "thump" method, make your test in the morning since nearly all melons have a dull sound later. In the morning, a dull sound indicates harvest time, while a ringing sounds means hold off picking.

You'll get rejuvenated parsley plants by shearing off the old leaves about an inch above the base of the plant. New growth will be tender.

DON'T CULTIVATE any more than you must to keep weeds down. But do keep the weeds under control. Deep cultivation now is particularly harmful since feeder roots are easily cut or broken off.

Virginia Savoy and Blight Resistant Savoy are two of the spinach varieties recommended for use by Ohio gardeners. If the weather stays mild you can expect to harvest spinach 40 to 50 days from a late August or early September planting. Count on planting a half ounce of seed in a 100-foot row.

WMNI Program Director Preparing For Roundup

Bill Robinson, WMNI Program Director, turned Indian for a few days to do some scouting and naturally he's scouting for cowboys—singing cowboys and cowgirls too.

Bill traveled to Nashville, Tenn., for some contract signing sessions with booking talent agents as he started the Big Roundup of Country and Western stars for the Big WMNI "Country Music Shower of Stars."

Shows scheduled for these Saturdays: Nov. 5, Dec. 31, Jan. 14, Mar. 18 and May 6. The first show is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 19.

Robinson hopes to feature such stars as Eddie Arnold, Buck Owens, Roger Miller, Sonny James, Johnny Cash, Ernest Tubb, George Jones and the Jones Boys, Leroy Van Dyke, Faron Young, Don Bowman and Johnny Paycheck.

The response to previous WMNI Country and Western Shows has been overwhelming. Bill Robinson believes that WMNI listeners will be even more excited this year when they see many more of their favorite stars in person at Veterans Memorial Auditorium due to the effort of WMNI "Top Gun" radio.

Meet The President

Curtain Players president Tom Culbertson is the next on our journey of meeting presidents. For the past eight years Tom has been actively engaged in every phase of production and has contributed his time and abilities to many new business ventures.

From the stage he has created characterizations for "Come Back Little Sheba," "Tender Trap," "John Loves Mary," "Susan Slept Here" and "Harvey." At other times from under and around the stage Tom has built sets, designed lights, worked on sound and has served as technical director. Other facets of community theater he has worked with are publicity, posters, silk-screening and advertising.

One of the important items of theater is a stage and with no facilities available Curtain Players in 1962, Tom was instrumental in purchasing a portable stage from a Toledo theater group. Made specifically for its compatibility to any space available the stage seems to be the only one in existence.

While serving as treasurer, he instituted a new system of bookkeeping making the entrees simples and under- of bookkeeping making the entries simpler and under- with his major concern being stronger organization. Directors within the club and membership are also high on his list of goals. Tom has worked at Battelle for ten years and is a senior research technician. He is married and has two children. As Tom serves his term of office we wish him success in all his goals.

'LIFE IS WORTH SEEING'

"Life is worth seeing."

The Ohio Society for the Prevention of Blindness reminds parents of this fact as children prepare for school work which is based 80 percent on vision.

According to Mrs. R. J. Lund, executive director of the organization, more than 632,000 children in Ohio now need some type of eye care.

THE TRAGEDY of untreated eye defects in the young is that, although such defects are usually easy to correct, many youngsters are visually handicapped, no one recognizes the fact and soon they are hamstrung in their learning efforts.

As the Ohio Society sets aside September as its 17th sight-saving month, it also emphasizes the importance of shatter-resistant lenses and safety frames for children.

However, even a president can fall and break his glasses (President Truman did and the lid lacerations were multiple) and safety glasses are recommended for everyone.

..WITH MORTALITY rate from the accidents of the elderly described as "awesome," Milton Staub, sight-saving chairman of the Ohio Society, warns thaamtn Society, wnrns that many home accidents are a direct result of poor lighting coupled with poor vision.

To protect these older people it is recommended that edges of steps be painted with fluorescent paint (or some sharply contrasting color), three and one-half to seven and one-half watt bulbs be left burning in bathroom, hallways and stairs and that light switches be made easy to find with fluorescent paint.

With half of all blindness preventable and 95 percent of cataract blindness correctable by surgery, Straub urges periodic eye examinations.

"YOUR EYES are windows on the world," the Society states, adding that professional care (not only sought but carefully followed) can keep these windows bright.

Theaters Announce Tryouts

Production dates are Oct. 21 and 22. For information call Pat Kessler at 878-6356.

Director Ed King of Curtain Players reports that tryouts for the comedy "Gazebo" will be held Sept. 8 and 9 at State Savings in Westerville at 8:30 p.m. Production dates are Nov. 10, 11 and 12. For information call Barbara Boylan at 882-7201.

Best-Ever Speed, Better Size Boom Cruisers' Mid-8 Stock

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Vastly improved line size and "the best speed we've ever had," according to head coach Bill McCann, could be the ingredients necessary to get Groveport back toward the top in the Mid-Eight grid race this fall.

The Cruisers slid to their leanest season in nine years in '65 (4-4-1), dropping a half-game lower than a 5-4 finish the year before.

McCANN IS hopeful that his charges can get Groveport back into tune with the '61 '3 '63 vintage which found the Cruisers winning 23 while losing only three in that span.

With six starters apiece on both offensive and defensive units missing from that '65 lineup (including all-league backs Tom Reichelderfer and Ross Worch) the burden will fall on 13 remaining vets.

"At present our offense is ahead of the defense," McCann remarked last week "But the latter unit is coming quickly."

McCANN IS mostly pleased with that increased amount of beef up front, the Cruisers averaging about 40 pounds per man more this fall.

Inexperience at end and quarterback are McCann's biggest concerns, the Groveport mentor calling the latter assignment a "tossup" at present.

Primary candidates for Worch's old job are seniors Dave Stokes (145) and Jeff Nelle (145), the latter a converted end, and junior prospect Pete Marinello (135), a non-letterman.

ANOTHER BIG job will be filling those flanker slots —Groveport losing heavily there with the departure of Jerry Sedwick, Larry Patrick and Tim Michael.

With Nelle trying for the quarterback spot, lettermen are nil at the position although juniors Dave Ritchie (140) and Jim Moisey (125) are possibilities.

Moving in on the line, things look brighter with Bill Boring (senior, 175), Bill Marshall (junior, 185), Keith Legg (senior, 175), Gary Cook (senior, 215) and Roger Adams (senior, 175) lending plenty of savvy there.

LETTER winners are also available at one guard (155-lb. senior Bob Miklos) and center (150-lb senior Dave Fenstermaker).

A sophomore — Bill Bowman — is another tackle possibility.

The remaining four vets give McCann a good sampling of seasoning at fullback and halfback with seniors Mike Click (160) and Fred Zarbaugh (135) vying for Reicherderfer's old spot.

TRACK SPRINTER Chuck Hamilton (135) and Ralph Stout (155) provide letter winners at each halfback position although junior Rod McKinstes (145) could be a starting contender.

A pair of top soph prospects — Don Stokes (defensive guard, fullback) and Dick Scott (linebacker) — could also work into the lineup.

Don and Ron Miller, a pair of 130-lb. juniors, appear ready to gain defensive back positions.

McCANN LOOKS for a tight Mid-Eight race this fall with Gahanna (defending champs), London (whole line back), Westerville (big and fast) and Hilliard (potential of being best) as top contenders.

"I'm not counting ourselves out of it," McCann added. "If we get going in a hurry and develop some confidence in ourselves, we could be right in there."

The Cruisers open their '66 campaign Sept. 9 at West Jefferson.

Six All Mid-Eighters Less, Gahanna Fights Inexperience

By BOB WHITMAN

"Being the defending champion again, we are putting ourselves up for grabs. Everyone is going to want a piece of us."

That was Gahanna coach George Troutman talking in much the same way he did last year at this time before the 1965 season.

THEN HE was coming off a '64 grid campaign that was a perfect 9-0. His reply — a co-championship (8-1) team.

But now he is six all Mid-Eight players shy from last year plus four other lettermen from a 19 letter winner total.

Troutman, however, figures to be "in the thick of the battle for the top of the league again this year."

BUT REPLACING the likes of Dave Belli, Nelson Bobb, Mike Bokros, Barry Hennis, Bob Mach and linebacker Jerry Serafini is going to take a good-sized magic wand.

Inexperience should plague the Lions in the early going with only nine lettermen back (five seniors and four juniors).

Troutman called his 58 candidates an aggressive, anxious ball club lacking somewhat in experience but willing to hit and prove themselves.

BACK ARE a trio of linemen anchored by husky Kerry Shadwick, a 245 pound tackle, A 180 pound senior center Dave Tucker and Bob Lawhead, a 170 pound end round out returning linemen.

Other returning letter winners include, Doug Young, Steve Miller, Mel Hoston, Charles Freeman, Bruce Baker and Alan Strickling.

Freeman is registered at fullback and a candidate to replace Belli, and Mike Kane is listed as a possible heir to Bob Mach's quarterback position.

TROUTMAN looks to beef his line up with candidates like Mike Hennis, Fred Schmidt, Steve Morrison, Jay Woerner, Jim Osborn, Bob Gray, Larry Spann, Dan Hudley, George Moor and Bob Callicoat.

Backfield hopefuls Young, Hoston, Baker, and Strickling will be pushed by Bill Moor, Ron Doran, Bob Bay, Ron Goldhardt and Tom Schneider.

Both Doran and Strickling were leading sprinters for the Lions track club last spring.

Gahanna chalked up 202 offensive points last season and had one of the better defenses in the area, permitting only 57 points.

Whitehall FB Tickets Go On Sale Thursday

The 1966 Whitehall football season reserve seats tickets for the five home games will go on sale Thursday and Friday at the school, and during the work of Sept. 5 through 9.

The tickets will cost five dollars and will be sold from 8:30 to 11:30 in the morning and from 1 until 3:30 in the afternoon.

Carroll's New Coach Geiger Faces Inexperience Problem

Carroll's new football coach Bob Geiger inherited an empty bench from Bill McProuty, who moved to Hamilton Township for the 1966 gridiron season.

Geiger started on his Carroll mission with only two starters back from last year's 6-3-1 team plus five other lettermen.

BACK ARE starters Jerry Rathburn, a 6-0, 212 fullback; and Thane Hecox, a 170 pound senior halfback.

Letter winner John Schmidt, a 145 pounder, is expected to fill in one vacant halfback slot. That leaves Geiger with a quarterback hunting problem before the Bulldogs Sept. 9 opener with Canal Winchester.

The quarterback race is being run by four prime candidates according to Geiger.

"BILL FRYE (junior), Lanny Lott (junior), Barry Simonis and Tom Stebelton (both sophomores) are under consideration right now," he said.

The hunt doesn't end there, however; it merely picks up momentum. Line spots left vacant by 15 graduates must be filled with only three lettermen back to do it.

Geiger looks for Don Crow, a 170 pound tackle; Dave Patton, a 165 pound tackle and Paul Muck, a 5-7, 145 pound guard, to fill those positions.

BUT THOSE three returnees will be pushed by newcomers. Bill Coakley, a 208 pound tackle, will be working behind Crow.

Chris Aberts, Jim Phillips and John Brookover, a 5-7, 145 pound transfer from Washington, C.H., are fighting for the guard slot opposite Muck, who is being pushed by Bob Underwood, Dave Welsh and Emerson Hazelwood.

The center of Carroll's line is up for grabs with Chris Claypool, a 5-9, 160 pounder and Bill Lupfer, a 6-0, 170 pounder, heading the list of candidates.

"END SEEMS to be our most uncertain spot right now," Geiger said, "with only four or possibly five men" currently in the running.

Jeff Strawn (5-10, 175), Steve Brookover, John's brother at 5-9, 128 pounds; Dana Deems and Kevin Boving are prime hopefuls for the end slot.

Geiger did mention that quarterback candidate Stebelton will likely settle in the end position before the first game.

FRYE, A returning letterman from the defensive halfback position and 200 pound, 6-1 tackle Jeff Williams should offer some defensive balance.

The offensive backfield balance will also be a strong point with three back up men listed for action. Steve Buchanan will fill in for Rathburn at full, Vic Cull will relieve Hecox and Joe Ridgeway will spell Schmidt.

Geiger looks at Millersport (10-0 and unscored upon last year) and Bishop Fenwick as the top teams on their schedule, but doesn't like the fact that they meet those to on back-to-back weeks starting Sept. 16, second game of the campaign.

CARROLL isn't big with only three men over 200 pounds but according to Geiger "But inexperience will hurt us early," he added.

New Offense, Improved Speed Factors In H-T Grid Revival

With outfits like Whitehall and Pleasant View operating in the same territory, it might be tough to sell a "rags-to-riches" tonic at Hamilton Township this fall.

But football appears to be on the upswing for the '66 Rangers who count 10 returnng lettermen in a countdown of 43 prospects this fall — plus an additional 19 frosh candidates.

NEW H-T mentor Bill McProuty, who operated a bit farther south (at Carroll High) last fall, will be starting right from the top in his effort to rebuild Ranger grid fortunes — the top including the scrapping of H-T's old straight-T offense.

McProuty will introduce a pro-style offense which features a more wide-open game, a slight variation of that he employed at Carroll in '65.

With the likes of linemen Mike Warning (225), Ken Peck (260) and Ralph Morgan (205) departed, the Rangers will have to work with a much smaller unit up front.

BUT McPROUTY considers better speed and improved mobility as H-T's biggest strength this season with a lack of depth and inexperience in several spots probably causing the most headaches.

"The biggest problem so far," McProuty claims, "has been the necessity of spending so much time on fundamentals."

Only three starters remain from H-T's '65 lineup—junior quarterback Ernie Spires (170), senior halfback John Gorczyca (160) and senior center Jim Schmacher (170).

SPIRES COULD move to halfback, however, with another letterman quarterback senior Eric Bomhard (160) —also available.

H-T's number two fullback last season, junior Steve Yates (175), should move up to the starting slot while the Rangers' other remaining backfield vet — junior Jeff Nelson (150) — could prove to be Gorczyca's running mate.

That leaves the line where seasoned talent is a bit harder to locate.

THE END spots shouldn't prove too much of a problem with letter winners Rick Tomlinson (185) and Steve Nelson (165), both juniors, back.

Completing the returning vet lineup are junior Dale Brigner (175) at one guard and senior Jerry Keys (185), an ex-end, at a tackle.

A pair of move-ins—senior Craig (185) and junior Boyd (180) VanSant—could solve tackle and center slots, both gridders lettermen at Avon-On-The-Lake High.

ANOTHER END prospect is senior Dick Ciborek (150).

With two veteran quarterbacks on his roster, McProuty expects Ranger foes to face quite a bit of aerial artistry.

The H-T mentor sees Whitehall and Pleasant View, with their bulk of returning lettermen, as Metro favorites with Reynoldsburg gaining the "darkhorse" tag.

Teachers Who Go Back To School Return To Teach Others At Home

For every opening in a National Science Foundation institution for elementary school teachers, 17 have to be turned away. And there are 10 applications for every vacancy in the institutes sponsored by NDEA.

All told, by the end of 1966, about 400,000 teachers — one fifth of the nation's total teaching corps — will have personally taken part in this gigantic federal effort to help them deepen their skills.

BUT THE total effect ripples far beyond a specific teacher who takes a specific course. Nowadays many teachers who are given intensive institute training are expected to go back home to teach fellow-teachers in their own school systems or communities.

According to NSF sources, this kind of spreading-the-word is a current prime consideration in the granting of funds for teacher study.

When the National Science Foundation was established in 1950, one of its most urgent concerns (seven years before Sputnik) was to modernize the teaching of mathematics and science, particularly in the nation's high schools. In 1953 it established its first two institutes for 42 teachers.

THIS YEAR there will be 1,025 institutes for more than 43,000 teachers, and the amount of money to run them has jumped from $22,500 in 1953 to more than $41 million dollars in 1966.

In 1958, when the National Defense Education Act was being debated, many proponents were saying that, yes, excellent teaching of science and math is crucial to our nation's survival, but so is the teaching of modern foreign languages.

INSTITUTES in this specialty were set up for about 3,000 teachers in 1959 to a relatively modest pricetag of $1.5 million dollars. In 1965 when NDEA was renewed and expanded, provision was made for teachers to study in eight other areas, including English, history, geography and reading and the expenditure this year will be more than $32 million dollars.

TEACHERS CAN — and do — also take advantage of programs offered by their own state departments of education, their school systems, or nearby colleges and universities.

Thus in Omaha, economics teachers are meeting 30 times a year on their specialty, using as a basic tool of reference a TV series on "The American Economy." In Austin, Tex., they're using programmed instruction to learn the "new math;" after school and Saturdays in Detroit, the school system holds "leadershops" several times a semester on modern mathematics.

IN BUFFALO teachers are learning computer fundamentals and programming so they can teach it; in Maryland there are night time "Sessions with Scientists" for teachers to discover the latest developments in such fields as thermochemistry, marine biology, space ex-

It Was A Great Day

Climaxed by a brief greeting from President Johnson as several thousand persons lined Rt. 33 at the intersection of Bowen-rd to get a glimpse of the chief executive, Labor Day in Canal Winchester featured a parade, talent show, Little League baseball, barbecued chicken and a teenage dance. The float prepared by residents of Fairfield, Trine, and Beatysts depicting Cape Kennedy was top prize winner, in the residential division, followed by E. Columbus-st's "Plymouth Rock," and W. Waterloo's "Niagara Falls." And once again the Cornservatory Players Club with Art Day as a winsome Luci Johnson and his cohorts making up the wedding party was judged the outstanding entry by individuals as the group portrayed "Whitehouse '66."

NAACP: Board Ducks Issue

By KATHRYN MASON

Charges and counter-charges are being hurled between the Columbus Board of Education and the Columbus National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The NAACP claims the board mishandled its proposal to implement a percentage balance of Negroes and Whites in the schools.

C. L. Dumaree, assistant superintendent of Columbus Schools, said the charge is "entirely untrue."

THE NAACP PROPOSAL had been submitted to the Council on Intercultural Education which researches and recommends ways to help solve local cultural problems. The Council had then asked the board to analyze page four of the eight page proposal.

This page listed 16 schools in which a transfer of students would create a mathematical balance of the races proportional to the population.

The school officials determined that this plan would necessitate busing at a cost near $200,000 per year. The proposal would destroy the neighborhood school system.

DUMAREE ALSO denied the charge that the busing price tag is misleading. "The cost was figured by adding up the number of students involved in the transfers and multiplying that figure by the cost of transportation for one student per year," he said.

The NAACP says busing would not be required for all the students. Kennard Fickle, co-chairman of the NAACP education committee and instructor at the Columbus Area Technician School, said although some students will have farther to go, others will be closer to school.

Dumaree said the NAACP does not have the facts to support the idea that busing would not be required. "There is definitely a distance factor," he said.

IN ADDITION, safety is a problem. "The children would have to go across railroad tracks and main thoroughfares. We can't get the children there any other way but to transport them."

The board's report on the proposal was concluded with restatement of its adherence to the neighborhood concept. Dumaree said the plan was designed so that children could walk to school and be able to go home for lunch. "The NAACP plan would take the child out of his home community," he said.

Fickle said, "We were nitpicked to death."

"We were very unhappy with the evaluation," he said. "All we're trying to do is to have attention focused on the problem of segregation.

"ALTHOUGH THE Council was formed primarily to study this problem they've been shying away from the area."

He said, however, the meetings with the Council have been heartening. "They are moving closer to the real problem."

The NAACP is not critical of the Council but "our chagrin is with the school administration." "They have shown they are not interested in resolving the problem of sub-standard education in segregated schools—they ignore it," Fickle sad.

IN THE NAACP proposal it was charged the Board of Education has deliberately promoted segregation in some school zones by drawing districts so that Negro students will attend separate schools.

"The Council could have a tremendous effect if it would ask what the problem is before looking for a solution," Fickle commented.

He admitted that he knew the question of busing would come up eventually, but he asserted that the board's view of the NAACP suggestions was false.

"We carefully selected those schools which were close together to avoid the issue. We wanted a program that could be implemented easily within a year," the spokesman said.

"OUR PLAN can be put into effect with a minimum amount of disruption and cost."

Fickle said the NAACP had had difficulty obtaining statistical data from the Columbus Board of Education as to the number of students by race. The figures he obtained show that 95 percent of the Negro children are going to segregated elementary schools, 73 per cent to junior high and 60 percent to high school.

"Segregated" was defined as schools where the percentage of Negroes was 40 percent or more, over the average 26 percent of the school population.

FICKLE SAID national reports show one-half of the Negro pupils graduate with the equivalent of an eighth grade education. And a recent study by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, "Survey on Equality of Education Opportunity," shows that the effect of the intermingling of students had positive results for the sub-standard pupil.

The report said good students would do well regardless of their environment but poor students were prodded to do better when classmates were interested in education.

Fickle listed several factors as reasons for sub-standard education for Negroes. He said the facilities in the predominantly Negro school are less adequate. The quality of teachers is lower . . . "The average teacher does not want to teach in the inner city schools," he said.

"THE MOST important factor, though, is the fact that the Negro child comes from a family background which is not conducive to promoting education."

He said these factors are reflected in the Columbus system where 10 percent of those Negroes past the age when they should have received high school diplomas have dropped out of school.

"I feel that integration is the greatest single step toward improved Negro education," Fickle said.

He explained that the Negro is involved in a vicious circle. "Segregated housing causes segregated schools under the neighborhood concept. The resulting inferior education causes low employment standards. Then low incomes perpetuate the Negro ghettos.

"WE REALIZE that housing and employment will improve only if education does," he said.

"The school administration has made busing a moral issue, and has held up the neighborhood concept as something sacred. That's why this proposal was aimed primarily at uncovering the problem of segregation."

"I'm certain they're aware that 40 percent of the Negro high school students go to East High School . . . we calculated that from the board's figures," Fickle asserted.

UCC Seeking Volunteers For Pre-School Program

The United Community Council of Columbus is looking for 150 volunteers to give children in disadvantaged areas the opportunity to take part in pre-kindergarten classes.

Mrs. Jeanette Huhta, director of the UCC's Volunteer Services Bureau, announced that 34 pre-kindergarten classes, will open at 19 Columbus public schools Sept. 16.

Directing the program, which is financed through the federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act, will be Mrs. Dorothy Diehl of the Division of Special Services for the Columbus public schools.

The program originated in Columbus during the summer of 1965. It provides classroom activities for "deprived" four-year-olds to help prepare them for entering public school.

Volunteers work one-half day a week assisting teachers in the classes. All volunteers will be given an orientation by the Council of Jewish Women Sept. 21 at 9 a.m. at the Jewish Center.

Thirty volunteers from previous sessions have already re-enlisted for the 1966 program.

Numerous Spectator area women have already signed up for the program. They include:

Reynoldsburg — Mrs. Stanley Bohnsen, 1778 Kaiser-dr.

East — Mrs. Alfred Henkelmann, 777 Sheridan-av; Mrs. Joseph Houck, 1234 Haddon-rd and Mrs. Jack Wolman, 2780 Brentwood-rd.

The Burning Question

Motorists who drive daily past the charred and twisted remains of the Cleveland-av overpass on I-71 are beginning to ask questions.

Why is there no apparent action towards restoration of the vital expressway project?

Who is going to pay the bill for such repairs?

What is holding up the report which is supposed to fix responsibility for the near-tragedy?

Are private interests outweighing the public's interest in the entire matter?

Motorists are asking the questions. But no one is coming up with any answers.

The Best Protest

In this day of varied forms of protest—from males with long hair to self-immolation — there still remains the most effective and civilized form devised by man — the ballot.

There is an election in the offing and those who have avoided the picket lines, the sit-ins and the protest marches will still get their best chance to make their voices heard.

Surely there is enough to protest about for everyone to get into the act. The Spectator Newspapers urge area residents to keep their eyes on their newspapers between now and election day, to pick their targets selectively, and then go to the polls and vote.

So if you get your hair cut short a couple of times a month and if you have been too busy working for a living to attend any rallies, your big chance to protest is coming up — at the November elections.

Where Were They?

Sixty-five officers of the already-undermanned State Highway Patrol spent the last week and a half, including the Labor Day weekend, directing traffic and guiding tourists at the Ohio State Fair.

Ohio motorists, meanwhile, spent the holiday weekend killing themselves at a record clip, far exceeding the predicted 33 traffic deaths for the long weekend.

The Spectator is forced to question the wisdom of assigning 65 trained uniformed patrolmen to Fairgrounds duty that could just as well have been handled by Patrol cadets, the Patrol auxiliary or the Eagle Scouts, for that matter.

If having 65 more patrolmen out on the highways would have saved one life, it would have been worth it.

—— And Saw That It Was Not As Good As If He Had Done It All Himself

Season's End

No other season has as sharp a definition as fall.

Frequently, winter is present long before snows fly. And summer slides in with gradual sunshine and increasing warmth. And spring rides in on the coattails of waning winter.

All the seasons, except fall, blend into one another.

There is a day about the second week of August that marks the beginning of fall. The night is cold. The sunshine seems to have lost its intensity, though not its light. It is a marked change, if one is sensitive to it.

BEARDSHEAR

Granted, there are warm days ahead. But they are tempered with the cooling of the nights. The wind takes on a slight nip.

The business that is the thermometer of the season is swimming. At the end of May, the weather becomes hot and humid. Most all of June and July the nights, along with the days, are warm.

Sweltering adults and children flock to the pools to get cool and bask in the sun. Any shift in the weather is reflected at the pool's toll gate. If it rains, nobody comes. If a night is cool, the attendance is cut. If it is hot and humid, the pool is packed with people.

But any pool manager worth his salt knows that sometime in the middle of August will come that day when the sun shines slightly less intense, the night is ever so slightly cooler and only the die-hard youngsters appear.

It is the death-knell of the season.

And the manager knows he will soon be walking along the concrete apron of the pool that echoes with the sounds of children lost to school. There will only be the water that is calm and windblown . . . with a few leaves skimming across the surface.

Scooting across the concrete will be the remnants of a cellophane popcorn bag.

It is lonely. It is hollow. It is the end of a season.

And the pool manager will recall that particular day in August when suddenly, overnight, summer became fall.

Stroke Of Genius

To the Editor:

What a stroke of journalistic genius on the part of The Spectator! Giving Robert Shamansky and Alan Abel the same column coverage and running their pictures one under the other.

The only difference between them, Alan Abel confesses his hoax, Shamansky hopes his won't be discovered until it is too late. And with the great measure of success Mr. Abel has had, I'd say Shamansky is our man.

Mrs. Richard Ramey wasn't listed as a member of the "Great American Hoax" and if she isn't she sure is suitable and desirable material for membership. I happened to attend a hearing on obscenity here in Columbus in our very own State House and the performance given by the American Civil Liberties Union was the most frightening thing I have ever witnessed, except for a "public forum" conducted at the Jewish Center when Mr. Shamansky was a panel member.

You think like Mr. Shamansky or you leave the meeting. Liberty he doesn't understand, but then neither do the other members of the Civil Liberties Union.

Mr. Kinoy and his benchmen are perfect examples of the type of character this organization attracts and spawns. No consideration, no manners, no dignity, no respect for anyone or anything. Mrs. Ramey omitted one significant phrase from her definition of the ACLU — "The ACLU," she says, "does not stand for anything except the implementation of the rights spelled out in the Constitution of our United States." She omits "as they interpret it."

If the "men of great devotion and foresight" who wrote our Constitution could see what has happened to this great document through the perverted thinking of little men, they would surely gnash their teeth. And, in the spirit of the time, the ACLU and some of these other questionable groups like the ADA, to name just one other one, would feel the wrath of the Minutemen of yore.

marquis childs ★ Violence May Be Paying Off ★

CHILDS

WASHINGTON — Roy Wilkins, head of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, tells of a letter he received after the outbreak of violence in Chicago's Negro ghetto. Mayor Richard Daley had just authorized the construction of 10 neighborhood swimming pools and the use of sprinklers attached to fire hydrants.

"So you're the guy that claims violence doesn't pay," the anonymous writer said, enclosing a newspaper clipping reporting the authorization of the swimming pools.

Not only for Wilkins and the other moderate civil rights leaders but for the Johnson Administration this is the challenge coming out of a summer of violence erupting in a dozen or more cities across the land.

President Johnson was correct in saying his Administration is spending from two to three times as much on the cities as any previous administration. But this is irrelevant since it is obviously not enough. Once a decision was taken to prosecute a land war in Asia 10,000 miles from America's shores all else had to be cut to fit this pattern.

That is a fact of life official denials cannot obscure. The pretense has been maintained that with a little pinching here and paring candle ends there the brave objectives of the Great Society can be achieved war or no war.

Fiscal policy is hazy. Virtually all the discussion of a possible tax increase has turned on whether it is necessary to damp down inflation. Only rarely has a voice been heard to say that increased revenue raised at a comparatively small sacrifice in the affluent society might go for the thousand and one things that need doing in the public sector — the things that the President talks about so generously as he tours the country.

Now, if reports currently circulating can be credited, the White House intends to do something like this. A program calling for a tax increase to pay for it is being worked up. Whether it will be presented to a special session of Congress called after the election or in January to the new Congress — for that matter whether it will be presented at all — is still to be determined.

From the perspective of history the high water mark of the President's influence — his capacity to take the lead in domestic legislation — may have been in June of 1965. A Johnson program of extraordinary magnitude had been approved. In that month the President delivered his Howard University commencement address in which he said that everything that had been done in the field of civil rights was only the smallest beginning toward righting the injustices of a century or more. On this high tide of his fortunes conceivably he could have proposed a program on the order of the Marshall Plan for the Negro ghettos as proposed by Whitney Young of the Urban League — a plan contemplating spending at the rate of $10 billion a year.

That opportunity seems to have been lost with the heightening tensions of the war. If the white backlash materializes in the coming election, as evidence of growing hostility of white elements to Negro demands, the future for the cities will be dark indeed. william s. white ★ Humphrey Position Secure ★

WHITE

WASHINGTON—The great game of politics is getting rough among the Democrats, and the man currently being hardest hit is Vice-President Humphrey.

Suggestions that Humphrey might be dumped from the ticket in 1968 are arising not merely from naturally unfriendly Republican sources like Richard Nixon, but also from Democrats interested in promoting the future of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York.

It is these latter cuts, from within his own party, that are the unkindest cuts of all to Hubert H. Humphrey.

Ol' Hubert, as President Johnson sometimes refers to his Vice-President, is finding the dog days of the dying summer to be rugged days, indeed. But though life is hard for him, things nevertheless are not nearly so tough as they might appear.

Both history and personal traits of Lyndon B. Johnson are on Humphrey's side in this matter. As to the first point, reports forecasting the dumping of Vice-Presidents are standard operating procedure from actual or presumptive rivals.

Nixon himself should know. After his first term as Vice-President to President Eisenhower, Nixon was being dumped regularly, once or twice a week, by some people — but not, as it turned out, by Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Johnson surely knows the score to this sort of opera-melodrama. For as Vice-President to John F. Kennedy he was forever reading or hearing from informed sources, as the saying goes, that Kennedy was thinking of dumping him in 1964.

To be sure, nothing in the present situation suggests that Johnson could not politically dispense with Humphrey in 1968, if he should so choose and assuming that he himself stands for re-election. There is no real parallel between the Johnson-Humphrey relationship and the Kennedy-Johnson relationship because Johnson had in his own right a personal power Humphrey could not be said now to have.

But it is precisely here that the characteristics of Johnson strongly intervene on Humphrey's side. The President not only likes and politically respects Humphrey, an old associate from their Senate days. The President also reacts in an extremely negative way to outside pressures against any of his associates, high or low.

This has already been shown in the case of Secretary of State Dean Rusk, at whom the more or less pacifist-isolationist Democratic left wing started shooting long ago because Rusk was determined to stick it out in Viet Nam. The upshot was that the more these critics hit at Rusk, the deeper they dug him into the President's favor.

Exactly the same reality now applies to Humphrey. The more Humphrey's Democratic rivals may go after him, the more certain they will make it that the President will defend him with more and more vigor. This is not to say that Humphrey is absolutely certain, here and now, to be, in every conceivable turn of circumstances, on the ticket in 1968. It is only to say that he surely won't be got off it by attacks from without. (Copyright, 1966, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

barry goldwater ★ Here Are Some Predictions ★

GOLDWATER

If the Senate's two-year study of urban problems continues on the course which its leadership seems to have set for it, these developments are predictable:

1—Left-wing or Socialist oriented witnesses will predominate.

2—Civic blackmail will prevail over common sense and justice.

3—The economic and cultural role of the city in terms of a free society and a free economy will be glossed over.

4—The representatives of business and industry whose efforts to renovate certain cities already have proven many times more effective than any federal boondoggle will, if they are invited to appear at all, appear apologetically or hesitantly in the face of the study's obvious disposition to believe that only the federal government can solve the problems of the cities.

5—The entire area will represent a great opportunity for Republican administrators who, by applying their party's proven principles, could cast the challenge to cities as one of common-sense economies which should be resolved without turning the majority of our citizens into federal stepchildren.

If the study were intended to do more, in the long run, than provide this administration with volumes of captive testimony as to new ways in which it can buy up more big city voting blocs, it would delve deeply and quickly into federal failures in our cities.

Urban renewal program failures are a particularly obvious city blight. The frequent mismanagement and even possibly corruption of big-city anti-poverty programs is screaming for investigation.

A conscientious study of big city problems would look closely at the successes of the private sector in saving and rebuilding cities.

A proper study of the big cities, in terms of freedom rather than political expediency, would keep always in mind the principle that cities, like individuals, must be concerned in every way possible to develop the ability to pay their own way. Big cities should not lean upon the entire population, taxing everyone, to solve local or individual problems.

Finally, if such a study were being conducted by any party other than the one which dominates every major big-city political machine in the country, we might expect some attention to be paid to the city-stifling effect of machine politics on the populations of our major urban centers.

But that would be like asking the wolf to conduct a thorough study of sheep security. (Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times)

Gallery Players Announce Plans For 1966-67 Season

Gallery Players of the Jewish Center have opened their 1966-67 season subscription drive.

The season will open with the musical comedy "Do-Re-Mi," written by Garson Kanin with music by Jule Styne and lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green. It will be the first Columbus presentation of the musical hit based on the juke box racket investigation of a few years ago.

Two other notable revivals are included in the season series. Planned are productions of Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of our Teeth" and Clifford Odets' "Awake and Sing."

Other offerings include a single appearance by Yiddish actress Dina Halpern; four award-winning international films; two Gallery Players Actors' Lab presentations; a spring ballet recital; the winter concert of the Jewish Center Symphony Orchestra and a summer theater cabaret party. All are included in the $7.50 package subscription price.

Tryouts for "Do-Re-Mi" will be held Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 7-8, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Sept. 11, at 2 p.m. by director Harold E. Eisenstein.

Chorus and solo singers and a choreographer and teenage dancers are needed for the production.

The tryouts will be held in the auditorium of the Jewish Center, 1125 College-av.

Ticket information for the series is available from the center. Mail orders are being accepted.

AND SO IT GROWS

If you have a new lawn to seed, early September is an ideal time to do it. Planting now will give the young grass a chance to become established before frosts. And, it'll develop before such summer weeds as crabgrass germinate.

Here's the way Ohio State University Extension specialists advise seeding:

• Sow a small amount of good quality seed, going over the area twice in two directions. Mix the seed with sand, corn meal, or fertilizer to get more even distribution.

• Rake the seed lightly into the soil.

• After seeding, mulch with ground sphagnum peat or straw. Wet the peat a day or two before application so it won't blow away. If you use straw, count on a 50-pound bale for 1,000 square feet.

• Roll the lawn as soon as the mulch is on if the soil isn't wet. Keep the soil moist until the seedlings are established.

Boxelder bugs soon will be looking for winter hibernation spots indoors. Although they don't do heavy damage to homes, their saliva stains walls and fabrics.

Pick up any that you can with a vacuum cleaner and burn the contents. Otherwise, treat a 10-foot wide strip around the house with dieldrin or diazinon according to package directions for soil insects. Also treat bushes or shrubbs up as high as four feer from the ground.

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

Players Club Slates Meet

Players Club, 549 Franklin-av, will have its "Hello, '66-'67" meeting Friday, Sept. 9, at the club.

There will be refreshments, entertainment and a business meeting at which time plans for the coming year will be discussed.

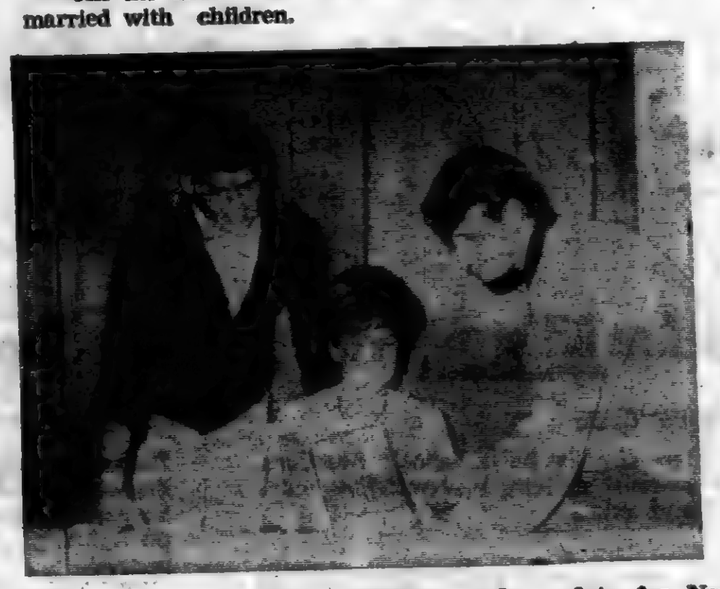
Members, prospective members and new members are invited.

Brothers Plan Return

Eddie, John, Tom and Ruey Rhodes started performing in the Ohio area in 1961. They were "discovered" two years ago while singing at the Peppermint Lounge, a local night club.

An agent saw their show and next thing they knew they were performing the night club circuit: the Copacabana, the Palmer House in Chicago, Freeport in the Bahamas.

They play frequently at the Maramor here.



The brothers said they like to return to Columbus each year because they got their start here.

All graduated from Columbus high schools. Two of the brothers started at Ohio State but didn't finish. All hope to go back to college and graduate. They hope some day to play the summer Fair Circuit.

This summer they played for two days at the Ohio State Fair. They were awed by the audience of 30,000, the eldest brother, Ruey, stated.

"The Ohio State Fair was the greatest experience of our lives," he said.

All the brothers are in their early 20's and all are married with children.

SQUARE DANCE

The Dudes and Dolls Square Dance Club will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. at the American Legion Hall, 4604 N. High-st. Eldon Pittenger will be the caller.

OHIO'S LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

HERE ARE LAWN FEEDING HINTS

"There's no better time for fertilizing your lawn than right now; make your fertilizer dollars go farther," is the advice of Dr. Robert W. Schery, director of the Lawn Institute.

"Adequate feeding in autumn accomplishes more for top lawn species such as Kentucky Bluegrass, Fine Fescue and Bentgrass, than does equivalent care at any other time of the year. All the breaks come your way in autumn; almost nothing goes against you. The grass, generously fertilized, fills tightly, but it won't grow tall and need extra mowing. Weeds are on a seasonal decline and will not grab a lion's share of the fertilizer. With cooler weather imminent, you neither burn your lawn nor encourage those diseases so troublesome in hot weather," adds Dr. Schery.

Tape a tip from Nature: she seeds her swards in autumn. Kentucky Bluegrass and the prime lawn fescues such as Chewings and Pennlawn shed their seed in summer. This "cures" or afterripens for a few weeks in the soil, and then is ready to sprout stimulated by autumn rains and longer, cooler nights. Older, established grass plants benefit equally as much. They build the food reserves in autumn that carry them through winter and spark a tighter, faster-starting turf in spring. Autumn is indeed that high point of the growing cycle for lawns, a season when "income" greatly exceeds "outgo." The underground bluegrass rhizomes grow fat and husky, full of energy for subsequent spreading.

Especially important to lawngrass is deep, vigorous rooting. You don't see the underground parts, but what happens in the rootzone now will make a lot of difference in topgrowth next spring. As is well known, the phosphate component of a complete fertilizer particularly encourage good root growth. Potassium contributes to the general tone of the grass, and along with phosphorus, aids greatly in winter survival. Nitrogen, of course, promotes deep green leafage, but needs a generous measure of other components for balance and top performance. These three major elements should always be ample in autumn, for steady growth and winter survival.

How much fertilizer? The modern fertilizer bar usually tells how much area it will cover. Rates amount to something like five pounds per 1,000 square feet for a 7-22-15 fertilizer, such as a new brand called Nutro Winter Survival. For a type richer in nitrogen such as 30-5-8, use about three pounds per 1,000 square feet. One that fits the 30-5-8 analysis is a new extruded plant food called TLC (Tender Loving Care) for Turf, produced by the Borden Chemical Company.

NEED AN ANSWER?

What is the best way to keep canna roots through the winter? Each year after I dig them and place them in the cellar they rot. Should they be dried before storage?

After digging, dry your canna roots thoroughly, dust them with sulphur, cover them with clean sand or peat moss and then store them in a cool basement. Check them occasionally and if any show signs of shriveling, sprinkle the sand or peat with a little water.

I have seen lightweight rocks that resemble granite but are easily moveable. Can this be purchased for my new rock garden?

Yes, this is available locally and is called Featherock. Contact your favorite garden center to locate the source.

T-V Outlook: 'Leaner But Meaner'

By JACK WITTENMEIER

"Improved quickness, hitting harder on defense and executing better on offense will have to do the job for us," is the way Tenys Valley grid boss Marion Waits sizes up his Vikings football fortunes this fall.

"WE'RE A lot leaner in numbers," Waits commented, "but meaner in our hitting."

"Lack of depth, as usual, is our biggest single problem again this year," claims Waits, who envisions his line weight down about 15 pounds. (160 on defense, 150 on offense).

Lettermen should fill just about all of the starting slots with junior Bruce Roese (165) returning to the all-important quarterback position.

Staring halfbacks look like vets Tim Wells (junior, 150) and Greg Hall (senior, 155), the latter T-V's top ground gainer last season.

FULLBACK seems well fortified with returnees Bill Welsh (senior, 165) and Ken Daft (senior, 170, switched from quarterback vying for the opening nod.

Targets for Roese's passes at end should be Mike Lombardo (junior, 190, moved over from tackle) and Cliff Nutter (senior, 170), both lettermen, with junior Bob Welsh (140) also in the running.

Moving into tackle, the Vikings look plenty solid with four vets back in Randy Wilson (senior, 170), Ernie Harbar (junior, 160), Gene Neff (senior, 209) and Terry Noggle, (senior, 180), the latter missing the last half of the '65 campaign with a broken leg.

VETS DAN Pennington (junior, 160) and Don Vosbury (senior, 160) look set at guard with junior Jim Deal (140) ready as backup.

Another letter winner—junior Stan Will (160) is ready to go at center and linebacker.

Defensive specialists look like senior vet Ben Vause (165) at tackle, junior Fred Patriciao (140) at halfback and sophomore Mark Leatherwood (135) at safety.

Only Seven Letter Winners Greet Coach Blais At Canal Winchester

By BOB WHITMAN

Experience will be the missing link as Canal Winchester's coach Bob Blais selects his starting lineup for Carroll's invasion Friday night.

"Color us green," Blais said, "because we are real short on experience."

WINCHESTER returns only seven from last season's 1-8 squad and has only 36 out for varsity positions this year.

"But," Bob added, "we have a different attitude this season, and we think it is better than last year's."

BACK ARE Bob Fetterolf, a 6-1, 200 pound tackle, and co-captain, Dave Fuller, a 6-1, 215 pound tackle, Jerry Shackelford, a 5-10, 160 pound halfback, Dave Cook, a 5-8, 160 pound fullback, Mark Craig, a 5-7, 140 pound halfback, and freshman letter winner Chuck Carpenter, a 6-0, 150 pound end-halfback. Letter winners also include Jim Wynkoop, who has to wait five weeks due to a summer operation.

Blais also mentions a bundle of leading contenders to fill in for the 1965 graduation night damage. Leading that list is spunky quarterback Chris Hanners, a 5-5, 135 pound sophomore, who, according to Bob, "has the spot sewed up."

Other prospects for starting jobs are Keith Babbert, a freshman guard, John Sayre, Steve Detty, Greg Abbott, Gary Kemmerling, Doug Beaty, Larry Oyler, John McClain and Harry Hickman.

THOSE NINE are being figured on to replace key losses from last year such as Bill McGee, Jim Woodward, Jeff Reinhart and Mike Bigerton.

WITH HANNERS holding down the signal calling slot, Carpenter and co-captain Shakelford will run from the tailback position. Cook will again play fullback with Craig operating out of the wing back slot.

McClain will offer an imposing 6-5 target at the end position and Bob Blais is high on Doug Beatty who is slated for first back-up duty in Craig's wingback spot.

"I feel that the running game will improve," Blais offered, "because most of the boys know the system now."

DEFENSIVELY Canal will be green for a while, but Blais again lists desire as the key. "We have more desire defensively this year and the kids are making an effort to learn defense."

Here's How To Avoid 'Pantemonium'

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

There may be "Pantemonium" this Fall.

The pants-suit, so comfortable and newly chic, may be frowned upon and even banned if we wear it in the best of places. From what I've heard, some big-city restaurateurs are acting ugly and unreasonable about ladies wearing pants . . . I mean pants-suits . . . in public.

Eileen Ford, of the Ford Modeling Agency, recently was going to Mexico with a model. At the Golden Door at Kennedy Airport, they were refused admittance because the model was wearing a smart pin-striped suit. Eileen took her into the powder room and gave her her half-slip which was black paisley print with lace and bow trim instead of the pants . . . what a combination . . . BUT they were admitted.

Reminds me of the time my husband and I went to Sardi's restaurant in New York. We had been to a summer Saturday matinee at the theatre and stopped in before dressing for dinner. Mr. T. had on a casual coat and buttoned up sport shirt. We were refused admittance because he had no tie. The head waiter, at first very aloof, said as we turned to leave that he had a tie my husband could wear if we wished to stay. It was a grubby, dressy-type tie and would have looked ridiculous with a summer casual outfit . . . we declined.

Even since that time, I've been waiting to use the line facetiously, "We've been tossed out of better places than this," even though it, at the time was needlessly embarrassing.

Better you should avoid embarrassment . . . better you find out ahead of time that you'll be accepted in what simple-minded managers consider unconventional attire.

If you're wearing a pants-suit, make sure it fits properly . . . not too tight . . . because, let's face it, most derrieres (back-sides) are too big for pants alone. Select a suit with a longer jacket because a longer jacket will slim down the proportions . . . and proportions can be disastrous at even an early age.

Let's also face the fact that in Central Ohio we'll be safe and chic if we wear pants-suits for sporting occasions. I don't think a gatekeeper at the OSU football games (or high school games) will refuse to admit you if you're wearing a smart pants-suit. I also don't think a hostess at an apres-football party will frown on you. But keep in mind, some might. So be sure to wear pants-suits in the right places . . . check ahead if you're not sure.

Pants-suits are in sizes for the young modern . . . the college group . . . and they are also available in more sophisticated styles in the better suit department. The young modern pants-suits are in military styles of camel, navy Melton cloth and wool checks. The more sophisticated are in fabrics like ziz-zag knits and one comes with its own turtle-neck sweater . . . a fashionable acoutrement to add to any 1966 pants-suit.

Other proper accessories for the pants-suit stylings include the sporty knuckle glove with either the back of the hand cut-out or vents on the knuckles. The boot shoe, low heeled with higher laced sides. The textured stockings in a blending tone. To top off this very distinctive look, try a very distinctive cap. Either a young and modern boy-cap version or a take-off on a seaman's cap.

Summing it up, I guess I'd say . . . there are quite a few different pants-suits styles available. If you buy them big enough (not tight) . . . with a longer jacket . . . and are sure where you wear them . . . you'll avoid "Pantemonium." Let's hope so.

HERE IS a gray Persian Lamb pant-suit. It features a sharply creased funnel-type trousers with double-breasted, brass-buttoned walking jacket. It was designed by Mr. Fred of Fur & Sport and retails at about $1250.

THIS CADET blue wool pant-suit by Oscar de La Renta for his fall 1966 collection was made for Jane Derby fashions. Double rows of silver buttons run down from a narrow standaway collar and mark pocket tabs. The pants are straight and narrow. Jane Derby fashions are available at Montaldo's.

WORSHIP KNOWS NO CALENDAR
Some select Sunday as a day of worship. Others prefer Friday or Saturday. But the solace of worship knows no boundaries—temporal or spatial.
Some find their God in church. Others see him in a spring sunrise, or in a fresh-mown meadow at dusk. Children oft find peace in an evening prayer.
Each seeks peace in his own way. All place their trust in a Supreme Being and worship as conscience dictates.
Why not join them? You, too, can find solace and guidance in prayer. Tel. 294-3737

Plans have jelled for the Third Annual Jamboree of the Coonskin Cap Brigade. It will be held at Lake Hope (near Zaleski, O.), starting at 4 p.m. on Oct. 7 and running through Oct. 9.

Formed two years ago, the Coonskiners is an organization fathered by the League of Ohio Sportsmen to encourage a better understanding of the use of guns in the outdoors by teenagers. It is the first known outfit of its kind in the United States. Any youngster between the ages of 12-18 is eligible, the only requirement being that he or she have an adult sponsor.

THIS YEAR, the initiation ceremonies are being held over a three-day period in order to allow plenty of time to hold outdoor classes for the teeners. The charge for the entire weekend for child and sponsor is $27 for meals and lodgings, all classes are free and prizes will be presented.

If you have a son or daughter who has an itch for the outdoors, you could do nothing better than to bring them to Lake Hope. You must first register with the League by addressing an inquiry to 995 Summit-st before Sept. 20.

Only 160 teeners can be accommodated— so reservations will be on a first come, first served basis.

OUTDOOR LORE, nature study, campfire sessions, field dog handling, firearm safety, actual firing on range, boat safety, outdoor photography and identification are a few of the subjects that will be presented by experts.

The public is invited to attend and watch but the sessions must be reserved for the Coonskin Cappers.

Ohio's 1966 squirrel season opens on Sept. 9 and runs until Nov. 12 on private lands and until Dec. 24 on public hunting areas. You may shoot from dawn to dark but not on Sundays. Don't forget to buy a new (purple) hunting license by Sept. 1.

DUE TO THE late May frost, Ohio's nut crop is almost nonexistent. If you really want to get a squirrel or two to fry up, go afield before the season opens and hunt out the few nut trees that are bearing this year, that is where you'll find the bushy-tails.

The mast crop is estimated at only 10 per cent of its usual size this year, pointing out that this will change sharply the habits of the squirrels. They will find it necessary to travel farther to find nuts and many will go without. The squirrels that starve this winter for lack of food will certainly not reproduce next year.

With the chances good for a long and beautiful fall ahead, we are all willing to get out and live it up a bit. Just don't forget to study the game laws before you start thinning out Ohio's wildlife population.

District Five (southwestern Ohio) Supervisor Richard Francis arrested four adults and a minor for killing coons out of season on a trip sponsored by a coon hunting club. Even the poachers are organized in Highland County. Ohio's coon season doesn't open until Nov. 4 and closes Feb. 18.

'Fearless' Predictions

Well, here we go again, sports fans — the "Fearless One"—out to improve on a fantastic accuracy percentage amassed last season.

Here's how I see the opening weekend of activity:

NORTH AT WORTHINGTON —Both squads improved. Could be repeat of last year's squeaker. Try . . . North.

CARROLL AT CANAL WINCHESTER — Bad news for all my Indian fans in C-W. I see it as . . . Carroll.

EAST AT STEUBENVILLE C. C. — Tigers won this one last fall and look tough enough to repeat. East. n

MARION FRANKLIN AT HAMILTON TOWNSHIP — Rangers should be better but that's an awful big hunk to bite off as an opener. M-F.

EASTMOOR AT HARTLEY — Should be tighter than last year. We'll take Hawk's speed over Warriors' size. Hartley.

FRANKLIN HGTS. AT MIFFLIN — Falcons rebuilding but they were last fall and still won, so . . . F-H.

ST. MARY AT FAIRFIELD SCHOOL FOR BOYS—Rams small in size and numbers. FSFB.

PICKERINGTON AT NEW ALBANY — Eagles should soar this fall. New Albany.

WALNUT RIDGE AT TEAYS VALLEY—Scotties have new coach, improved squad. Looks like reversal of '65's tight contest. W-R.

HILLIARD AT GRANDVIEW — Bobcats pulled surprise last time but won't do it again. Hilliard.

CENTRAL AT ZANESVILLE —Pirates' perennial opening foe is always tough and Bucs aren't as strong as in past. Zanesville.

CHILLICOTHE AT WEST — We'll try Cowboys on a hunch. West.

DESALES AT LINDEN— Should be a real scrap. Stallions starter shy, Panthers vastly improved. Edge to . . . Linden.

GROVEPORT AT WEST JEFFERSON — Riders should be improved and looking for revenge but Cruisers should be Mid-Eight contender. Groveport.

BEXLEY AT LOGAN — This has been a loss for Lions two straight seasons now, but they got closer last time, might have enough Friday. Bexley.

READY AT WHETSTONE — Braves another City League "arrival". "11" this fall. Try . . . Whetstone.

BUCKEYE VALLEY AT DUBLIN — Shamrock passing could prove me wrong but . . . B-V.

CIRCLEVILLE AT GROVE CITY — Greyhounds on the comeback trail but they've got a tiger by the tail here. Circleville.

WATTERSON AT SOUTH — Should be much closer than last season as Bulldogs look much better. Eagles aren't hurting, however, so . . . Watterson.

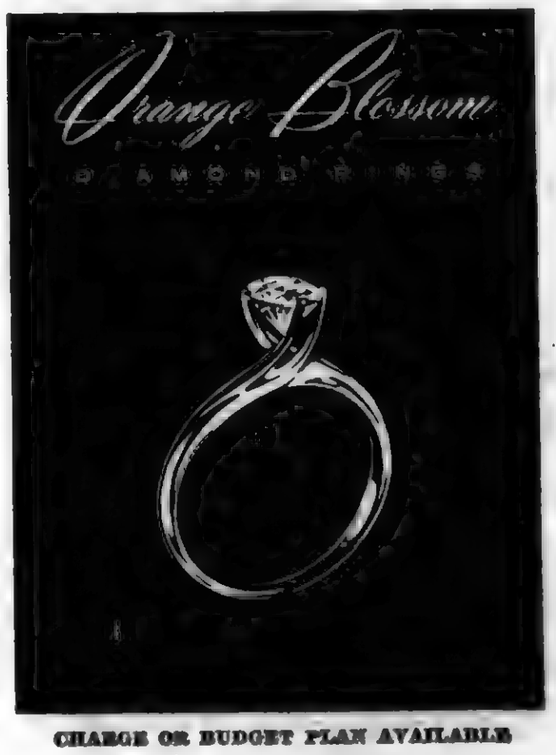
PLEASANT VIEW AT BROOKHAVEN — Reversal of last year's opener with Panthers, behind Hess, on top this time. P-V.

DANVILLE AT ACADEMY— Defending loop champs give Vikings rough introduction to Mid-State line-up. Danville.

REYNOLDSBURG AT GAHANNA — Both lost plenty off fine '65 elevens. Raiders are due for a win over Lions. By a nose . . . Reynoldsburg.

WESTERVILLE AT WHITEHALL — Husky Ram line should come to the fore against improved Wildcat lineup. Whitehall.

LANCASTER AT ARLINGTON — Can't knock the unbeaten champs with that impressive win streak but it was close last season, might be again. Arlington.



Colts Play In OBFF Preview

The Reynoldsburg Colts (115 pound entry) will play in the Ohio Boys Football Foundation preview this Saturday night at 7 p.m. on the Mifflin High field. There will be nine oth r teams represented.

Susan Marshall has been selected to serve as Queen for the Colts' team. She is one of the Colts' six cheerleaders. Tickets for the preview are being sold by all Youth football members in Reynoldsburg.

pin news

Keglers' Korner

by norma kirkendall

Bowlers may be eligible for a 1967 Rambler — ask your proprietor for full information on qualifiers for the "Let's Go Bowling" TV show sponsored by the Columbus BPAA. Dick Schorr will MC and Annie Shaw will repeat as scorekeeper.

How to be a good bowler? ACTION — get in there and bowl. COURAGE—keep trying. KNOWLEDGE — learn the fundamentals — then practice, practice, practice. That's all there is to it!

SCOREKEEPING is important even to casual bowlers. A strike is all pins down on the first ball. A spare is all down on second ball. But there is more to it. Refer to either ABC or WIBC Bowler's Manuals for a complete but simple explanation of scoring.

What's A Dead Ball? A dead ball shall be declared for any of the following reasons:

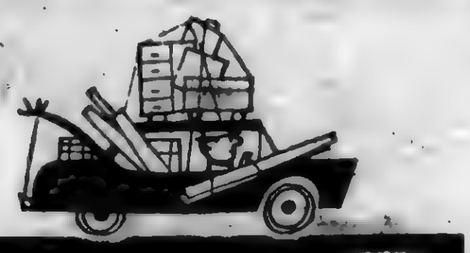
- One or more pins missing from the setup (must be called to attention immediately after delivery).
- When one player or the leadoff man of both teams bowls on the wrong lane, and the error is discovered before another player has bowled. (When more than one bowler on the same team bowls on the wrong lane, no dead ball is declared, game is completed and adjustment made for next game).
- When a player is physically interferred with.
- When any pins at which the bowler is shooting are knocked down in any manner as the player is delivering and before the ball reaches the pins.
- When a delivered ball comes into contact with any foreign obstacle.
- When a ball is declared dead, the ball does not count and ping must be re-spotted after the cause for declaring a dead ball is removed.

• A TURKEY IS THREE strikes in a row and seven-year old Jimmy Bradley did it in open bowling at Aero last week — then guttered twice. Not much score but a big thrill!

Girls — long, beautiful fingernails are attractive — but dangerous in bowling. If you've ever suffered the pain of breaking one (sure to happen) you'll get out the clippers. Also — in protecting your nails if you are not relaxed on your grip, lower scores or broken skin may result. Decide which — vanity or scores.

The new season is starting now and we hope soon to have huge scores and interesting events to report.

Sporting Chances



Al Geiberger, the national PGA champion, explains how he conquered the difficult Firestone:

"This course is so hard and so long (7,180 yards with a par of 70) you've got to play full shots. You've really got to let go. You don't play any short little shots and place it here and place it there.

"I let myself go. And, of course, I putted real well."

WITH THE closing of racing at River Downs in Cincinnati and Ellis Park in Kentucky this week, interest in the thoroughbred sport will turn to Beulah Park where the 37-day fall meeting will get under way Saturday, Sept. 17, and continue through Saturday, Oct. 29.

Nine races will be staged daily except on Saturdays when 10 races will make up the programs. Post time on weekdays will be 2 p.m. and on Saturday the first race will go to the post at 1:15.

"Igloo Club" Formed To Foster Hockey

A group of 50 young men has found a way to "think cool." The group, called the Igloo Club, is being formed to boost the Columbus Checkers, the city's new ice hockey team.

Heading the Igloo Club is Peter Halliday, sales manager at Vercoe & Co., a brokerage firm, and former captain of the Bexley High football team. Halliday helped bring professional hockey to the city.

DURING THE hockey season, the Igloo Club will meet twice a month to view action hockey film and hear Checker players analyze the game. Luncheon meetings will be held in downtown hotels and restaurants. The Igloo Club will also travel as guests of the Checkers to several out-of-town hockey games.

But right now, Halliday's prime goal is to tell "the hockey story" to Columbusites and to spearhead the Checker's season ticket drive.

All those interested in joining the Igloo Club should phone the Columbus Checkers, 228-4321, or Halliday at 224-7131.

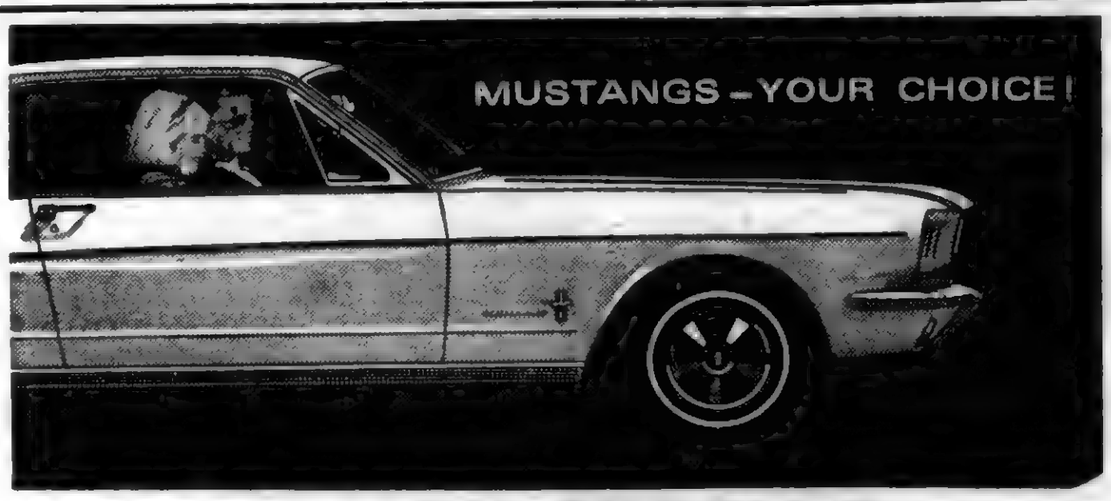
School Set To Open Sept. 19

The Childhood League's Pre-School for Slow Learners, designed to prepare slow-learning children for entry into public school special education classes, will begin its program for the year on Sept. 19.

The school is geared to children between four and seven years old with an IQ of from 50-75. To be accepted, children must be ambulatory and must provide their own transportation.

Fees are based on the family's ability to pay. The League meets about 95 percent of the school's operating expenses through its fall campaign for advertising on waste containers in the downtown and suburban areas; its Merry-Go-Round Show and program and contributors.



Heading the school staff is Mrs. Charles Hoffman, who holds bachelor's degrees in psychology and sociology and a master's degree in child development and family relations.

Assisting her are two experienced teachers and Childhood League volunteers.

The program is based on development of self care, language skills, motor coordination, socialization and emotional control. Also provided is a swimming program at the Columbus State School.

Small classes insure a greater student-teacher relationship. Parents are kept in close contact with the school to help them understand their child's handicap and increase their ability to help the child develop.

The school is located at 850 S. 18th-st on the Near East Side.

Woman Killed At Speedway

"A freak accident" in the final race of Sunday night's Labor Day championship program at the Columbus Motor Speedway left one spectator dead, another in critical condition, three more with bruises and a race driver in poor condition.

The chain of events, before some 5,000 fans, started on the fourth turn of the sixth lap of the late-model championship feature. A wheel snapped off the race car of 30-year-old Bill Rogers, 200 N. Grener-st, Columbus, causing his car to crash through the steel hub-rail of the track. His car then hit the brick restraining wall and burst into flames.

Quick work on the part of the speedway fire truck put out the fire and Rogers was rushed to St. Anthony's Hospital, where his condition was listed as critical. He was suffering from multiple cuts and possible internal injuries.

The wheel that came off Rogers' car bounced on the speedway's blacktop surface, became sky-bound and cleared the 30-foot safety fence, then came down in the midst of the fans, hitting five spectators, who, along with Rogers, were rushed to St. Anthony's in ambulances from the Shaw-Davis Funeral Home, the Columbus Fire Department and the Columbus Speedway.

Dead on arrival was Mrs. Bessie Amos, 42, wife of George Amos, 1661 Williams-rd, Columbus, who apparently received the full impact of the falling wheel. Her daughter, Sandra Denney, 21, 2200 Williams-rd, was listed in critical condition.

It was the first time that a car wheel had ever cleared the Williams-rd raceway's safety-fence and the first spectator injury in more than 15 years at the Southside track.

Korte Writes To Community

Open Letter to Spectator Readers:

During the past month I have been the subject of a number of articles and editorials in this paper. As a result of this I have been accused by a segment of our community with attempting to undermine the Hilltop YMCA and its Board of Management.

In order to clarify my position, I must state that what you have read in this newspaper was not instigated by me. I do not feel I should refute supposed "half truths" which some people charged were contained in the articles.

Fortunately, no one in our community is big enough to control our local press. The policy f The Spectator in handling this matter is, of course, their business. Apparently the method used disturbed certain parties who were involved in the action taken.

The course that I have followed throughout the past two months was one of cautiousness. A number of individuals and groups wanted to show their indignation with this decision in a number of ways. I personally informed these people that actions such as they contemplated would not help the Hilltop YMCA or me.

I have maintained since I was aware of the action of the Executive Committee that the Hilltop YMCA is much bigger than any one man, be he a staff or Board member, and continue to believe this way. The Hilltop YMCA has a fine program to offer the residents of our community and needs the continued support of all interested people.

My 11 year association with the Hilltop YMCA has been a fruitful experience and during this time I have always maintained a policy of helping anyone who needed help. In order to continue as an effective force in our community, the Hilltop "Y" must expand its services to residents of our total community.

My family will remain in this community and will participate in the programs of the Hilltop YMCA. With the advent of a new staff a concentrated effort by all members of the Hilltop YMCA will be necessary for the "Y" to continue progressing as it must.

I would like to thank the staff of The Spectator and our many friends in this community for the support and encouragement given to us during my tenure at the Hilltop YMCA.

Sincerely,
Bert W. Korte

Way Paved To Extend Rt. 316

It's been a struggle and a long one—but it looks as is Ashville's hopes to have the State extend Rt. 316 up Longst to meet Rt. 752 are at last going to be realized.

Three years ago, city officials under the leadership of Mayor Charles Morrison contacted the State to learn the feasibility of such a plan.

Through such an extension, it would be possible for curbs and gntters to be installed along the northern stretch of the thoroughfare between the old corporation line (parallel with the alley beyond the IGA store) and the new city limits.

A SECOND reason for pushing the change-over was that this move would relieve the city of the obligation of snow removal which has been quite a problem in the past (State plows have been coming up Main-st from the west and stopping at the main intersection in the town.

The delay has been caused by the fact that the state would not take over the highway until a 60-foot right-of-way was secured on the northern end of the street which abuts properties annexed in recent years.

This right-o-way had to be secured through the signatures of the freeholders, and the circulation of these petitions proved a rather tedious process.

PROPERTY OWNERS were reluctant to see the street widened and some time elapsed before all Doubting Thomases were convinced that the State has no intention of widening the street, but that the 60-foot right-of-way is a prerequisite for state dedication.

According to city officials, the petitions are now in order and in the hands of Dave Kraft, village solicitor, ready for submission to the State Highway Department.

Morrison believes that if Kraft expedites the matter in the manner expected, the streets will be dedicated to the State this fall.

ALTHOUGH it is improbable any work will be started on curbs and gutters this season, at least the snow removal problem will be solved for this coming winter.

Dr. Weaver Plugs Value Of Counsel

The role of providing students with guidance does not fall exclusively to the counselors of a school.

Dr. George Weaver, superintendent of Service in Guidances and Testing for the State of Ohio drummed at this relatively new concept of a teacher's responsibilities when he spoke before the faculty and administration of Hamilton Local Schools last week.

Specifically he pointed out that each faculty member can be a counselor by example of his own personality and performance, his sensitivity to individual needs of the children, by leadership in group discussion of common personal problems and by realizing the special guidance value of each subject he is teaching.

Dr. Weaver is particularly emphatic in the concept that a subject must be taught with the dual goal of producing not only an educated youth but one who understands the vocational value of the knowledge he thus acquires.

He explained this can be interpreted to mean that the youngster who learns the fundamentals of written composition is learning to communicate in the business world he will enter, the math he studies is a tool in any vocational field and the history of yesterday is a guideline to the employe and citizen of tomorrow.

67 Young Ladies Compete

Leading the Labor Day parade in Canal Winchester Monday were the four young ladies who, with their courts, were named Labor Day royalty for 1966.

Margie Winters was named Miss Canal Winchester, the title reserved for contestants between 16 and 18, with Van Miles and Ronda Hanna first and second runners-up in a field of eight.

In the Junior Miss contest for younger teens, Patti Jamison was crowned queen with Marcena Taylor and Cheryl Wood coming in second and third among the nine contestants.

Susan Ricart paraded her charms against those of 30 other youngsters between 10 and 12 years old to become Little Miss Canal Winchester. Vicki Wood and Lynn Whitmer served on her court.

Of the 20 brave little girls, many obviously "quaking in their boots" vying for the title of Tiny Miss Canal Winchester, red-haired Kathy Von Schriltz pattered to victory, followed by Kim Blagg and Janet Burtner.

In addition to tehir team's trophies and flowers donated by the Canal Winchester Boosters Club, the Huntington National Bank and Sims Florists and the $50 Savings Bond given by the Canal Winchester Bank won by Margie Winters, gifts and services were contributed by Bill Jenkins, Bollenbaugh Hardware, C&O Railroad, DeLuca's, Denny Allen, Holley's Department Store, Ken Eubank, King Arthur Steak House, Love's Restaurant, Shades Restaurant, Shaw's Jewelry and Zollinger Hair Fashions.

Dr. Frank B. Rasor filled his traditional role of emcee while Chuck Carpenter and Chris Hanner acted as escorts for the Miss Canal Winchester contestants when they reappeared in evenings gowns after making their debut in bathing suits.

Judges for the event included Robert Southwick, Franklin County commissioner; Joseph DeLuca, owner and operator of DeLuca's Beauty Salons; Diane Courtright McCloy, Miss Ohio of 1965, and Michael Montevey, Revlon representative for Lazarus.

Last year's royalty, Miss Kathy Knowlton, Linda Taylor and Janet Taylor, returned to the spotlight once again as they crowned their successors.

Miss Linda Epps served as chairman of the smooth-running event, aided by Marian Hockman, Lani Jay, Peggy Epps and Barbari Coci to whom she gave special thanks as her "memory."

IT WAS A DAY for blondes, brunettes and redheads when the winners of the 1966 Canal Winchester Beauty Contest were named Friday. From the left are dark haired Margie Winters, named Miss Canal Winchester; Patti Jamison, Junior Miss Canal Winchester, and Little Miss Canal Winchester, Susan Ricart, both of whom are blonde, and in the foreground little Kathy Von Schriltz, who wears the tiara of Tiny Miss Canal Winchester atop her red curls.

Hamilton Local Bus Situation Increases In Its Complexity

The longer John Savel, Hamilton Township superintendent, looks at his busing situation, the more like Chinese puzzle it looks.

At the final count before press time requests had been received from 233 students for transportation to private and parochial schools.

The list reads St. Ladislas, 95; Holy Family, 70; Wehrle, 10; St. Mary 5; Bishop Hartley, 20; St. Leo, 8, and the Columbus Academy 5.

HE EXPLAINED that 42 percent of the students to be transported are living on Lockbourne AFB.

Last year, the district transported 1,669 students.

Although the percentage of increase is not overwhelming, the routing is with a starting array of take-up and dismissal hours, and some buses loaded far below capacity.

The district purchased three second-hand buses for this purpose, each of which will run double routes.

The question of whether the school will continue to take students to the Academy after the first week has not been settled.

THE LAW excuses a district from transporting to schools more than 30 minutes driving time beyond the school of their normal attendance area.

According to Savel, if the Academy trip proves to extend too far beyond this time limit, the route may be dropped.

Next to the ubiquitous spade, hoe and rake the trowel is probably the most nearly indispensable tool a gardener has. Its uses and abuses are limitless. It's a real tool, not a gadget!

It should be solidly made, generous in size and well joined and heavy. Just ask me. I suppose that I personally have been responsible for the slow demise of more trowels than any other gardener.

Of course, it must be said here and now, I have not always been too careful in my selection of said tool. I have seen and bought "bargain" trowels. But it took several lessons before I was convinced.

Of course the usually stated use of a trowel is for planting small plants in previously prepared beds. What about replacing bedding plants and perennials in established beds where plants have failed? In a crowded space such as this the use of a spade is suicidal and the use of the lowly trowel must come to the fore. Have you ever tried to use a spade or shovel to plant something among rocks or walls? Impossible? You bet it was, and you had to turn to your trusty trowel.

Way Paved To Extend Rt. 316

It's been a struggle and a long one—but it looks as is Ashville's hopes to have the State extend Rt. 316 up Longst to meet Rt. 752 are at last going to be realized.

Three years ago, city officials under the leadership of Mayor Charles Morrison contacted the State to learn the feasibility of such a plan.

Through such an extension, it would be possible for curbs and gutters to be installed along the northern stretch of the thoroughfare between the old corporation line (parallel with the alley beyond the IGA store) and the new city limits.

A SECOND reason for pushing the change-over was that this move would relieve the city of the obligation of snow removal which has been quite a problem in the past (State plows have been coming up Main-st from the west and stopping at the main intersection in the town.

The delay has been caused by the fact that the state would not take over the highway until a 60-foot right-of-way was secured on the northern end of the street which abuts properties annexed in recent years.

This right-o-way had to be secured through the signatures of the freeholders, and the circulation of these petitions proved a rather tedious process.

PROPERTY OWNERS were reluctant to see the street widened and some time elapsed before all Doubting Thomases were convinced that the State has no intention of widening the street, but that the 60-foot right-of-way is a prerequisite for state dedication.

According to city officials, the petitions are now in order and in the hands of Dave Kraft, village solicitor, ready for submission to the State Highway Department.

Morrison believes that if Kraft expedites the matter in the manner expected, the streets will be dedicated to the State this fall.

ALTHOUGH it is improbable any work will be started on curbs and gutters this season, at least the snow removal problem will be solved for this coming winter.

67 Young Ladies Compete

Leading the Labor Day parade in Canal Winchester Monday were the four young ladies who, with their courts, were named Labor Day royalty for 1966.

Margie Winters was named Miss Canal Winchester, the title reserved for contestants between 16 and 18, with Van Miles and Ronda Hanna first and second runners-up in a field of eight.

In the Junior Miss contest for younger teens, Patti Jamison was crowned queen with Marcena Taylor and Cheryl Wood coming in second and third among the nine contestants.

Susan Ricart paraded her charms against those of 30 other youngsters between 10 and 12 years old to become Little Miss Canal Winchester. Vicki Wood and Lynn Whitmer served on her court.

Of the 20 brave little girls, many obviously "quaking in their boots" vying for the title of Tiny Miss Canal Winchester, red-haired Kathy Von Schriltz pattered to victory, followed by Kim Blagg and Janet Burtner.

In addition to tehir team's trophies and flowers donated by the Canal Winchester Boosters Club, the Huntington National Bank and Sims Florists and the $50 Savings Bond given by the Canal Winchester Bank won by Margie Winters, gifts and services were contributed by Bill Jenkins, Bollenbaugh Hardware, C&O Railroad, DeLuca's, Denny Allen, Holley's Department Store, Ken Eubank, King Arthur Steak House, Love's Restaurant, Shades Restaurant, Shaw's Jewelry and Zollinger Hair Fashions.

Dr. Frank B. Rasor filled his traditional role of emcee while Chuck Carpenter and Chris Hanner acted as escorts for the Miss Canal Winchester contestants when they reappeared in evenings gowns after making their debut in bathing suits.

Judges for the event included Robert Southwick, Franklin County commissioner; Joseph DeLuca, owner and operator of DeLuca's Beauty Salons; Diane Courtright McCloy, Miss Ohio of 1965, and Michael Montevey, Revlon representative for Lazarus.

Last year's royalty, Miss Kathy Knowlton, Linda Taylor and Janet Taylor, returned to the spotlight once again as they crowned their successors.

Miss Linda Epps served as chairman of the smooth-running event, aided by Marian Hockman, Lani Jay, Peggy Epps and Barbari Coci to whom she gave special thanks as her "memory."

IT WAS A DAY for blondes, brunettes and redheads when the winners of the 1966 Canal Winchester Beauty Contest were named Friday. From the left are dark haired Margie Winters, named Miss Canal Winchester; Patti Jamison, Junior Miss Canal Winchester, and Little Miss Canal Winchester, Susan Ricart, both of whom are blonde, and in the foreground little Kathy Von Schriltz, who wears the tiara of Tiny Miss Canal Winchester atop her red curls.

Dr. Weaver Plugs Value Of Counsel

The role of providing students with guidance does not fall exclusively to the counselors of a school.

Dr. George Weaver, superintendent of Service in Guidances and Testing for the State of Ohio drummed at this relatively new concept of a teacher's responsibilities when he spoke before the faculty and administration of Hamilton Local Schools last week.

Specifically he pointed out that each faculty member can be a counselor by example of his own personality and performance, his sensitivity to individual needs of the children, by leadership in group discussion of common personal problems and by realizing the special guidance value of each subject he is teaching.

Dr. Weaver is particularly emphatic in the concept that a subject must be taught with the dual goal of producing not only an educated youth but one who understands the vocational value of the knowledge he thus acquires.

He explained this can be interpreted to mean that the youngster who learns the fundamentals of written composition is learning to communicate in the business world he will enter, the math he studies is a tool in any vocational field and the history of yesterday is a guideline to the employe and citizen of tomorrow.

Hamilton Local Bus Situation Increases In Its Complexity

The longer John Savel, Hamilton Township superintendent, looks at his busing situation, the more like Chinese puzzle it looks.

At the final count before press time requests had been received from 233 students for transportation to private and parochial schools.

The list reads St. Ladislas, 95; Holy Family, 70; Wehrle, 10; St. Mary 5; Bishop Hartley, 20; St. Leo, 8, and the Columbus Academy 5.

HE EXPLAINED that 42 percent of the students to be transported are living on Lockbourne AFB.

Last year, the district transported 1,669 students.

Although the percentage of increase is not overwhelming, the routing is with a starting array of take-up and dismissal hours, and some buses loaded far below capacity.

The district purchased three second-hand buses for this purpose, each of which will run double routes.

The question of whether the school will continue to take students to the Academy after the first week has not been settled.

THE LAW excuses a district from transporting to schools more than 30 minutes driving time beyond the school of their normal attendance area.

According to Savel, if the Academy trip proves to extend too far beyond this time limit, the route may be dropped.

It's For Baseball

Following the Teays Valley-Circleville game this Friday, a Jerry Rasor dance featuring the Emeralds will be held at the Ashville Elementary gym from 9 until midnight. The Teays Valley Youth Baseball League is sponsoring the affair.

Three Levies Asked

Ashville Village officials are concerned about the fate of the 1.5 mill street levy villagers will be asked to approve in November. As it actually represents no increase of taxes as a like five-year street lighting levy expires this year with the lighting program completed Mayor Charles Morrison had hoped it would be smooth sailing for the funds to repair Ashville streets. However, he recently learned that in addition to a 6 mill renewal levy, the Teays Valley School District is asking an okay on three additional mills. This competition for tax millage is the cause of official concern.

Delegates Chosen

Representing the Tri-County Kiwanis Club at the Ohio convention in Dayton Sept. 25-28 will be Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Moore of Canal Winchester and Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Braun and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Anderson of Lithopolis. Some 350 clubs with a membership of nearly 17,600 will send delegates to the district meeting.

It's Flown With Honor

A place of honor has been reserved in the remodeled council chambers of Ashville for the brand new eight by five American Flag presented to the village by the Ashville Kiwanis Club. With it came a letter explaining it has been flown over the Nation's Capitol. The presentation was made by Don Forquer and accepted by Mayor Charles Morrison.

Harvest Festival Dated

With the fruits of the harvest season decorating the chancel, St. Paul's Lutheran Church will celebrate its annual Harvest Festival Sunday, Sept. 18 at 8 and 10:30 a.m. The Rev. John O. Lang will speak on "Now Without Witness." Each worshipper is asked to bring canned or other non-perishable food for distribution among the needy.

HE 'OXED' FOR ONE MORE

IF THE OX cavorting at the Canal Winchester Labor Day parade had been the genuine variety, the mound of roast oxen sandwiches would have undoubtedly given him nightmares. But he was really very human, and like most area residents, he'll be headed for the annual Ox Roast this Saturday, Sept. 17, just west of Hendron-rd on Groveport-pk. Sponsored by the Groveport Lutheran Church to support its building campaign, the affair, scheduled between 4 and 8 p.m., features pit-roasted ox sandwiches and all the trimmings for $1.25 with extra sandwiches and carryout service available. According to Mrs. Marvin Thompson, 111 Church-st, Groveport, publicity chairman, who is shown above with Robert Queen, 37 Larson-dr, Groveport, ticket chairman, the oxen treat will be roasted for 24 hours and the menu includes baked beans, cole slaw, applesauce, homemade pie and cake and a choice of beverages.

OHIO'S LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday, Sept. 14, 1966 274-1155 10 Cents

The educated guess of Phillip K. Williams, Madison School superintendent, indicated enrollment would increase this fall by 300 to hit the figure of 3375.

He was right — as far as he went.

His predictions for once fell short, as actual noses counted at the beginning of this week are 3,537.

AS COULD be expected, most of the increased enrollment is at the kindergarten and first grade level which involved establishing an additional first grade and two second grades at Asbury and juggling nine pupils from Edwards to Groveport and eight from Brice to Asbury to eliminate some of the overcrowding.

Williams stated that originally the current enrollment had been predicted for this fall, but the slow-down in building in Blacklick estates had caused the revision downward.

Benis Lutz, Teays Valley superintendent, proved right when he claimed that his estimate of 38 new students in September was an extremely conservative one.

ACTUALLY ANOTHER 30 showed up, but, contrary to the situation in Madison, the pupils were fairly evenly distributed among all grade levels.

This resulted, he explained, in not only the self-contained classrooms of the elementaries but the high school classes being heavily loaded.

Canal Winchester enrollment, as reported by Superintendent Carl Miller, is still a matter of surmise with kindergarten not taking up until this week. However, early figures indicate Miller was not far off when he forecast 44 additional students to bring the student population up to 1,080, to be housed in facilities designed to house about 600 pupils.

THE ENROLLMENT in Hamilton Local, the largest district in the Southeast, failed to make the 200 jump predicted by Superintendent John Savel.

He attributes the stabilizing of the student population in the neighborhood of 3,600 to a large number of children who have asked for and received public transportation to private schools under the Fair Bus Bill.

He indicated that many of the 220 children Hamilton is busing to Columbus schools would be enrolled at Hamilton if the transportation were not available.

IT WAS STRICTLY NON-PARTISAN

WHEN PRESIDENT Johnson stopped for a few minutes in Canal Winchester last week he was too late for one of the real treats of the annual parade. Apparently a little uncertain about the executive's sense of humor, the "wedding party" as portrayed by memebers of the Conservatory Club made themselves quite scarce when the presidential motorcade approached the village.

Street Repairs Under Way

With the okay given by Bob Kerner of the county engineers office to go ahead with advertising, it appears the proposed College-st improvement in Groveport will be completed this fall.

ACCORDING to Mayor Robert Baer, bids cannot be awarded until after Sept. 28 but permission to begin advertising removes a threatened delay that put the 1966 completion of the project in doubt.

At 10 a.m. this Monday, the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. started the removal of the utility poles along the east side of College, the preliminary step to widening the street.

AT THE SAME time the Phillip Road Oiling Service began the resurfacing of all the uncurbed streets in the village.

Baer stated that the necessary repairs to Main-st which will remove the dips left when sewers were laid will also be undertaken immediately.

Schools Ask 'Good Taste'

Administrators of the four Southeast school districts share a common idea.

They all believe it is mandatory that their junior and senior high school studentts not only act like ladies and gentlemen but look the part as well.

And this means that extremes in dress and grooming are out—way out.

SEVERAL YOUNG men at Hamilton learned this lesson the hard way last week.

According to Principal John Ruehling, the message came through loud and clear to the lads who appeared on opening day without a trip to the nearest tonsorial establishment.

By the end of the week they were all reentered in their classrooms, sans the shaggy dog look.

POSSIBLY A LITTLE more adamant on the subject of dress than other schools, Hamilton also bans slacks and shorts at all school functions, including athletic events.

"We expect our students to dress conventionally and in good taste," Supt. John Savel explained, and "we will not condone other modes of dress."

Canal Winchester Superintendent Carl Miller stated that in the past there has been no need for a written policy concerning dress, as the students have exercised good judgment in the matter.

"HOWEVER, by the first of the week," he stated, "this may be changed."

He indicated that the need for a trip to the barber had been noticed in the case of several students, and that if they ignored the tactful hints to remedy the situation, diplomacy would go out the window and the offenders would go out the door.

Groveport - Madison Superintendent Phil Williams reports, is adhering to the policy adopted by the board in September, 1962, which calls for "normally-accepted" dress and hair style.

HE EXPLAINED this is interpreted by the staff to mean that boys will wear both socks and belts and will be clean shaven and that the feminine portion of the student body will avoid "fad" hair styles, excessive make-up and garments either too short or too tight.

According to Williams, students have generally accepted these standards and non-conformers have been in a distinct minority. These few are dealt with by a counselor of their own sex.

AT TEAYS VALLEY Superintendent Benis Lutz reports that it is well understood that the lady and gentleman concept is "in" and that any beatnik dress or Beatle coiffures are "out."

Comment And Criticism

editorials . . .

No, Virginia

A reader recently wrote The Spectator and commented she liked the paper, had been getting it free for some time and wondered if The Spectator was playing Santa Claus.

No, Virginia, there is no such thing as a Santa Claus in the newspaper business.

The newsprint this newspaper is printed on costs $140 a ton. It was just increased $5. The Spectator uses a railroad car full of it every month.

This newspaper is printed by highly-skilled union craftsmen who are paid prevailing wage scales.

The newsboy who delivers it is paid promptly each month.

College-trained reporters and editors provide news coverage of your particular area. Like most newspapermen, they are not overpaid, but they are paid a salary twice a month.

More than a half million dollars worth of mechanical equipment is used to produce this newspaper. The total payroll is close to $500,000 a year. Then there are trucks, taxes, and telephones (the phones alone cost $600 a month).

So you see, Virginia, The Spectator is not free. Nearly half of our readers are paid subscribers. You can become one too. Simply contact your carrier and pay him 32 cents a month, or call The Spectator and get a year's mail subscription for only $3.50.

You can also clip out the subscription blank in this copy and mail it in. We'll bill you later.

If it will make you happy, you can address it to "Santa Claus."

Forewarned Is Forearmed

The second riot of the year in the Franklin County jail may well lead to a new jail to replace the decrepit Fulton-st structure.

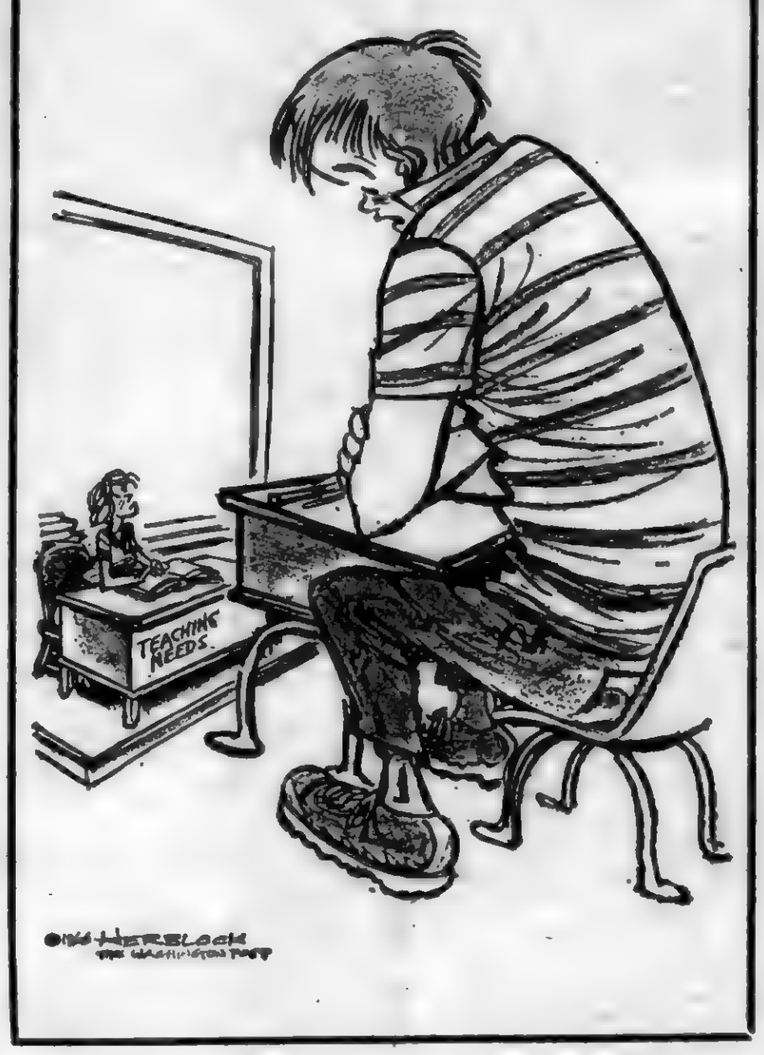
But it should also serve as a warning to state corrections officials responsible for the equally decrepit Ohio Penitentiary on Spring-st.

The conditions that led to the county jail riots exist at the pen in even greater proportion. Added to them are the problems of a guard force sorely understaffed and badly underpaid.

A jail riot involving several hundred inmates is dangerous. A prison riot that involves thousands of hardened criminals could be a disaster.

There's an old expression that "forewarned is forearmed." Let the state be forewarned now, before it's too late.

Parkway For Progress



Now that the courts have dismissed the opposition of the Save the Scenic Valley Committee to the proposed Olentangy Parkway, the committee would do well to give up the ghost and let this vital highway link go through.

An out-of-town judge, brought in specifically to avoid local prejudices, ruled that the outcome of the May primary that approved the parkway route should not be overturned because a few scattered voters lost the right to vote.

As this newspaper has contended for the past year, the Olentangy Parkway is vital to the growth of North Columbus. It will break one of the city's worst bottlenecks. And it will not destroy the Olentangy Valley, but rather open it for enjoyment by the public rather than a small minority of landowners.

Progress will not be stopped by small minds working in selfish paths. Columbus is growing too fast for that.

"What's New, Shorty?"

All-American Game

Football is sort of an All-American pageant.

Surrounded by thousands of spectators, eleven gladiators face eleven other gladiators in what, for a better term, is a one-hour war.

The rules are known by both armies, as in chess, and the players on the field move in foreordained patterns.

BEARDSHEAR

The thing about football that makes it so great is that each and every play is a potential touchdown. If the play works on the field as it works on paper, the runner will take the ball to the goal.

The only hindrance is that the defensive game is playing just as hard to prevent that runner from reaching that goal.

This is the heart of the drama, the central conflict. And it is just this, coupled with the rough and tumble of the game itself that makes the spectacle what it is.

In addition to being a fine spectator sport, football offers some fringe benefits. There's something exciting about bundling up on a bright fall day and joining some 80,000 other people to watch one's chosen team do or die for old alma mater.

There's a camaraderie in blending one's shouts with those of many others.

There's a secret delight in sipping something from a flask. It moves all through the body and combats the chill of a brisk wind.

There is the warm remembrance of school and the ever-present reminder of the younger generation among the spectators.

There is the pageantry of the half-time show in which a crisply uniformed band struts its stuff.

There is the recollection of homecomings, college songs, steins of beer and youth.

Going to the football game is like recapturing a part of the past . . . a nostalgic revisitation to a place where once one was young.

Wants Facts

To The Editor:

If Mr. Carson can show (letter in The Spectator, August 31) that Harry Hopkins actually made the "tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect" statement, it would be a service to historians and to us all. If not, then he owes us the obligation of remaining silent until he can back his political views with facts.

The above statement was attributed to Mr. Hopkins in the late 1930's by Arthur Krock, New York Times columnist still active today. When asked subsequently by a Congressional committee for the source of the above statement, Mr. Krock admitted that he had not heard Mr. Hopkins actually make it but gotten it as a rumor.

In defense of having printed a second or third-hand account in his column, Arthur Krock argued that it was the kind of statement that Mr. Hopkins could have made.

I am as politically concerned and committed as Mr. Carson, though undoubtedly in a different direction. I hope that, in the future, we all will try to examine "evidence" favorable to our own side with greater scrutiny.

Very truly yours,
Leon H. Warshay

Asks Law

To The Editor:

Poor, rejected dogs which started life as cute puppies, wanting only love, and willing to return much more love and affection than they would receive would stop being at the mercy of careless, disinterested and irresponsible owners if there were not an excessive animal population.

The only way to achieve this would be for the state to have some type of spaying law, requiring mixed breed female dogs and cats to be spayed at the proper age.

How else are we ever going to control this excessive animal population?

Yours truly,
Mrs. H. W.

barry goldwater ★ Is Johnson 'Bungling?' ★

GOLDWATER

Reaction to a recently well-publicized interview of me has raised a question which I am more than happy to answer here in some detail.

During the interview, I described President Johnson as a "bumbling politician" who could be beaten by a Republican candidate in 1968.

Let's look at some facts.

The big win in 1964 was accomplished mainly by avoiding any semblance of debate or discussion of actual issues. More and more Americans are realizing that Lyndon Johnson is still dodging all the important issues of our time, trying not to take a stand on any of them and still substituting sermons for meaningful statements.

I think he has bumbled there.

Viet Nam is an example. Americans are beginning to realize that President Johnson's attempt to please everybody, doves and hawks and even chickens has left us all with a bloody mess on our hands.

The people are beginning to realize that political figures who deal in convictions and not in popularity polls had foreseen every single detail of the developing situation in Viet Nam. If only the President had faced facts frankly, we would be much farther along toward peace than we are now or are likely to be for months or years to come under the off-again, on-again Johnson approach.

The same attempt, to please everybody and to make everybody love him, is proving to be a bumbling tactic in domestic politics as well.

The President's attempts to cultivate businessmen have proven to be equally bumbling. He had most of them fooled for a time, admittedly, but when the chips were down he lashed out at business just as hard as any of his predecessors in a succession of Democratic administrations that have been frankly and openly against business freedom and for government control.

Also, the very arm-twisting tactics which once were supposed to prove how good a politician Mr. Johnson is, are beginning to twist the other way. His pressures on government employes and others to back his policies are a thinly covered pot of scandal that keeps spilling over—as witness the complaints of employes pressured into attending expensive political functions, or even buying war bonds, and also the gathering impatience with the well-heeled President's Club in which men with lucrative connections with the government pay big membership fees in order to enjoy special contacts with Lyndon himself.

In general, however, it is Mr. Johnson's almost frantic catering to special interest groups and voting blocs that may prove to be the most bumbling political action of all.

In short, all of the things Lyndon Johnson has had to do, to get where he is, have built up a considerable pressure of unpaid political bills. And they are now being called in for payment. It was bumbling, I think, for him to have thought the day could be avoided simply by trying to ignore it. (Copyright 1966, Los Angeles Times)

marquis childs ★ Special Session Probable ★

CHILDS

WASHINGTON — President Johnson will call a special session of Congress after the Nov. 8 election to put forward a tax increase and in all probability to request a supplemental appropriation of many billions of dollars to pay for the Viet Nam war.

Whether he can wait until after Nov. 8 to take the steps that seem so urgently required to put restraints on the economy and on the spiraling interest rate is what some members of Congress are asking. They fear that the price rise, coupled with the credit squeeze, will start a slide that cannot be checked if action is put off until mid-November or early December.

If the schedule now contemplated is followed, Congress will adjourn around Oct. 1. It is possible, however, that the session will drag on well into October, and the leaders would then call for a recess and a return after Nov. 8. This would get the President out from under the blame for calling a special session.

With only four to six weeks more of the present session, this leaves hardly time enough to pass a tax bill in view of the backlog of other legislation that must move through the Congressional mill. And the autocrat of the tax process, Chairman Wilbur Mills of the House Ways and Means Committee, could readily invoke a veto on the issue of time alone.

In his sorties around the country, Johnson is telling the crowds that they never had it so good. He spins off figures to show that while prices may have risen a little, incomes have far outpaced the price rise. At times the President sounds as though he were trying to convince himself as well as the crowds that all is for the best in the best possible of worlds.

Despite the continuing dramatic decline of the stock market today, no one would suggest an analogy with that of the crash.

Yet warning signs cannot be ignored. The money squeeze has sent home construction plummeting. The real estate market is slowed. A record inventory of cars on hand coincides with the start of the new-model year.

So Johnson falls back on the rhetoric of you've never had it so good. If the line holds without too much damage until mid-November, he will indeed be in luck. In the meantime, the Bureau of the Budget is working up a massive program for rehabilitation of the cities. That is to be the cornerstone of the President's State of the Union Message in January calculated to take the curse off a tax increase.

In the Senate and House, those who had planned vacations or inspection trips to far away places are not happy at the prospect of coming back in November or December. But under the circumstances they will have no choice. (Copyright, 1966, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

william s. white ★ Wallace Seen As Threat ★

WHITE

WASHINGTON — Republican professionals see the possibility of a threat to the party's 1968 Presidential chances in a small state from a man who surely would never ordinarily deeply engage their attention.

The state is Alabama; the man is the right-wing Democratic Governor, George Wallace. Governor Wallace, barred by the Alabama Constitution from directly succeeding himself, is seeking re-election by proxy through his wife as the official Democratic nominee.

Detached Republicans' nightmare vision is that a George Wallace again triumphant — if this time obliquely — in Alabama in 1966 will strike out nationally in 1968 as a third-party civil rights backlash candidate for President.

A Wallace in the Presidential field in 1968 beyond doubt could draw a substantial protest vote from ultra-conservatives in general and specifically from among those white voters furious either at the legitimate aspirations of the Negroes or at the far-from-legitimate extremism of some of the Negro leaders.

Whatever backing he received, moreover, would, equally beyond doubt, be far more at the expense of the Republican Presidential ticket than of a Democratic ticket headed by President Johnson or, for that matter, by any other nationally prominent Democrat now in sight.

If Gov. George Romney of Michigan should turn out to be the Republican candidate, the party would be "dead in the South at least, from the word go," according to a GOP wheelhorse.

Assuming, alternatively, that Richard Nixon should win the Republican Presidential nomination, the Republican outlook in the South — and, again, also in some of the more racially disturbed Northern areas — would be slightly less bleak but still far from reassuring.

All this may seem rather excessive, but the unalterable inner realities make it in fact much less excessive than superficially it might appear.

The first of these realities is that, for good or for ill, there is indeed a powerful white backlash in this country spreading far beyond the South alone. The second is that by the very violence and determination of his anti-Negro position, George Wallace has made himself into a national champion to all those forces—whether inherently anti-Negro or simply made apoplectically angry by Negro extremism — which are emotionally ready to supply a voting extremism of their own.

This is precisely the state of affairs which moderate politicians, Northern and Southern, had long feared would arrive. That their fears in principle have materialized is no longer in objective doubt. All that remains in doubt is what a Wallace can or will do with those fears in 1968.

Three Year Review Shows Costs Spiral

Little doubt was left in the minds of Madison School Board members that construction costs are spiraling after the architects presented them with a comparison of costs experienced during the past three years.

Asbury Elementary, which was bid in April of 1964, was constructed at a total of $11.96 per square foot. The addition for which the contracts were awarded in September of the following year cost the district $13.46.

And, in keeping with pattern, the bids for Dunloe Elementary, construction of which parallels that of Asbury, came in this summer at $15.16 a square foot.

HIGHER THAN the costs for either elementary, are those for the new Junior High School which were let in the fall of 1965 and totaled $16.18 and those for the Junior High Gym, bid this summer, which hit $18.30.

The discrepancy between elementary and secondary costs was anticipated as the specialized facilities demanded at a junior high level are always higher than the more or less stylized classrooms for elementary pupils.

The resignation of Miss Stephanie Brumage, elementary teacher, tendered because of marital plans, was accepted and four new teachers employed.

THEY INCLUDED Mrs. Jane Phillips of Columbus who is assigned to a second grade at Asbury; Mrs. Diane Rolls of Reynoldsburg who will teach grade one at Asbury and Mrs. Jean Bradley and Mrs. Rita Kramer, both of Columbus who were employed on a half-day basis to teach kindergarten at Brice and Asbury respectively.

An innovation in the school was brought with the approval of several parental contracts to allow reimbursement to parents to transport their children to private schools.

One parent will be paid $1 a day for transporting a child to Columbus Academy while two other parents, each receiving 50 cents a day, will share the responsibility of transporting children from both families to St. Charles.

THIS STEP was taken as one more economically feasible than providing school bus transportation to these particular schools.

Other business included denying one and approving another request for under-age admission, setting up an internal mail delivery system by using the Ford van bus and establishing bus drivers' salaries for the current school year.

Ashville Community Club To Start Park Improvement

According to Art Deal, secretary of the Ashville Community Club, even the rain couldn't stop the annual Fourth of July celebration from being its usual success.

It did dampen receipts somewhat on the big day, and the profits were slightly under those of 1965 which reached an all-time high.

With the funds now available, repair on the bleachers and the shelter house and band stand at the village park will begin immediately. New tables and chairs will be purchased this fall.

Deal added that the balance of the monies will be used to provide the annual Halloween and Christmas parties the service organization throws for the entire community.

MRS. CHRISTIAN FEUCHT

Miss Baer Weds Christian Feucht

The former Miss Nancy Marie Baer became the bride of Mr. Christian L. Feucht in a ceremony at the Saint Mary's Church at Groveport Saturday, Sept. 10.

Mrs. Feucht is the daughter of Mayor and Mrs. Robert Baer of Groveport and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur S. Feucht, 734 Blacklick-st.

The bride was given in marriage by her father at the ceremony performed by Rev. William J. Glavin, CM.

Her gown of white peau de soie with scoop neckline and kabucki sleeves featured an empire waist. A line skirt and full ca hedral train. Appliques of Alencon lace were at the waistline and panels of lace adorned the front and back of the gown.

Pearl and drop crystals accented the lace at the bodice and white peau de soie band formed the headpiece around the chignon hair style worn by the bride whose veil was of English illusion to elbow length.

The bridal bouquet was a cone shaped cascade of white feathered carnations and ivy with a white hybrid cattelya orchid corsage in the center.

Attendants in the church decorated with white glads and asters and emerald and leatherleaf foliage were Mrs. Ronald Hall, sister of the groom who served as matron of honor, Miss Donna Baer, the bride's sister, maid of honor, and Mrs. William Feucht of Minot, N.D., and Miss Elaine Veldhavar of Wickliffe, O., were bridesmaids.

Miss Cindy Haines and Miss Barby Haines acted as junior bridesmaid and flower girls respectively.

Mr. Ronald Ball of Groveport was best man for his brother-in-law and King Baer, Jan Beery and Gary Beggrow served as ushers. Jim Feucht, brother of the bridegroom, was junior usher and his nephew, John Ball, served as ring bearer.

Following a reception in Saint Mary's parish hall, the couple left for a wedding trip in Michigan. After Sept. 18 they will be at home at 840 Hudson-rd in Kent.

The bride is a senior at Kent State and the bridegroom attended Ohio State.

IF I WERE IN KINDERGARTEN, I'd WANT TO GO TO HAMILTON

THE KINDERGARTEN complex built just to the west of Hamilton Central Elementary on Rathmell-rd is unique in that it is a self-contained educational unit, linked to the parent school only by intercom. With four large classrooms it will serve not only the tots from the Central attendance area, but those who ordinarily would suffer along with the make-do facilities at the Obetz school, and the overflow from the over-taxed kindergarten areas at Hamilton South. Among the innovations that would amaze their mothers who probably attended kindergarten in a corner of a school basement or cefeteria are the conveniences tailored strictly to small fry-height. At the left, Kimberly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Garrison, 5171 Fairland-rd, finds tiptoes no longer necessary as she washes her hands, just as Ralph, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Eyssen, 5037 Meadowbrook, finds for the first time in his life he's plenty tall for a quick drink. The carpeted floors, a far cry from the chilly clatter of those of tile, lend themselves perfectly to tete-a-tete discussion groups with the teacher, as Kimberly and Rusty, son of Capt. and Mrs. Donald Harvey, 5290 Edgeview, find out. The acoustical ceilings also have the noise down far below a college roar, allowing several group activities to be carried on simultaneously without a feeling of bedlam. Rusty also learns that he no longer has the slightest excuse in the world for not hanging up his jacket with the shoulder-high coat rack just his size. Each room opens onto either a front or rear courtyard, providing outdoor play areas minus mud, snow and the intrusion of the "big kids." At the far right in the front courtyard, a youngster marvels at the wading pool and exclaims, "Kindergarten was never like this when I was a child."

Farm Science Review Promises Something To Everyone's Taste

Next Wednesday the 1966 Farm Science review will open at Don Scott Field for a three-day program which promises something of interest to everyone who either grows or consumes food, uses machinery or household appliances or simply has a normal curiosity in the world around him.

Sponsored by the OSU College of Agriculture and Home Economics, the Cooperative Extension Service, the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station and the Ohio Exposition commission, every phase of agriculture will be on display.

On the 450 acre plot, the farm equipment of more than 20 manufacturers will be displayed, with actual harvesting of the test plots taking place.

HERALDED as of particular interest to women are the horticultural exhibits which include an herb garden containing 120 herbs and spices, 500 plantings of ornamental shrubs, 43 varieties of geraniums highlighted by the popular "Irene" and the All-American winner of petunia varieties, "Appleblossom."

The homemaker will also be attracted by the demonstrations of electronic cooking, the look at the revolution in the textile world, the scientific answers to laundry problems and a lecture on meeting the problems of a mobile population.

While children will be delighted by the latest in constructive play equipment, the entire family will be able to enjoy the conservation and recreation area which offers a new shelter house, picnic facilities, and a 1.8 acre lake stocked with bass and blue gill.

FOR THOSE with a scientific bent, a cow will be displayed with a "window" in her side, enabling spectators to watch the digestive process.

Parking is free and advance tickets are 50 cents with gate tickets $1.

Shuttle bus service provides sightseeing the easy-on-the-feet way and good food will be available at reasonable prices.

PERSONS who believe there's nothing new under the Ohio unusual crops that will be exhibited. They include cucumbers sun should visit the Farm Science Review at the Ohio State grown in plastic mulch, birdseed crops, sugar, peanuts and rice. University Airport in Northwest Franklin County (Don Scott At the right, Dr. Harold Shoemaker, extension agronomist ex-Field). Here Thomas McNutt, county extension agent, examines amines one of the 90 varieties of corn featured in the "World the luxuriant crop of tobacco which is one of the more than 80 Collection of Corn."

Boosters Need You!

The morning of Saturday, Sept. 24, the members of the Canal Winchester Band and Chorus will be knocking on doors.

The effort is part of the annual membership drive of the Canal Winchester Music Boosters Club.

According to Mrs. John Waibel, chairman of the campaign, although the service organization will support both the band and chorus throughout the year, part of the funds raised in the door-to-door canvass is earmarked for band uniforms.

ROAL To Meet

Mrs. Frank McDowell, 448 Acton-rd, has been elected president of the Columbus Club of the Reserve Officers Association Ladies' Clubs for the year 1966-67. She will preside at the first business meeting of the year on Thursday, 8 p.m., at the residence of Mrs. John Main, 471 S. Drexel-av.

EVERYTHING . . . the giant wheels of industry, the tiny wheels of a clock, the spoked wheels of a bicycle . . .

EVERYTHING STOPS . . . the businessman at the prime of life, the athlete at the peak of health . . . the child at the doorway to the future . . .

EVERYTHING STOPS . . . work, play, laughter . . . LIFE.

EVERYTHINGS STOPS . . . for the one American who will be stricken with the disease every 10 minutes . . . for the one person who will die from leukemia every 45 minutes . . . for the more than 70,000 Americans who will be afflicted each year . . .

Leukemia claims the lives of more children than any other disease. Leukemia is incurable, unstoppable, unpreventable but not invincible. Striking swiftly, silently, perniciously, leukemia is a "destroyer" of hopes and dreams—an "enemy of the people," and, as any "enemy of the people," must be joined in battle and conquered.

This battle must be waged by an army, a citizens' army of people who are willing to pledge their minds and hearts towards fulfilling the American concept of security for all . . . an army that will provide the power, the force, the will and the dollars to establish a legacy of health and happiness for our children; we urge you to join this army . . . with your time and with your personal gift . . .

STRIKE BACK WHEN LEUKEMIA STRIKES. Contact your local LEUKEMIA SOCIETY CHAPTER or write to: Leukemia Society, Inc., 211 East 43rd Street, New York, N. Y. 10017.

The Leukemia Society is the only National voluntary health agency concentrating all of its resources on the single problem of Leukemia and dedicated solely to eliminating this fatal disease.

How do you know you can't be a million dollar a year man?

Equitable of Iowa has aptitude tests you can take to find out whether you have the sales potential to join the "million dollar a year" men already with us.

The ability to sell is a gift bestowed on people in all walks of life. You may be a college graduate, or you may never have finished high school. You may be a man, or you may be a woman. You may be young, or you may be past your middle years. But if you like people, and if you like to see them happy and secure in the knowledge that their futures are provided for financially—you owe it to yourself to come in and talk with us about a career in life insurance.

Once you take your aptitude tests (no obligation, of course) and find that you have real sales potential, you will be given the finest training in the industry. Then you will go out into a field that is waiting for you and the financial security plans you can bring it . . . ready to write that million a year and more. From then on, there's no limit to your financial future.

Take that first step today . . . call 221-4377 for an appointment.

'Injury Bug' Bites Area Elevens

By JACK WITTENMEIER

With injuries playing havoc with starting line-ups, area elevens answer the bell for round two Friday night.

The biggest section of General Hospital has been reserved for Bill McCann's Cruisers, forced to go without three-fourths of an original starting backfield during a 34-0 whitewashing by West Jefferson last weekend.

STILL unavailable when Groveport hosts Reynoldsburg Friday will be number one fullback Charles Hamilton (infected knee) and blocking back Ralph Stout (bruised ankle).

The Cruiser backfield will return to half strength at least with the anticipated return of fullback Rod McKinster, sidelined with a foot injury.

Backs Don Miller and Don Stokes and linemen Roger Adams and Bill Marshall should also be ready for the Raiders after sustaining minor injuries in the opener.

DEFENSIVE end and quarterback Jeff Nelle (swollen knee) is still a question mark.

McCann listed "too many mistakes and too many assumptions on my part" as largely responsible for his Cruisers opening setback.

"I don't mean to take anything from West Jefferson," McCann quickly added. "They are a real solid ball club which hits very hard, especially on defense.

OUR BIGGEST question mark is how well we can make some adjustments. We've just got to get back to fundamentals and get healthy."

McCann had special praise for senior fullback Ed Caldwell and senior Dave Fenstermaker on the offensive unit and guard Roger Adams on defense against W-J.

Groveport gained 93 total offensive yards while yielding 328 to the opposition.

"THEY SEEM to be pretty tough," McCann says of Reynoldsburg. "Our scout reports that Gahanna (winner 21-12) got a couple of nice breaks and Reynoldsburg moved the ball pretty well.

"I understand they did everything well but score."

Nobody scored last year when the Cruisers met the Raiders, the game ending 0-0.

OFFENSIVELY, McCann looks for Reynoldsburg's regular split-T attack with emphasis off tickle and outside end. Defensively, Groveport anticipates an Oklahoma (5-4) lineup.

They've got a pair of fine, quick linebackers and a strong one-two punch at fullback (Denny Spires) and quarterback (Gary Shade)," McCann added.

"Shade is equally dangerous running or passing and I'm told he looked great against Gahanna as a defensive secondary man (intercepted two passes)," McCann concluded.

Although both Shade and Spires were injured Friday, both are expected to be ready for Groveport.

"I'M not too disappointed. We just got outmanned."

So says Hamilton Township coach Bill McProuty of his Rangers' opening game setback (64-8) to Marion-Franklin.

I'm most encouraged about the fact that, although outmanned. Our kids didn't quit fighting. Our 150-lb. center was playing against an almost 300-lb. middle guard. That takes a lot of courage," McProuty added.

RAIDER TD—Despite defensive efforts by Gahanna's Tony Leek (35) and Mike Hennis (63), Reynoldsburg's Denny Spires (arrow) is about to power his way into the end zone from the two-yard line for the Raiders' initial '66 touchdown. But the Raiders could score only once more, losing opener to Lions, 21-12. (Photos by Don VanHorn)

"WE'VE JUST got to cut down on our mistakes each game. But these boys do want to play football and aren't afraid to hit."

Jeff Nelson looks like a halfback starter against Cardington Friday night with regular John Gorczyca sidelined for at least three weeks with a shoulder separation (sustained Friday).

Although Gorczyca's loss will certainly be felt, McProuty is encouraged with 18 more candidates who've reported for grid duty, since school opened.

McPROUTY listed defensive halfback Ernie Spires and offensive lineman Craig VanSant as looking best against M-F.

Cardington, 20-6 winner over Centerburg Friday, will be operating from a straight, balanced "T" alignment and are "small but fast," according to McProuty.

The Rangers should see a 6-2-3 "gaming" defense with shooting linebackers.

"WE'RE STILL real green but we'll be playing in our own class (Cardington, St. Mary) these next two games. They should give some indication of the kind of season we're going to have," concluded the H-T mentor.

CANAL WINCHESTER who deadlocked Carroll in its opener last weekend, faces Pickerington Friday with three key performers still on the shelf.

Missing is middle guard-center Jim Wyncoop (appendix), two-way end John McClain (knee) and quarterback Chris Hanners (possible heart murmur).

None of the trio played against Carroll and Hanners could be sidelined indefinitely.

INDIAN MENTOR Bob Blais reported he was "pleased with our effort despite our manpower shortage. There's also a big improvement in the team's mental attitude this season."

Blais praised the efforts of lineman Bob Fetheroff, fullback Dave Cook and halfback Mark Craig (scored three TDs) against Carroll.

The Indians picked up 296 yards total offense (215 rushing) while limiting the Bulldogs to around 170.

BLAIS SEES Pickerington operating from a "T" offense which employs flankers and split ends. The hosts should also have a weight advantage over C-W.

Winchested downed Pickerington last season in its opener.

In other area games, Teays Valley (0-1) visits Circleville (1-0), Gahanna (1-0) travels to Bexley (0-1) and Carroll (0-0-1) entertains Millersport (1-0).

LION CAGED—Gahanna halfback Mel Hoston (left) found a tenacious Reynoldsburg defense awaiting him on this attempted 'round end jaunt Friday as Denny Spires (center) and Monty Hayes (40) moved into limit Hoston to three yards.

Redding Repeats As Ox Roast 'Shoe King'

Bob Redding of Kiousville, O., became the first pitcher in the 14 year history of the West Jefferson Ox Roast Horseshoe Tourney to win consecutive titles last week.

Last year, Redding downed John Leach in a playoff game to cop honors and did likewise this time with a playoff win over Kenny Dawes.

BOTH PITCHERS had 7-2 marks at the end of regulation play.

Winners and runnersup in the five classes were: A — Bob Redding, Kenny Dawes; B — Herb Witter, Francis Redding; C — Glenn Mitchell, Elroy Turner; D — Cliff Hannah, Elmer Hendren; E — Marvin Horner, Ray Cooper.

The highest single game of the tourney was turned in by Mel Montgomery of Columbus as he pitched a 77.5 percent game against Columbusite Les Rose.

LONDON'S Ralph Bennett was the top qualifier with 70 percent and 237 points in 100 shoes.

Eleven of the 44 entrants tossed over 50 percent in their match games, including Bob Redding (65.1), Mel Montgomery (63.7), Herb Witter (61.3), Kenny Dawes (61.2), Ted Harris (59.8), Leroy Hill (59.6), Tom Pearce (55.3), Francis Redding (54.9), Howard Anderson (54.0), Larry Mathews (51.8) and Ralph Bennett (50.9).

'Fearless' Predictions

Muttering something about "bugs" in his new-fangled prediction machine, the "Fearless One" reluctantly swallowed his ill-fated initial '66 forecasts (10-12) which represented an all-time low for the harrassed grid expert.

Here's how "Fearless" looks at week two:

Football Resume

Gahanna Stops Raiders; C-W, Carroll Tie

A couple of spirited neighborhood battles highlighted area opening night football action last Friday.

Gahanna led the show with a 21-12 win over Reynoldsburg and Carroll, paced by Jerry Rathburn's three TD tallies, tied Canal Winchester, who was led by the three scores of Mark Craig.

IN OTHER area action, Groveport bowed to West Jefferson, 34-0, Teays Valley lost to City member Walnut Ridge, 6-0 and Marion-Franklin tumbled Hamilton Township, 64-8.

In the 22-22 Canal-Carroll tie, Rathburn powered his way for scores of two, three and four-yard runs while Craig stepped out with 40 and 75 yard runs and a 20-yard pass-run from Jerry Shackelford.

Gary Shade gained 101 yards in vain for the Raiders with Mel Hoston's 82-yard TD pass-run play, putting Gahanna ahead for good with 6:25 to go.

PIN NEWS

Keglers' Korner

By NORMA KIRKENDALL

Good news for Arnie Noe with $1000 wins in the Hoinke Singles Classic.

He earned $500 for the men's high individual single game of 298, $218 for five-game total of 1095 (seventh place) in scratch singles, $166 in first handicap division, plus smaller amounts in other events.

ALSO PLACING in money were Tony Trapasso, Bob Hart, Norm Farnsworth, John Stager, Bob Davison and Breyfogle Contractors.

It was a "Happy Birthday" bowling party for Blythe Bethel at Main Lanes. Guests were other students at the Columbus School for Girls and Columbus Academy. An excellent fun party as well as a good bowling idea.

Watch that average — unless a tournament has a rule to the contrary, a bowler in an ABC-sanctioned handicap or classified tournament whose current average is 10 or more pins higher than that of the previous season, must use the current figure as his entering average.

WHAT'S THE difference between a "perfect game" and a 299 game?

No, the answer isn't "one pin." The difference is that the bowler who rolled the 300 most likely is three years younger and carries an average four pins higher than the 299 shooter.

A survey of 10,600 perfect games, 6,362 games of 299 and 4,309 games of 298 approved by ABC from 1907 through the 1964-65 season discloses that fact.

It also showed that the 298 bowler is usually two years older but carries an average of five pins under the 300 bowler. The information was collected from high game award applications and norms were determined from various categories.

The composite 300 award winner is 34 years old, carries a 188 average and has bowled 11 years. The 299 bowler is 38, averages 184 and has 11 years of experience. The 298 bowler also has 11 years, but is 36 and averages 183.

No Columbus bowlers made the ABC "Who's Who in Bowling" for the past season, but the list of 200 averages included Russ Baltsly (204), Ron Beach (202), Bob Brown (203), Ken Dennis (201), Torm Dern (208), John Fabbo (208), Tom Franklin (204), Jack Glandon (201), Bob Hart (215), Jim Hern (200), Joe Kristof (207), Ken Lien (203), Herb Nicholson (202), Jim Rinello (207), Earl Roach (201), Dick Rupe (200), Jim Shaw (208), Ron Spohn (203), Court Storch (208), Sam Stump (201), Ed Thomas (213), Bob West (209), Carl Williams (200), Jake Kessel (200) and Don Kramer (203).

Long considered man's best friend, the dog as it appears in today's outdoors, is certainly of debatable value. It is still difficult to find a calendar photo of a hunter without a beautiful setter alongside. I'm sure all those folks not concerned with the outdoors think of a dog with every hunter. Such is not the case, actually, about one hunter in ten uses a dog to aid in finding or retrieving game.

PAUGH

Dogs DO affect every hunter but in an entirely different way than suspected. Loose dogs are at an all-time high in rural Ohio. They roam at leisure through field and forest, causing havoc with pheasant chicks, young rabbits and running deer to ground. Many of these dogs are of a Jekyll and Hyde nature, "good ole Red" around the barnyard but slipping away for days and nights of destruction. They affect every hunter by destroying Ohio's legal game.

THE FOX hounds that take off through the woods, refusing to obey their master's call, the coon hounds that get lost, then find the smell of deer too much to resist, these are the enemies of Ohio's hunters. They do not work an eight hour day, they are at work always.

During the deer season of 1964, I hunted with Bill Leeper of Worthington. We stayed the night before at his cabin in Hocking County. We knew, because of new snow the night before, that any tracks would be recent. The tracks we found turned our blood cold. A doe and fawn had gone through followed by a pack of dogs. I later saw four hounds down the road, three had collars.

The control of loose dogs is left completely up to the dog warden of each county. Dan Atzenhoefer, training officer for the Division of Wildlife, tells me that the game protectors are given no instructions whatsoever concerning loose dogs. Furthermore, there is no law that entitles them to collect dogs found running loose. He cited to me a court case a few years back in Huron County.

A FARMER found a dog killing his sheep, and with rightful indignation, he gunned down the killer. It turned out to be a blooded coon hound and the owner of the dog sued the owner of the sheep. Justice prevailed (surprise) and the dog owner's suit was thrown out.

Only a small percentage of the loose dogs are licensed. There are two glaring reasons for this, first — if an owner thinks enough of his hound to license him, he'll keep him home, second — should the dog get in trouble, the owner does not want to pay the damages.

Sheep herds across Ohio are taking a terrible beating from careless dog owners. A percent of the license monies is held in escrow to pay damage claims of livestock owners. About one-third of Ohio's counties run out of escrow money each year and the farmer who suffers at the teeth of a dog pack is completely out of luck.

It would seem that, if Ohio's dog lovers want the rest of the state to love their pets, they would exercise some control over the roaming hounds.

Beulah Opens

Exciting horse racing action returns locally Saturday as Beulah opens its 37-day fall meeting, running through Saturday, Oct. 29.

The track will offer seven feature events worth $38,500 and have an overall purse distribution of over $500,000 to make this the richest meeting in Beulah's 43 year history.

This fall, not only clubhouse but grandstand will be heated for the comfort of fans. Close to 900 horses will be available to fill daily programs.

Beulah will open with the traditional Inaugural Handicap (six furlongs), following with the Rail Bird Ray Handicap (mile) and Robert J. Dienst Memorial Handicap (mile and sixteenth) the next two Saturdays.

Weekday (nine races) post time will be 2 p.m. with Saturday (10 races) starting time scheduled for 1:15 p.m.

Gregory Wins CMS Feature By Two Feet

"Demon Don" Gregory rolled from behind to win the 35-lap late-model Labor Day Championship feature by two feet at the Columbus Motor Speedway Sunday, completing the race fans had to wait a week to see concluded after a mishap halted action seven days before.

Ralph O'Day faltered after taking an early lead and the feature came down to a two-car battle between Gregory (took lead on 20th lap) and runnerup Jim Cushman.

AS NARROW as Gregory's win was in the Championship feature, Sonny Pencil's edge—a bare six inches—over Gregory in the sportsman 20-lap feature was even closer.

Gregory, who had led since the 13th lap, was edged in the stretch run to the finish line in the last lap.

O'Day captured the regular 25-lap late-model main event while Neal Neds (10-lap late-model) and Norm Smith (sportsman) garnered semi wins.

Some women will be stationed in city and suburban shopping centers in October. The aim is to sell $7,000 worth of candy. Proceeds will go to the Kidney Foundation's Research Fellowship Program. "A CLOTHES DRYER THAT DOES MY IRONING? RIDICULOUS!"

Show us a lady who doubts a gas dryer can do her ironing and we'll show you a lady who wonders why everyone's excited about new Permanent Press clothing.

Somebody should tell her that most of the Permanent Press labels say these garments must have the gentle tumble-action of an automatic clothes dryer to pop out the wrinkles and snap back the creases.

Permanent Press clothing for the whole family and dozens more no-iron wonders are waiting for her to see the light.

A penny-a-load gas dryer is waiting for her, too. Ready to team up with Permanent Press to do most of her ironing—and to do it for about one-fifth of what it costs to run an electric dryer.

Milne Classic Is Style Theme

By Marianne Tomlinson
Spectator Fashion Editor

The beginning of school brings to my mind many thoughts . . . some not particularly fashion-wise . . . but more like mother-wise.

Naturally, I'll work the fashion in here eventually, but first of all I'm tempted to step out of the role of fashion editor and write more like a mother . . . and a reporter who is used to talking person to person on radio.

School children safety is what I have on my mind at the moment. Mom, make sure you teach your charges the safety rules . . . especially if they're riding a bike. Please teach them the hand signals . . . teach them to obey all stop signs and above all, to realize that cars are bigger than bikes and they have to be aware of that difference at all times. . . because some motorists are apt to forget it.

If you're doing the driving . . . be careful in the vicinity of a school or a school bus. The law is on the side of the school children, walking or riding.

If you're outfitting a school child, be sure to include a gloomy day outfit . . . one that can be seen clearly. Maybe one of the slickers in bright yellow (the color which has been proven to be the most visible) or one of the new white vinyl coats . . . in addition to being in the fashion spotlight at the moment, this vinyl rainwear is good and practical. It's absolutely waterproof and cleans up with a little soap and water.

For sunny days ahead, you'll find plenty of good practical choices too.

Just in time for the trek back to school are the exclusive children's fashions unveiled in the new Winnie-the-Pooh collection at Sears.

Fine fabrics . . . simple styling . . . and a look that is irrepressibly British are the earmarks of the new Pooh garments. This season's edition is prompted by a spirit of tasteful English understatement . . . clean, clear-cut lines bring a fresh point of view to everything from toddlers' jumpers to dress-up ensembles for six-year-olds.

Because young mothers have sought more sophisticated children's styles in recent years, Sears was inspired to develop the Pooh collection.

Continental flair and a bit of borrowing from the mods are particularly evident in boys' styles. Stadium coats are rugged and boyish, yet well-mannered; they are tailored in rich hues of wide-wale corduroy, trimmed and lined with thick Orlon pile and accessorized with matching caps and gloves.

The prep school tradition is echoed in Eton jackets, matched to shorts in a color called Admiralty Navy.

For girls, "poor boy" styles, reminiscent of waifs out of Oliver Twist, carry out the London Look. Head-hugging bulky knit caps team up with color matched sweaters, skirts and knee socks. Sweater dresses are long-sleeved columns of Orlon knit, self-belted and rising to a turtleneck top.

Suggesting the high-spirited but well behaved fun of British schoolgirls are smocks and jumpers, enlivened with stretch tops, tights and boots.

Once again, Sears has engaged a noted designer of children's garments to style the collection.

Meticulous attention has been paid to details that achieve total coordinating of color, texture and design. A costume unity is a distinguishing feature of this collection. Shoes, socks, gloves, caps . . . even the girls' panties and the boys' ties and pocket squares have been skillfully engineered to carry out the total ensemble look.

As in the beloved Winnie-the-Pooh stories by British author A. A. Milne, the special enchantment of childhood has been breathed into the colors and silhouettes of the Pooh fashions.

A guide to performers and performances in the Columbus area this week

Family Plays Program Begins Thirteenth Year

For thirteenth consecutive season the Ohio State University Theatre (in association with the State Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction) will present the Family Plays Program.

The three plays scheduled for organizations requesting them from Nov. 1, 1966, to May 15, 1967, are "Lady On The Rocks," "The Day the Sky Went to School," and "This is The House That Jack Built."

"LADY" IS an engrossing examination of the alcoholic problem as it affects family life. "The Day" tells of the need for communication between the teacher and the parent in an everchanging educational environment.

"This Is the House That Jack Built" is being repeated this year by popular demand. The play deals with a successful businessman who is forced to re-examine both his sense of values and his life.

GROUPS WISHING to book these plays are asked to have a minimum audience of 50, arrange for a discussion leader and pay a nominal royalty rate.

WRFD To Carry Little Brown Jug

For the second consecutive year, WRFD Radio will broadcast the final qualifying heats and the world-famous "Little Brown Jug" from Delaware on Thursday, Sept. 22.

The live broadcasts will be by Columbus sports authority Chuck Stokes, who will describe the action and provide background information on the race.

Agent '99' Isn't Miss Feldon

BARBARA FELDON, known as 'Agent 99' in the television series, "Get Smart," spent two days in Columbus last week to appear on television at the Ohio State Fair.

By VICKI HOY

Barbara Feldon, Agent 99 in the TV comedy series "Get Smart," is very different from the character she plays.

She is not the secret agent type at all, but a sophisticated person who is motivated by happiness, loves to paint bright flowers, and fly from her New York apartment to her Sunset-Strip apartment in California.

She refers to Agent 99 as another person who she admires very much and who is a fun character to portray. She was slightly worried at becoming stereotyped as '99,' but new opportunities have eased her mind. This winter she will begin making a movie.

She has cut a record that will be released soon.

"Someone asked me if I would like to make a record," Barbara said, "So I thought I'd give it a try."

"Most people have to get a break somewhere to make it big," she said.

After giving up on a dramatic career, she met a famous model, Gillis McGill, at a party. Miss McGill helped Barbara learn makeup techniques, hair styles, and how to model, got Barbara a job for six months as a house model for Pauline Trigere, a designer.

One month later, Barbara did her first TV commercial and soon "I was literally flying all over the world modeling and doing commercials. I have never seen Gillis since, except on the street," Barbara said.

"It is one hundred times harder to do commercials than to be an actress," she said.

Once she was rolled up in a carpet 40 times, and was rolled out 40 times to do a one and a half minute carpet commercial.

She was in hot water for eight hours doing retakes for another commercial. She had to be carried from the tub. She thinks she shivelled down to a smaller size that time.

Barbara graduated from Carnegie Tech as a drama major. She is also an accomplished dancer. After graduation she worked for two years in New York in stock and community theatres. She went to modeling agencies and they told her she would never make it.

Barbara and her husband bought an art gallery soon after they were married in 1958.

"It took us two years to get out of the business. The paintings were very modern and hostile; so were the customers," said Barbara.

Now Barbara is very happy being '99' on "Get Smart." She doesn't learn her part until the day they shoot the show because they change it so much during rehearsal," she said.

Barbara works as '99' for three days and has many hobbies that keep her busy the rest of the week.

Berlin Native To Exhibit At T&C

A refugee from behind the iron curtain who became one of this country's foremost floral artists will be the first to exhibit paintings in the art gallery of the new Town and Country Cinema which opens Tuesday.

Marthel Clausen, who fled with her husband from East Berlin in 1955, will exhibit her work for the first 30 days of the theater's operations. She will also serve as a judge for the Town and Country Shopping Center arts and crafts show this weekend.

Before the partitioning of Germany, Mrs. Clausen studied art in her native country while her husband operated a ladies' hat factory.

The Clausens got their daughter out of Berlin and into Canada, but her absence brought secret police surveillance on the Clausens.

"In the meantime, we learned through friendly channels that our factory had been earmarked for seizure in the near future," Mrs. Clausen said. "When we finally got a hint that our time was running out, we decided to leave factory and house behind us by seeking asylum in West Berlin. This was still possible because the Berlin Wall had not yet been built."

On their way to the border, the Clausens were watched by a secret police operative.

"He immediately wanted to send the police after us but, fortunately, somebody more favorably inclined towards us talked him out of it," she recalled.

The Clausens fled first to Canada. When quotas were opened into the United States, they moved to Ann Arbor, Mich., where Clausen is an accountant and Mrs. Clausen studied at the University of Michigan.

Although best known for her floral work, Mrs. Clausen is equally at home with landscapes, portraits and still life.

Town and Country Cinema, built by General Cinema Corp., will open next Tuesday with a benefit for Nightingale Cottage. The public premier will be next Wednesday, Sept. 21.

Mrs. Clausen's selection is appropriate since the theater's first attraction will be "Torn Curtain," the Alfred Hitchcock thriller about an escape from East Germany. Paul Newman and Julie Andrews will star.

The theater is located at 100 Robinwood-av, just off E. Broad-st in the Town and Country Shopping Center.

ABW TEA PLANNED

The annual enrollment tea of Flambeau Chapter, American Business Women's Association will be held at the home of Miss Helen Stevenson, 357 Sawyer-av, Grove City, Sunday, from 3 to 5 p.m.

Impact Of Medicare Slated For Town Meeting Discussion

"What is the Impact of Medicare?" is to be the topic for discussion on Columbus Town Meeting Sunday, Sept. 18, from 4-5 p.m.

Mr. John Elam will moderate the live telecast which will be rebroadcast on WBNS Radio at 9:10 p.m. Sunday evening.

THE SPEAKERS will be Fred Wolf, Chicago, Regional Representative, Health Insurance of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare; Dr. Joseph A. Bonta, president of the Academy of Medicine of Columbus and Franklin County; Grant Drennen, associate executive director of the Columbus Hospital Federation; Howard Franz, president of Central Hospital Service, Blue Cross of Central Ohio; and William Harper, Medicare Administrator of Nationwide Insurance Companies.

Questions may be phoned to CA. 8-3881 throughout the program. Volunteer members of the Columbus Chapter of the National Secretaries Association will take the calls and Girl Scouts will carry the questions to the panel.

Freeway Goes On Drawing Board

The city of Columbus has contracted E. S. Preston and Associates, Ltd., to draw plans for the controversial Olentangy Freeway.

The contract was signed shortly after common pleas judge Lowel C. Thompson upheld primary election results allowing for construction of the $15 million project.

City Engineer Robert Werner said that the plans will be drawn in three parts. The first, the section to run from Kinnear-rd to N. Broadway, is expected to be completed by July, he said.

Werner said that Columbus had delayed entering into a contract with consulting engineers until a court decision had been made concerning the legality of the May primary elections.

The Save the Scenic Valley Committee contested the election on the grounds that residents of some newly-annexed portions of Columbus were not allowed to vote.

Columbus City Attorney John Young said that the committee could still appeal Thompson's decision to a higher court. But he said that the committee would have to take additional legal action to stop the construction of the freeway. The attorney said that only a court injunction could stop construction. He said that the committee would have to post a bond to get the injunction.

Young said the bond would probably be set "very high."

Charles Jones, 139 E. Tibetst, spokesman for the Save the Scenic Valley Committee, refused to discuss his group's plans. He said that he was awaiting word from the committee's attorney and that a closed meeting would be held later this week. Jones also refused to speculate on the outcome of the meeting.

Business Community To Preview Blue Plan

With the Groveport Blue plan in the last lap before completion the information contained in it is burning a hole in the mental pockets of Mayor Bob Baer.

He announced this week that he wants to call a meeting of all area businessmen to give them a preview of the plan as currently mapped by Regional Planning Commission.

With a tentative date set for next Wednesday evening, he stressed that the plan is of vital interest to every leader of the community and hopes the attendance will go beyond that of the local Groveport Businessmen's Association.

Sale Is For Charity

The Junior League of Columbus, Inc., is sponsoring its 18th annual "Bargain Box," Sept. 19 and 20.

Bargain Box is a sale of merchandise donated by the Junior League's members and merchants throughout Columbus. The sale will be in the Veterans Memorial Building on Monday from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Merchandise will include clothes for the entire family, household goods, books and a wide variety of assorted items.

Over the past 17 years, Bargain House has raised over $200,000. This money has been returned to the community by the Junior League.

Co-chairmen for the event are Mrs. Ann Aldrich, 30 N. Cassingham, and Mrs. Shirle Wallingford, 1826 Baldridge-rd.

Who's For Hockey?

Ashville Kiwanians will be experts on the subject of hockey after next Monday, Sept. 26. A representative of the Checkers the hockey club that has made Columbus its home goal since this summer, will introduce the action-packed sport, showing color films. The wives of the members would do well to inveigle a special invitation to the program as well over half of the seats at a typical game are filled by the fairer sex who are wildly enthusiastic fans.

Bonds Are The Issue

The Canal Winchester School Board was scheduled to meet Tuesday night with promotion of the proposed bond issue for an elementary wing and expansion of the multi-purpose room to allow new kitchen and cafeteria area accorded top priority. Matters concerning the need for the acquisition for real estate were also to be discussed. The board was asked to okay the district's continuing its membership in the Ohio Athletic Association.

CHALLENGE WITH A CAPITAL 'H'

DESPITE TWO lopsided setbacks on the gridiron this season at Hamilton Township, spirit, enthusiasm and participation are decidedly on the upswing. But the biggest challenge is yet to come at H-T and rests largely on the shoulders of new grid mentor Bill McProuty (pictured above). For a closer examination at the "new look" at Hamilton Township, see Jack Wittenmeier's story inside on page 3.

Madison Lets Bids For New Elementary

Bids were let by the Madison School Board Tuesday night for the 12-room elementary tentatively named Madison Elementary.

The building, for which apparent low bids totaled $329,785 (about $2,000 under estimates), is slated for completion the summer of 1967. Located between Noe-Bixby and Hamilton north of Harbour-blvd, the building is built on the same plans used for Asbury and Dunloe.

The general contract went to Dawson and Evans on their bid of $199,890. (They also hold the Dunloe contract.) Other low bids are those of the C. E. Beery Co., plumbing, $33,550; Montoney Heating and Pipe Co., heating and ventilation, $57,265; and Reco Electric Co., $39,090.

A total of 25 bids were submitted, which Supt. Phil Williams considers an excellent response.

Other bids that the board hoped to act upon at the Tuesday board meeting included those for the central office area, and interior lighting at Asbury.

These bids were opened past press time.

Other business included employment of Lyle Baker from the Blacklick area as custodian and of Ronald Ward of Groveport as substitute bus driver.

UP SHE WENT

WHAT'S a guy going to do when he needs a tree house and his home is a new one with trees still the sapling stage? Well, the answer came easy for Greg Sams, whose dad, Bernard Sams, works for the telephone company. A few old poles were salvaged and the house, which will eventually be a deluxe job with doors and windows, was started. Even mother was a visitor, although not quite as an enthusiastic one as four-year-old Brenda who frequently wants a ride up. (Her shinnying skills are only useable on the way down). Anyone who wants to know how to build a tree house without a tree should notice the Sams' model just west of Canal Winchester on Groveport-pk.

Revived Spirit, Participation Brighten H-T Athletic Picture

By JACK WITTENMEIER

"The response has been over our biggest expectations. It's not a pictorial thing. It's coming from the heart."

So says new superintendent John Savel of the obvious wave of athletic enthusiasm at Hamilton Township this fall.

"WE'RE ALL playing on the same team," says Savel. "We're building school spirit, aiming to provide an all-around balanced program."

The reorganization of the entire athletic program has resulted in an almost complete turnabout in the interest shown for Ranger football this fall.

The season opener two weeks ago provided H-T with its largest gate in at least the past three years. The Ranger Booster Club, its membership swollen to the highest ranks in many a season, has stepped in to subsidize $15 of each gridder's insurance cost.

THE BOOSTERS also chartered a bus to transport fans to an away game at Cardington last weekend. Available seats on that bus were gone by mid-week.

But perhaps the biggest rebirth in athletic interest at H-T in the last few months has been in the field of increased participation for the tfootball program.

A numerical rundown of H-T's grid forces last week showed 57 varsity members and 73 working in the junior high program (28 frosh, 45 seventh-eighth graders).

INCLUDED on that varsity list are 15 juniors who failed to report last fall.

School officials credit the turnout largely to "greater cooperative effort within the coaching staff."

But the challenge still falls heavily on the shoulders of new head grid coach Bill McProuty. In Central Ohio, at least, football participation is the barometer, the yardstick to determine the success or failure of most other athletic programs.

"The administration has agreed to let each head coach be responsible for the total athletic program," says McProuty.

This approach allows a uniformity of direction, such as in football where junior high players will be learning the same offense and defense as varsity participants.

McPROUTY estimates that the building of a successful "feeder" program (21 seniors graduate, 21 move up from junior high) will take several years.

"But the building of a successful (winning) team won't take that long," McProuty claims.

McProuty, whose philosophy includes "if you have harmony on your coaching staff, you'll have harmony on your squad," says there's "no question" about an improved attitude on the part of H-T players.

"THAT'S HARD to realize after losing as badly as we did in our opener. But we had 18 boys report out after that first loss," the Ranger coach added. That figure represents a number larger than H-T's varsity roster at the close of the '65 season.

Superintendent Savel, who accompanies the team on the bus at each game, sees H-T on the threshold of a very successful athletic situation.

"JUST PLAIN winning will help greatly," claims McProuty, who points out that this year's Ranger gridders have never known a winning season.

Since a 9-1 mark which brought an FCL co-championship in 1962, H-T has lost 19 and tied one while winning but eight games.

STUDENT participation has also been stepped up at H-T this fall, aimed at making students feel like it's "their school, their programs."

The stadium is being re-sealed and painted and dehumidifiers are scheduled to be installed. The football team was allowed to pick out the colors and choose the emblem to be included in the new look.

In one of three articles published in this newspaper last spring, athletes at H-T aired their gripes.

ONE OF them was an "unrealistic" football schedule. Coach McProuty revealed last week that Marion-Franklin, a school considerably larger than H-T, had been dropped as a '67 opponent.

Senior High principal John Ruehling cleared up another point last week about the Varsity 'H' Club, which Ranger athletes felt was berated last year when its funds were passed over into a general fund.

"This year, the funds will be theirs as a club," Ruehling reports. "The Varsity 'H' Club will be run entirely by the athletes themselves, working with their advisor."

Busing Big Business

A transportation report issued by Benis Lutz, Teays Valley superintendent, confirms the impression that bus business is big business for a consolidated school district.

The transportation of the all but 250 of the 2,262 students enrolled last year cost the district $70,000 or seven percent of the annual budget.

Benis reported the board operates 27 buses, two of which are leased and two of which are designated as spares.

REGULAR ROUTING in the 174 square mile district involves over 1,100 miles each school day and additional trips for music and athletic events and field trips brings annual mileage to a quarter of a million miles a year.

Even with efficient routing, Lutz explained students must be picked up as early as 7:30 a.m. and many don't reach home until 5 p.m.

The fleet ranges in age from 12 years to new with only one-third less than six years old. Some 10 have been in service for a decade.

THIS AGE factor has brought body, chassis and tire maintenance to almost $14,000 a year with driver costs (about $32,000) and gasoline and oil (about $9,000) eating up the rest of the budget.

According to Lutz, even more important than the financial demands created by a bus program of this magnitude is the daily responsibility for the safety of 2,000 students.

LUTZ POINTED out that it is a demand that must be met jointly by the public, the board of education and the drivers.

Comment And Criticism

editorials . . .

Try One

Not too long before the first footballs filled the air over high school gridirons this fall, pleas arose all over the country from concerned school officials to pro football's bigwigs that Friday night pro-football TV games would take a large slice of revenue out from under the high schools.

"The colleges have Saturdays and the pros take care of Sunday. Why can't they leave Friday nights for us?," asked one Midwest school official ready to order red ink.

The American Football League was the culprit but no AFL game will be carried (at least locally) on a Friday night for the remainder of the season.

We rather doubt if local high school attendance would suffer anyway. If opening game crowds were any indication, area schools should do well again this season at the gate.

High school football enjoys most of the ingredients that its college and professional "big brothers" exploit, such as colorful halftime shows and good, solid competition.

And high school football offers something else that is largely missing on the larger scale — local identity and a brand of play that is not yet professional and yet not exactly amateur.

An air of "anything can happen," the backbone of athletics everywhere, is ever present.

If you haven't been out to the local ball yard for a high school game lately, slip one on for size.

We think you'll like the way it fits.

Freedom's Obligation

For an estimated 190,000 Franklin Countians, Nov. 8 will tragically be just another day.

They are the eligible voters in the county who will not be able to vote on Nov. 8 simply because they failed to register.

The figures are tragic. No doubt only a little more than half of the eligible voters will turn out at the polls to take part in a practice that epitomizes the American way of life.

The figures are even more startling when one looks at European nations where voter participation figures above 90 percent are common, and at war-torn South Viet Nam where nearly 90 percent of the population risked life and limb to turn out for a free election.

Registering is an easy process. You can do it at the Board of Elections any day before Sept. 28 and at your own voting precinct on Sept. 28 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. and from 4-9 p.m.

The Spectator implores the unregistered 190,000 to think over the privilege they are wasting and register by Sept. 28.

To do less is to undermine what is the strongest democracy in the world.

Moral Obligation

Reported actions of the People's Poverty Board which has, by admission, at least one local Negro leader "running scared," has brought to a head the issue of over-zealous leadership.

Some believe it is the Grace of God that has spared this city the horror of race riots.

Others see the absence of riots as the conduct of a basically sound people with conservative and thoughtful leadership in front of them and a prudent and accountable Negro press behind them.

Recent minutes of the People's Poverty Board incorporated the quote "United we stand—10 feet tall — DIVIDED — we fall."

Certainly those standing 10 feet tall have a moral obligation not to abuse this new-found height and implied power.

Followers will turn upon the 10-foot leader who tempts them to self-destruction.

The Shakedown

By ROBERT BURDOCK
Editor and Publisher
(Copyright, 1966, Spectator Printing and Publishing Co.)

Employes of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio are being shaken down for contributions of from $200 to $300 each to help finance Governor James A. Rhodes' campaign for re-election.

Collectors are Sam Nicola, commission secretary, and Carl Griffith, director of transportation.

The sums are being paid directly to Nicola and Griffith in cash, no checks accepted and no receipts issued.

Employes are given to understand that failure to comply with contribution quotas will affect job security in the once professional department which has become a patronage dumping ground.

Many have been forced to borrow funds to meet the Sept. 15 deadline set for the campaign contributions.

The Spectator Newspapers are prepared to back up these charges with sworn statements. Further, if the contributions are not promptly returned in full, this newspaper will take the necessary legal action to prosecute to the full extent of the law all those involved.

The law is clear on reporting of campaign contributions and it is a certainty that the contributions here cited were not intended to be reported as required by law.

The Spectator strongly suggests that instead of loud denials a prompt return of the funds be ordered and ordered by the same man who issued the collection order.

The Spectator is in a position to know whether or not this is done.

A Winner Loses

To The Editor:

Thank you so much for the bond I received in your word contest. I demonstrated how you can WIN and LOSE at the same time. (Not being a subscriber).

It was thrilling to win and most timely, as I am leaving for a vacation trip soon. Now, I can feel more relaxed about spending money for fun.

I am sure it is no accident that the Spectator is conducting a contest so pertinent to the writing field. It was interesting to work with words as tools and one that anyone can do.

My "win" will be mentioned in the Columbus Writers' Club monthly "Newsletter," so we, in turn, will be able to give you some publicity.

What a pleasure it must be for you to call the winners. You sounded as though you enjoyed it.

With all good wishes.

william s. white ★ Negro Movement Becoming Perverted ★

WHITE

The tragedy of persistent and riotous violence by Negro extremists undeniably is now gravely injurying, if not in fact destroying, the civil rights movement in this country.

The responsible Negro leaders, such men as Roy Wilkins of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Rev. Martin Luther King are being outshouted for Negro leadership by cold, young demagogues whose interests lie more in continuous public disorder than in progress for civil rights — and sometimes more in the Communist cause than in the American cause in Viet Nam.

All but the most hopelessly doctrinaire of the white civil-rights advocates must now accept some frightening realities.

Here is the highly liberal Mayor of Atlanta, the most progressive city in the South in racial matters, physically abused by "demonstrators" under the goad of Stokely Carmichael of SNICK—the so-called Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Here is Dr. King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference condemning, if all too timidly, such senseless violence. Here are white men of old and unimpeachable records for civil rights drawing away from a movement being intolerably perverted.

Here, in consequence, is an Administration civil rights bill deeply stuck in the Senate because of the sick disenchantment and disillusion of some of the oldest friends of valid Negro rights.

And here, underlying all this, is a brief and factual record from the last few weeks that speaks for itself:

Item. A poll by the respected John D. Kraft Corporation among Northern Negroes finds that not alleged "police brutality" but rather more police protection is their highest concern now. They want more, not fewer policemen.

Item. A survey by Newsweek magazine finds that the white man generally now opposes even peaceful Negro demonstrations, so fed up has he become with the other kind.

Item. Chicago city officials anxiously report evidence of a working alliance between some civil rights groups and some simply criminal gangs.

Item. The Mayors of two Northern cities, Cleveland and Los Angeles, who must be presumed to be men of some responsibility and some concern for genuine civil rights, find Communists deeply involved in both past and planned civil rights demonstrations.

The most advanced civil rights advocates have long shrugged off ominous realities that are not so much straws in the wind as great beams uprooted in the gales of Negro extremism in this country.

The hour is late; unchecked and unpunished Negro extremism is going to lead to an unchecked and unthinking white extremism that can set back legitimate Negro aspirations for many a year to come.

barry goldwater ★ Left-Wingers Out Of Step ★

GOLDWATER

Our Republican Party's left-wing fringe is at it again. They are still publicly moaning and groaning over the fact that even though they are a tiny minority in the party, everybody in the party is out of step except them. They are still trying to use the Republican Party as a base from which to launch political programs that are little more than carbon copies of Democrat Party programs.

A case in point is a report put out by a group calling itself the Council of Republican Organizations. This group, of indeterminate membership, describes itself as representing 10 "progressive" Republican groups. What they mean is 10 little welfare-state splinter groups, all dedicated to using the federal government as an instrument to regiment, rule and reconstitute every individual.

This group is concerned with a remark I made recently in which I pointed to the fact that the Republican Party is basically opposed to collectivist programs, stands for the individual against state coercion and can be termed conservative in today's mixed-up political labeling.

I drew another conclusion: that at least three-fourths of the delegates to the Republican Party's next Presidential nominating convention also would be conservative.

The Council of Republican Organizations has looked around the country and found that what I said was all true. Their report makes particularly painful noises about the fact that conservatives have "consolidated" power in the House of Representatives under Congressman Melvin Laird, the Republican Conference Chairman.

All they are saying is that Congressman Laird has consistently behaved like a Republican in the House and has not strayed off to become, as the Council apparently wishes he would, a Democrat in Republican clothing.

The Council could make the same charge against the majority of Republican congressmen. There are just a few congressmen on the Republican side whose actions give the Council any comfort.

When John Lindsay was in the Congress, he was a leader among those Republican congressmen whose votes provided the margin of victory for Democrat legislative programs time after time, casting 36 votes that provided crucial strength for the Democrats. Laird, on the other hand, voted only twice in such a way.

Republican are conservatives. They are proud of it. They think their philosophy and programs will ultimately be best for the nation. And they are going to keep plugging away at it in the face of all the internal sniping as well as the growing socialism of the current Democrat regime.

marquis childs ★ Brain Drain Threatens Aid Success ★

CHILDS

WASHINGTON — In a New York hospital, virtually all resident physicians and interns are Indian, Chinese, Iranian, Pakistani, Argentinians. In a small research laboratory on Long Island, four of the scientists and at least a half dozen skilled technicians are from developing countries around the world.

This is the brain drain that annually transplants to affluent America thousands of the brainest and most highly trained men and women from where they are desperately needed. Because it defeats one of the principal aims of aid to the developing countries, policy-makers here have suddenly become concerned over the extent of the brain drain.

The first tentative steps are being taken to try to check this trend that negates the usefulness of much of the American aid flowing out to developing countries. The distinguished geochemist of the California Institute of Technology, Harrison Brown, foreign secretary of the National Academy of Sciences, is encouraging the formation in a half dozen countries in Latin America, Asia and Africa of indigenous national science councils. American scientists will cooperate in helping to start these councils.

When he was ambassador to Brazil, Lincoln Gordon, now Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, worked closely with Brown to help initiate such a project. A survey showed that not a single university in Latin America was prepared to give advanced degrees in such scientific disciplines as nuclear physics. Gordon hopes to encourage the development on a regional basis of a scientific center so that eventually Latin Americans will not have to go to Europe or the United States for their advanced training.

In India, Summer Science Institutes were initiated in 1963 with the help of American aid and the cooperation of Indian scientists. This year there were 94 such institutes designed to help teachers in universities, colleges and schools become familiar with the latest developments in science and mathematics.

The National Science Foundation, a semi-autonomous agency funded by the Federal government, sent out a distinguished group of scientists in June to work out with their Indian counterparts a follow-up program in advancing the teaching of the sciences and mathematics.

All this suggests that there are more effective ways to use American aid. In the seed money spent on education under such enlightened proposals as Harrison Brown is furthering there is a potential in growth and development far beyond merely handing out of large sums of money for schools or factories.

It is an answer to Senators who complain that aid is wasted and misused by recipient countries. By pushing for an ever-increasing use of American help in education, these critics could perform a useful service. They might contribute, too, toward breaking down the bureaucratic rigidities of the AID agency.

Britain has suffered a two-way brain drain. On the one hand, scientists and engineers from the Commonwealth countries have emigrated to London. On the other hand, top British scientists have come to America, lured by generous offers and large laboratory facilities. The little plateau of affluence in Western Europe and the United States is a magnet attracting those who might create a new world out of the ruins of colonialism.

Cancer Society Meet To Feature Young, Old Experts

Two Columbus natives, years apart in age but working toward the same goal, will share the speaker's platform Tuesday when the Franklin County unit of the American Cancer Society holds its annual meeting at Hilltonia Junior High School at 7:30 p.m.

Addressing the meeting will be Dr. Louis Fieser, head of the chemical laboratory at Harvard University, and Dr. John Minton, holder of a fellowship at the Ohio State University medical center under auspices of the National Institutes of Health.

Dr. Fieser, 67, who a year ago was diagnosed as having cancer of the lung, will re-emphasize the Cancer Society's claim that smoking is a causative factor in lung cancer.

A graduate of East High School, Dr. Fieser was a member of the Surgeon General's Advisory Committee on Health and Smoking. His topic will be "Objective and Subjective Experiences with Cancer."

Dr. Minton is a graduate of University High School and holds a medical degree from the surgery branch of the National Cancer Institute. He is 32.

He will speak on "Laser Energy — A Possible Tool in Cancer Research." Dr. Minton has been experimenting in the use of laser beams to combat cancerous tumors.

The meeting will be chaired by Dr. Charles V. Meckstroth, president of the county unit.

"These two speakers are outstanding," Dr. Meckstroth said. "Dr. Fieser will be underscoring and re-emphasizing the society's stand linking smoking to lung cancer; Dr. Minton's work with the laser beam is an innovation and could possibly show promise.

"One is a veteran, one is young. Both are dedicated in their respective fields and both are highly regarded by their professional colleagues."

The agenda for the public meeting will include a summary of annual reports on the society's activities and election of 12 new members to the board of directors.

And So It Grows

Magnolia scales soon will be killing branches and severely damaging magnolia trees, according to Ohio State University Extension specialists. If you have this kind of tree, watch for brownish insects a half-inch wide with a waxy, white shell. These scales damage the tree by sucking juices from the branches.

On small trees, simply brush the scales into a sack and burn it. But for larger trees, you'll need to use malathion at the rate of a quart of 50 percent emulsifiable concentrate in 100 gallons of water. Apply it by late September or the shells will be too hard to penetrate.

When applying any pesticide spray or dust, prevent plant injury or illegal residues on adjacent crops by controlling drift. Here are precautions:

* Don't spray or dust when the air is windy.
* Don't use high pressure, which results in mists that drift more.
* Direct the sprayer downward.
* Keep insecticides away from bird baths, fish ponds, streams, wells, bee colonies, and livestock feed and water. Don't use 2-4-D type weed sprays near susceptible plants such as tomatoes and grapes.

If you haven't already, better start collecting dried plant materials for winter arrangements and holiday decorations. Use your imagination. Nearly any seed, weed, flower, or bark is a potential.

The best way to control weeds in your lawn is to keep your grass dense and healthy. If it is dense and growing well, the weeds simply don't have the room or nutrients to grow.

If dandelions and other broadleaf weeds are dominating your lawn, you may want to spray them with 2, 4-D this fall. Desirable plants that are susceptible to 2, 4-D damage are less likely to be injured now than in the spring.

Keep a watchful eye on your roses for mildew, which is a disease that appears especially when the nights are cool and the days hot. If the disease, a whitish or grayish growth, starts, use a spray or dust that contains sulfur or karathane.

IT IS HAM AND LAMB COME RAIN OR SHINE

For the first time in seven years members of the Groveport Masonic Lodge 240 won't be casting a wary eye at the sky as the hour draws near for their annual Ham and Lamb Roast.

Proceeds from the past feasts where almost 2,000 persons have been served in four hours flat have enabled the Lodge to build their new Temple at the site at the intersection of Toy and Saltzgaber-rds. Now it's time to work on paying off the mortgage.

Although the food will be served in the spacious basement, the 43-foot long trench with a depth of five feet will be dug as usual to allow the meat to be roasted for 16 long, slow hours.

According to Mrs. Millard Meloy, Lithopolis-rd, who, as Worthy Matron of the affiliated Eastern Star Chapter, is chief cook and bottlewasher, 1,300 pounds of ham and 220 pounds of lamb are on order.

The meal, she and Dick Helsel, of Obetz, Worshipful Master, claim is the bargain of the year with not one but two sandwiches going along with the $1.50 dinner menu which includes apple sauce, baked beans, potato chips, homemade pie and beverage. The youngsters get a real bargain with half price tickets.

Carry out dinners are available as well as extra sandwiches at 50 cents apiece.

Serving begins at 4 p.m. and will continue until 8.

TOURS PLANNED

The naturalist staff of the Columbus Metropolitan Parks will conduct guided tours of the woodland trails at Blacklick, Blendon and Darby Parks on Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Participants meet the naturalist at the Trading Posts for the guided tours which last about an hour.

Elementary Gym Begun At Hamilton

The new approach to physical education for elementary school children in Hamilton Township schools was implemented this week with an In-Service program.

When women with physical education background could not be obtained to assist in the program — through which every elementary class will have coordinated play at least once a day — a call went out to the State Department of Education.

Monday Ambrose Brazilian made the first of what will be frequent trips to the district to train the parents who are taking over this responsibility three hours a day in Hamilton Schools.

Superintendent John Savel stated that he wanted no misunderstandings about implications of the new program.

"We are not training those youngsters at an elementary-age for high school sports," he said. "We are preparing them for healthful and social living."

The women employed are Mrs. Margaret Moore and Mrs. Theresa Crapser, who will work at South; Mrs. Helen Hann and Mrs. Theresa Allen who will be at Central and Mrs. Ethel Yakle is assigned to Obetz.

Honorary Kids Day Officials To Be Chosen At Stadium

Kiwanis Kids Day moves to Jet Stadium for the first time this year with a new feature —selection of honorary mayors, police chiefs and fire chiefs from all communities served by the 33 Kiwanis clubs in Central Ohio.

The Sept. 25 program will begin with a parade from Fifth and Broad to Broad and Front in the downtown area at 1:30 p.m. Festivities at Jet Stadium begin at 3 p.m.

High school bands from all Kiwanis area communities have been invited for the parade. All 33 Kiwanis clubs will have representatives in the line of march.

The honorary mayors, fire chiefs and police chiefs are being selected on the basis of 25-word-or-less essays submitted to a selection committee. Their real-life counterparts are expected to be on hand to explain their duties to the winners.

Top-notch professional entertainment is being brought in to part of the Jet Stadium festivities.

Kids Day was moved to the stadium from Lockbourne Air Force Base this year when heavy military commitments made it impossible to hold the annual affair at Lockbourne.

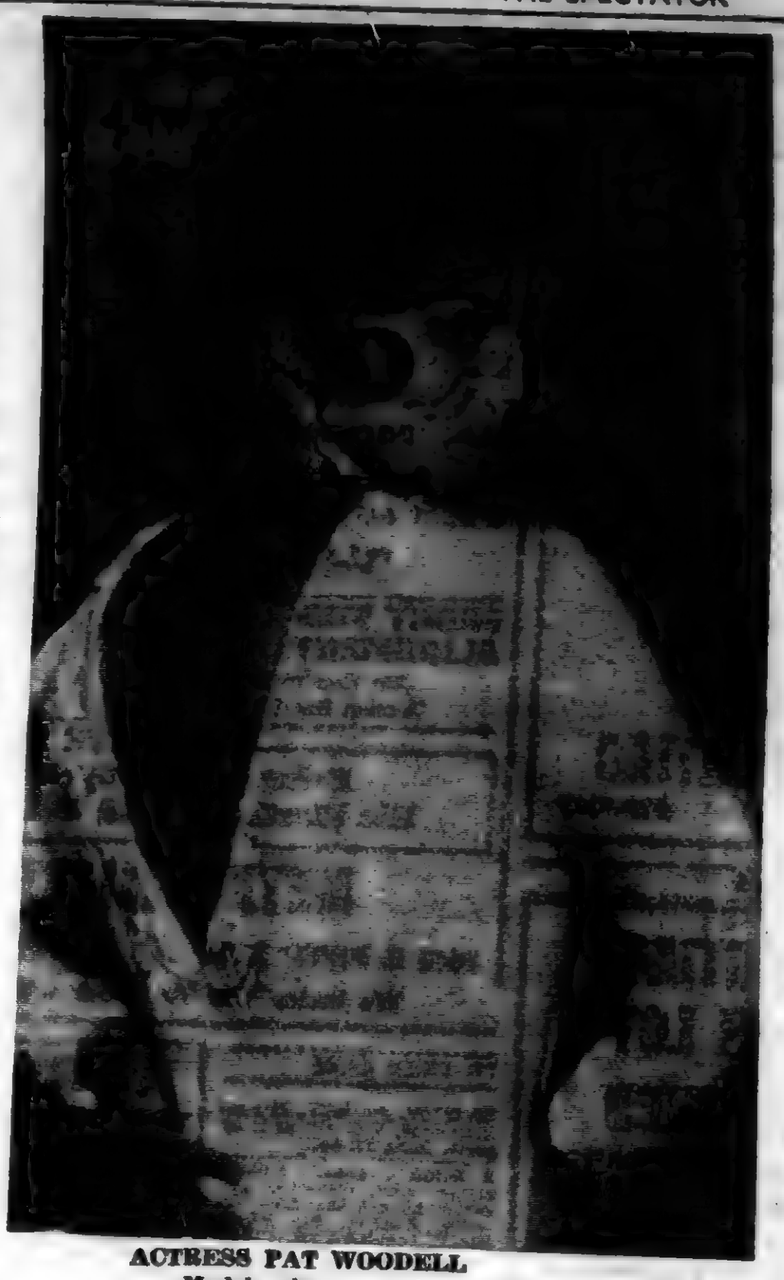
LET'S KNIT A Glamorous Knit

By URSULA duBOIS

Even a beginner can knit this glamorous dress modeled by Pat Woodell, television actress.

The stockinette stitch (knit one row, purl one row) makes the knitting easy and fast.



The deep "V" back of the stunning dress may be appliqued with either pearls or sequins. The back detail may be carried out around the high front neckline or merely extended to the left front.

Both the hem and sleeves are tapered to give a slim and all-over look of grace.

This is pattern No. 35 and may be had in size 8 through 16 by mailing 50 cents in coin or check or money order to Ursula duBois, Spectator Pattern Department, 2465 W. Broad-st, Columbus, O. Special handling and first-class mail may be purchased for 15 cents extra. Please print plainly name, address and pattern number.

Miss duBois welcomes mail from readers but cannot give a personal answer. She will discuss and pass on the most interesting of the questions and hints.

Three items also available are the Know-How Knitting Booklet (No. 10), the Knit Pickin' Knit Book (No. K) and the Knit Stitch Tabulator (No. 71). The book is $1.50 and booklet and tabulator, 35 cents.

Designer Shows Good Taste

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

There are rumblings among the dyed-in-the-wool fashion magazine fans . . . yes there are . . . I've heard them. They are protesting against the far-out approach to fashion that most of the "slick" magazines are depicting.

Would you believe there are those ladies among us who refuse to raise their skirts two or three inches above their knees and who resent designers trying to foist them off on us? There are also those who steadfastly refuse to paint charming little pictures on their legs . . . wear dots and stripes and plaid all at the same time . . and even some who wouldn't be caught dead in earrings the size of muskmelons.

Well, there are and I wonder when the news will reach the editors of the leading fashion mags.

I'm getting tired of justifying their current approach to fashion . . . tired of maintaining that this is a special sort of art form that must be distinctive and prophetic. Some of the things I've seen recently, I don't want to justify.

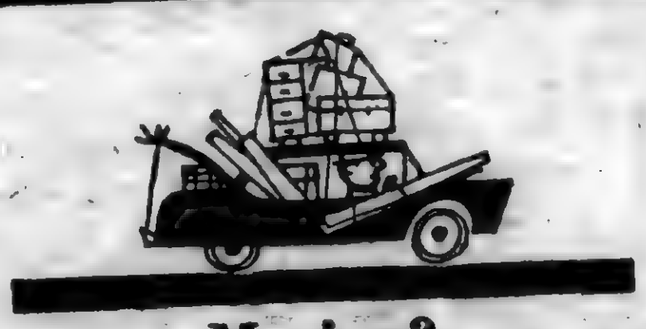
One designer whose clothes need no justification whatsoever is Teal Traina. In the current issue of Vogue you can see some examples from his newest collection that prove his good taste and sound fashion thinking. Better than that, though, why don't you look over the collection yourself? It is now on display at the new Kingsdale Union store and will be there through the end of this week. This is the first time Teal Traina has sent his full line to Columbus and we should do him proud.

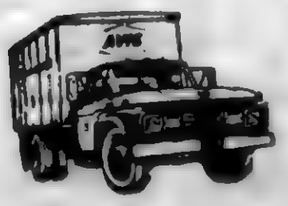
I was talking to a friend of mine, Anne Conrad, who worked with Mr. Traina in New York. She pointed out that he "skis like mad . . . is quite a gentleman . . . and the ladies love him." He was associated in his early years with his father when the firm was known as Traina-Cassella and renowned for beautiful quality garments. His uncle Vincent was associated with Norman Norell and they were known as Traina-Norell. All these Traina name-combinations were probably confusing to the public but while they were becoming unconfused they were seeing the new Teal Traina designs and seeing beautiful, beautiful clothes.

Teal Traina . . . seasoned performer with a contemporary knack . . . hits the Fall scene with a marvelous approach that adds up to the fastest pace collection in the seven year history of the House.

"The here-and-now of fashion," says T.T., "is the dress-plus . . . the dress plus the jacket . . . the dress plus the coat." The costume is the big build-up. It's a two or three part plan and it's highly organized. The total look is what really counts. (This is a look that Mr. Traina has always advocated.)

Aware that the American woman loves fine fabrics, Teal travels the world—Switzerland, Italy, France, the Orient — to find the very best. Worsteds are often coating weight so that jackets, no matter the length, are like tiny coats. Most likely to succeed is the longer jacket, which is shown in strength, a new young proportion with the shorter skirt.





This brings us to the Traina perspective on skirt lengths. For the first time since 1947, hemlines are really making headlines. To quote Teal; "It's an experiment in space . . . the space between the knee and the hem . . . and it concerns us all." Skirts have gone up, of course, and T.T. agrees with Harper's Nancy White: "It's a time to be brave, not foolhardy . . . to lose a bit of your skirt but not your head. We intend to hang on to a young, elegant sense of proportion."

"There have been too many offensive things in fashion," says Teal. "At all times we have believed in and remained with a look of elegance. There is no return to elegance for us. It has always been our signature and always will be. Understated and young with subtle changes in shape — but no gimmicks."

Teal Traina is in step for '66, especially in step with all the ladies who are ready to march in protest against some of the ghoulish fashion fads.

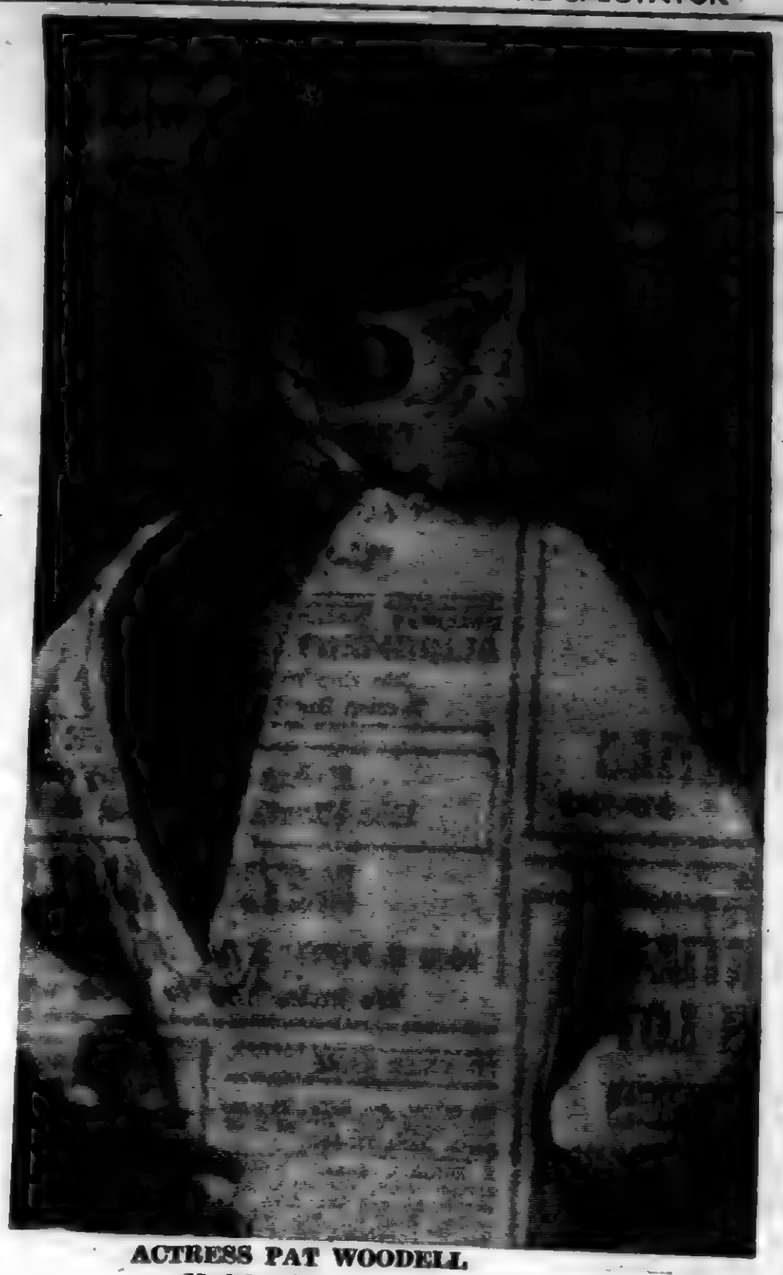
LET'S KNIT A Glamorous Knit

By URSULA duBOIS

Even a beginner can knit this glamorous dress modeled by Pat Woodell, television actress.

The stockinette stitch (knit one row, purl one row) makes the knitting easy and fast.



The deep "V" back of the stunning dress may be appliqued with either pearls or sequins. The back detail may be carried out around the high front neckline or merely extended to the left front.

Both the hem and sleeves are tapered to give a slim and all-over look of grace.

This is pattern No. 35 and may be had in size 8 through 16 by mailing 50 cents in coin or check or money order to Ursula duBois, Spectator Pattern Department, 2465 W. Broad-st, Columbus, O. Special handling and first-class mail may be purchased for 15 cents extra. Please print plainly name, address and pattern number.

Miss duBois welcomes mail from readers but cannot give a personal answer. She will discuss and pass on the most interesting of the questions and hints.

Three items also available are the Know-How Knitting Booklet (No. 10), the Knit Pickin' Knit Book (No. K) and the Knit Stitch Tabulator (No. 71). The book is $1.50 and booklet and tabulator, 35 cents.

Designer Shows Good Taste

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON
Spectator Fashion Editor

There are rumblings among the dyed-in-the-wool fashion magazine fans . . . yes there are . . . I've heard them. They are protesting against the far-out approach to fashion that most of the "slick" magazines are depicting.

Would you believe there are those ladies among us who refuse to raise their skirts two or three inches above their knees and who resent designers trying to foist them off on us? There are also those who steadfastly refuse to paint charming little pictures on their legs . . . wear dots and stripes and plaid all at the same time . . and even some who wouldn't be caught dead in earrings the size of muskmelons.

Well, there are and I wonder when the news will reach the editors of the leading fashion mags.

I'm getting tired of justifying their current approach to fashion . . . tired of maintaining that this is a special sort of art form that must be distinctive and prophetic. Some of the things I've seen recently, I don't want to justify.

One designer whose clothes need no justification whatsoever is Teal Traina. In the current issue of Vogue you can see some examples from his newest collection that prove his good taste and sound fashion thinking. Better than that, though, why don't you look over the collection yourself? It is now on display at the new Kingsdale Union store and will be there through the end of this week. This is the first time Teal Traina has sent his full line to Columbus and we should do him proud.

I was talking to a friend of mine, Anne Conrad, who worked with Mr. Traina in New York. She pointed out that he "skis like mad . . . is quite a gentleman . . . and the ladies love him." He was associated in his early years with his father when the firm was known as Traina-Cassella and renowned for beautiful quality garments. His uncle Vincent was associated with Norman Norell and they were known as Traina-Norell. All these Traina name-combinations were probably confusing to the public but while they were becoming unconfused they were seeing the new Teal Traina designs and seeing beautiful, beautiful clothes.

Teal Traina . . . seasoned performer with a contemporary knack . . . hits the Fall scene with a marvelous approach that adds up to the fastest pace collection in the seven year history of the House.

"The here-and-now of fashion," says T.T., "is the dress-plus . . . the dress plus the jacket . . . the dress plus the coat." The costume is the big build-up. It's a two or three part plan and it's highly organized. The total look is what really counts. (This is a look that Mr. Traina has always advocated.)

Aware that the American woman loves fine fabrics, Teal travels the world—Switzerland, Italy, France, the Orient — to find the very best. Worsteds are often coating weight so that jackets, no matter the length, are like tiny coats. Most likely to succeed is the longer jacket, which is shown in strength, a new young proportion with the shorter skirt.

This brings us to the Traina perspective on skirt lengths. For the first time since 1947, hemlines are really making headlines. To quote Teal: "It's an experiment in space . . . the space between the knee and the hem . . . and it concerns us all." Skirts have gone up, of course, and T.T. agrees with Harper's Nancy White: "It's a time to be brave, not foolhardy . . . to lose a bit of your skirt but not your head. We intend to hang on to a young, elegant sense of proportion."

"There have been too many offensive things in fashion," says Teal. "At all times we have believed in and remained with a look of elegance. There is no return to elegance for us. It has always been our signature and always will be. Understated and young with subtle changes in shape — but no gimmicks."

Teal Traina is in step for '66, especially in step with all the ladies who are ready to march in protest against some of the ghoulish fashion fads.

PIN NEWS

Keglers' Korner

By NORMA KIRKENDALL

Lay plans early to bowl in the 14th annual Hillcrest Ladies Handicap Tourney beginning Oct. 29. This is another of the highly successful events conducted by the Schulz Services.

The Ternstedt office League got off to a good start at Western with Cal Stacy showing 229 as an opener. Art Bailey and Ron Seasmes tied with 214 to inaugurate the Major League.

DON OCHS threw a 222 and Duke Pennell, a 601 to begin the Variety League and a big 266-849 banged off the Westview men through efforts of George Hobbs. Rosie Kaw opened with a 224 for the gals. First season's triplicate was by Columbine Hartzell.

The Columbus BPA Traveling League swings into biweekly Sunday action with 10 teams rolling in six different establishments. Norm Farnsworth is Pres and Bob Wachter is secretary.

The Wink-O Doubles hit top stride in the first session with Carl Williams' 254-286-214/754 and Gary Swisher's 264-258-204/726.

THE NATIONAL "Bring a Friend" Contest is now open—learn to bowl and possibly win a paid vacation for you and your friend. Your proprietor will give full information.

Ed Lubanki has a lifetime average of 204-92 in ABC tournaments to lead the way. He's followed by Dick Hoover of Akron with 201-124. Joe Kristof holds 195-68, and Cliff Robling, Gahanna, has 191-93.

These are the only Columbus area bowlers listed on the 20 plus year participation list. In nearly 75 years of ABC tourneys Columbus has had one team championship, two doubles wins and one singles.

CHICAGO bowlers are the runaway, with 26 team, 16 doubles, 13 singles and 15 all events. Al Baumann has rolled in 34 nationals with Dr. Joel Bernhard in 30, Joe Kristof—25, Fred Lerch—30, Al Lockey—27 and Bob Stewart—27.

Another man has joined the WIBC crew—Bill Carey, from Los Angeles, hired to schedule the gigantic 50th Anniversary Tournament now accepting entries. Call 486-5238 for more details.

Gary Bradds Signs

Former Ohio State University All-American Gary Bradds will be wearing the green and the white of the Columbus Comets of the North American Basketball League during the 1966-67 season, Columbus general manager Lou Mitchell announced last Sunday.

Bradds, who set a single season scoring record at OSU with a 36 point per game average, is no stranger to NABL play as he led Benton Harbor to the league championship last season with a 21 point average.

EXTRA EFFORT — Reynoldsburg end Ken Hergesell gave it the old high school try on this long pass from Gary Shade Friday. Hegesell made a diving catch but was ruled out of bounds. Raiders downed Groveport, 12-0.

HILLSBORO AT HARTLEY —Hawks snap loss skein at two. Hartley.

CARROLL AT LANCASTER FENWICK — Bulldogs scored against Millersport, will against Fenwick — but not enough. Fenwick.

DESALES AT CINCINNATI ELDER —We'll stick with the hometowners. DeSales.

She is planning clinics for interested women on the selection of clothing and accessories.

Family Plays Program Begins Thirteenth Year

For the 13th consecutive season the Ohio State University Theatre (in association with the State Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction) will present the Family Plays Program.

The three plays scheduled for organizations requesting them from Nov. 1, 1966, to May 15, 1967, are "Lady On The Rocks," "The Day the Sky Went to School," and "This is The House That Jack Built."

"LADY" IS an engrossing examination of the alcoholic problem as it affects family life. "The Day" tells of the need for communication between the teacher and the parent in an everchanging educational environment.

"This Is the House That Jack Built" is being repeated this year by popular demand. The play deals with a successful businessman who is forced to re-examine both his sense of values and his life.

GROUPS WISHING to book these plays are asked to have a minimum audience of 50, arrange for a discussion leader and pay a nominal royalty rate.

PARTY SET

The Sacred Heart Parish will have a euchre party Saturday in Ryan Hall, First-av and Summit-st, at 8 p.m. The party is open to the public and tickets will be available at the door.

Theater Notes

AMTC Seen As Boon To Local Theatergoers

Opening Monday, Sept. 26, is the American Musical Theater Club's production of "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever," starring Van Johnson. Two unique programs of interest, which will be an asset to our community, are being instituted through producer, Martin Tahse.

For drama students in high school and college there will be a "set-up" day which will be announced later with the opening of the next production, "Desert Song."

On Monday, when the troupe arrives for opening that night, students may attend to watch the rehearsals, orchestra rehearsals and setting up of the stage. What an opportunity this could be.

For aspiring performers, auditions will be held, again starting with the production of "Desert Song." These auditions will enable Columbus residents the opportunity to travel with a professional troupe.

Needless to say, this would be a valuable experience. Last, but far from the least, Martin Tahse has selected 20 civic and theater minded Columbus area women to form a committee for the handling of a $3 rebate per subscriber to the American Musical Theater Club. This money will be used for scholarships or toward a cultural center.

The original $5 entitles subscribers to four programs, discount on books and records. Also, any subscriber may acquire tickets to New York productions through the club.

All three programs are new and certainly an asset to the community. Drama students, aspiring actors and local residents have a lot to gain through the American Musical Theater Club.

Curtain Players Begin Season With Comedy

Local talent and several newcomers to community stage will be portraying roles in Curtain Players opener for the season, "The Gazebo" by Alec Coppel.

Under the direction of Ed King, cast members are Tony Simonski, Harry Nuzum, Beverly Dill, Ginger Mayer, Kaye Moore, Clarence Lewis, Tom Culbertson, Gary Williams, Tom Davis, Chang Haag and Dick Near.

The Gazebo" is a two-act fast paced comedy concerning a TV script writer who has a body to dispose of.

Oh, but what to do with it?

Production crews are being appointed. Anyone interested should call Barbara Boylan at 882-7201 for information.

Folk Dancers Begin Season

The Columbus Folk Dancers will open the fall season of dancing at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 30 W. Woodruff, at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 28, and will continue with dances every Wednesday evening.

Dances from around the world will be included in the programs each week and they will be taught by experienced instructors. Anyone interested in folk dancing is invited to attend. No previous experience is required.

Some folk dances are done with a partner, or in square formation, but many favorites ared anced in a "no-partner" line with a leader, or even in groups of three. The variety of rhythms and melodies found in international folk music also adds much to the general enjoyment of the dancing.

Further information may be obtained by calling Mr. or Mrs. John H. Shaw, 4940 Sharon-av, 888-2207.

Skiers Open Season With Annual Dance

The Columbus Snow Ski Club will begin its season with an annual fall dance Sunday at 4 p.m. at Woodbrook Lodge at 1180 Woodbrook-ln, south of Eakin-rd. Music will be provided by the Jimmy Lloyd Trio.

The objective of the Ski Club is to perpetuate and encourage skiing as well as the social fellowship which naturally attends the sport.

Anyone interested in snow skiing is welcome to attend the party.

Groups May Band Together

Local theater groups are forming a new organization to be tentatively named the Association of Community Theaters, but will be known as ACT.

Under the direction of Carolyn Lane who is a member of Players Club and is regional representative to the Ohio Community Theater Association, OCTA, several groups sent delegates to the first meeting to establish a knowledgeable interpretation as to aims and goals.

The purpose of ACT parallels with OCTA in that the chief goals are to promote and encourage interest in Community Theater, mutual box office support, and the exchange of ideas, knowledge and talent.

Yet, OCTA is state wide, dividing Ohio into five regions. Thusly, this particular region feels a closer fellowship among the community theaters which will promote theater here in town through organization.

Vikings, Cruisers Eye Tough Foes

By JACK WITTENMEIER
Spectator Staff Writer

Injuries continued to keep area football squads under par as third week opponents loomed on the horizon.

At Teays Valley, coach Marion Waits reports his Vikings will be at half strength for a road encounter Friday at Logal Elm.

DEFENSIVELY, linebackers Bill Welsh (arm) and Don Daft (shoulder) and safety man Mark Leatherwood (arm) look doubtful with tackle Randall Wilson (arm) in the same category offensively.

Ends Sid Liming and Cliff Nutter, sidelined with the flu this week, are also question marks.

That leaves a tough challenge for the Vikings, who have yet to down the Braves on the gridiron after three tries.

LAST FALL, Logan Elm won, 8-6, scoring in the final two minutes on a blocked punt in the T-V end zone.

T-V will be saddled with the problem of handling Logan's big fullback — Jim Morehead — who takes a liking to off tackle power drives.

The Braves like variety both offensively and defensively claims Waits who is preparing to face a double wing, 'T' formation or regular 'T' on defense and a 6-2, 6-3, Oklahoma (5-4) or 8-3 when his Vikings gain possession.

WAITS, WHO figures his Vikings will give away about 10 pounds per man size-wise, is uncertain about Logan's aerial game.

"They haven't had to throw too much but we do know they can pass accurately," Waits commented.

Circleville piled up some 237 yards as compared to T-V's 100 in last Friday's 34-0 shutout over the Vikings.

WAITS credited tackle Ben Vause and backs Tim Wells and Bruce Roese with the top efforts against the Tigers.

The hospital report at Groveport has improved slightly, according to head coach Bill McCann.

One new entry — fullback Ed Caldwell (foot) — cropped up during the Cruisers' 12-0 setback to Reynoldsburg last Friday.

BUT BACKS Ralph Stout and Rod McKinster were able to see limited service and — with the exception of speedster Charles Hamilton (out indefinately) — should get Groveport's starting backfield nearly up to par for Westerville Friday.

Two long passes — one of which set up Reynoldsburg's first TD, other added insurance tally — proved most costly in the loss Friday.

"But that's all it takes," McCann lamented, pointing out that his Cruisers actually picked up twice as many first downs as did the Raiders (12-6).

GROVEPORT was halted three times inside Reynoldsburg's 20. "We just couldn't keep our momentum going," McCann added.

The Cruiser mentor credited Dave Fenstermaker, Keith Legg, Donnie Miller, Caldwell and quarterback Pete Marinello with good jobs on offense, adding Stout and Bill Boring to the defensive list.

Groveport's Mid-Eight opener opponent Friday — Westerville — has all but earned the loop "sleeper" tag after a fast start this season.

THE WILDCATS exploded for a 50-6 rout of Sunbury last Friday, sparked by fleet halfback Trevor Neland, who tallied six times.

Westerville, which blanked Groveport last season, operates from an unbalanced line with split backs.

"Their rushing game favorites are inside 'dives' and sweeps," McCann revealed, adding, "they also have a good passing attack and like to 'flood' an area on you."

"THEY'RE JUST big and quick with plenty of speed," the Cruiser coach concluded.

Millersport, smarting from a broken string (12) of unscored on games, stops off at Canal Winchester Friday to provide opposition for coach Bob Blais and his Indians.

Paced by back Rudy Hansberger, the Lakers downed Carroll, 24-6, last weekend and figure to bring in a well-oiled straight T offense to clash with the Indians.

"A SPITTING, sputtering offense," hampered by fumbles and penalties was C-W's chief bugaboo in an 8-0 loss to Pickerington last Friday, according to Blais.

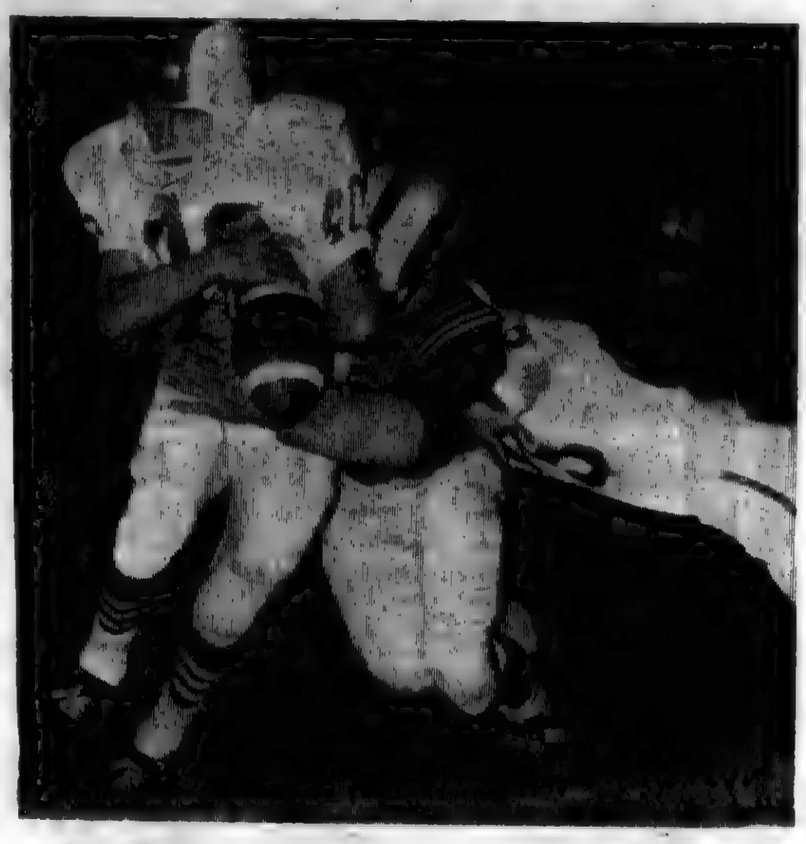
The hosts doubled C-W's total offense (200-100).

"A penalty ended our first drive early in the game," Blais said, "and we just never got going after that. We just played a very poor ball game."

BLAIS CREDITED quarterback Chris Hanners, defensive back Chuck Carpenter, safety Bill Miles and guard Steve Dety with best performances aganst Pickerington.

In other area games Friday, Carroll (0-1-1) visits Lancaster Fenwick and Hamilton Township (0-2) hosts St. Mary (1-1).

Lions, Raiders Chalk Up Wins



Gahanna posted its second win of the season with a 17-6 conquest of Bexley while Reynoldsburg nabbed win number one with a 12-0 mark over Groveport.

Chuck Freeman and Bob Lawhead notched touchdowns in Gahanna's ride over Bexley while Dick Baserman's two TD's gave Reynoldsburg the win over Groveport.

IN OTHER area action, Carroll posted six-points, the first score against Millersport in 12 games, but it wasn't enough to counter the 24 points that Millersport racked up.

Canal Winchester fell to Pickerington on a final period touchdown by the Tigers' Tom Rider.

Circleville beat Teays Valley, 34-0 and Cardington stung Hamilton Township, 48-0.

SLIPPERY PIGSKIN — Reynoldsburg halfback Monty Hayes (40) found the football a little hard to control on this play Friday at Groveport. Hayes fumbled out of bounds after picking up 11 yards on pass from quarterback Gary Shade. (Staff photos by Jack Wittenmeier).

Mother's Needs Are Key

Building or buying a house?

To meet the family's future needs, plan it around mother.

Research shows that mother's activities change more than those of any other family member, and she performs the greatest amount of work in the home, says Dorothy Lawrence, Ohio State University Extension housing specialist.

FAMILIES AND individuals vary greatly, but most families follow a general pattern of how they use space in their homes throughout the family life cycle. A Pennsylvania State University study of 100 farm families considered family activities and how they related to house arrangements and use of space.

In the study, the homemaker' act vities changed more than any other family member. For example, the family with preschool children had the greatest concentration of activity in the work area of the home, most of it involving mother. Most of her day was spent in food operations, planning, preparing and cleaning up after meals, and child care. So the mother with preschool children needs a kitchen with space for care and supervision of small children or a combination kitchen-family room or kitchen-dining room.

SHE ALSO NEEDS a view of the play area from her own work area. Preschool children two to five years old spend four times as much time outdoors as mother. Storage for wraps and toys used outside is needed near the family entrance.

House planning becomes more involved when the family is in the overlapping period with preschool and school age children. Then the family must provide activity and study space for school age children. Bedrooms become more important since the school age child will carry on his personal grooming in this area.

THE HOMEMAKER with all school-age children finds the house most crowded during the after-school hours. Mother's major activities now are food operation and leisure.

Additional storage is needed for leisure time activities of all family members. A study space with adequate light also is needed for each child.

The all-adult family finds Mother still busy with food preparation, which accounts for one-third of her time. Still more time is spent on leisure activities, but the pressure for space has decreased. Now she need not put hobby materials away after each use. The family now needs to consider a downstairs bedroom and bath in anticipation of senior years or a family illness if they live in a two-story house.

IN ALL STAGES, the laundry equipment is more convenient if located on the first floor.

Families need to look ahead at future needs and wants rather than back at what the family needed or wanted in the past.

'A MAN'S HOME IS HIS CASTLE'

One of the most important attributes of a home is a warm atmosphere where a man and his wife can plan for the future. Here the atmosphere is created by the beautiful furnishings and warm, glowing lighting.

Comfort Is One Key To Happier Living

In case you've wondered, comfort is good for you.

Psychologists have found that physical comfort helps students to learn and workers to earn. It helps prevent accidents and illness and it can turn a disgruntled parent into a lamb and a screaming infant into a cherub.

WHAT IS comfort? It might be defined as the absence of discomfort.

Ask a handful of people what comes to mind when they think of comfort and you'll get an assortment of replies — "easy shoes," "a light in your room at night," "a soft bed," "a nice, neat, warm home," are examples.

The more people you ask, the more often you'll hear the word "warm." Sometimes it means the psychological warmth of friendship and security, but it's more apt to refer to physical warmth — a warm bed, warm clothes, a warm house.

STARTING with the day in the dim past when Fred Flintstone the First stumbled out of the cold wind into a cave and found himself saying "ahhh" instead of "ugh," man has been trying to provide more comfort for himself and his family — often at any cost.

Man has built fires, pitched tents, constructed open shelters, invented windows and storm doors. He has hung tapestries on cold castle walls, built walk-in fireplaces, and warmed his beds with hot stones, warming pans and electric blankets. When Benjamin Franklin invented a heat-conserving stove people snapped them up and bricked up the fireplaces from which untold billions of British thermal units had escaped up the chimneys.

Today we're unbricking them, but we're not, by gosh, letting much heat escape from our homes.

AFTER CENTURIES of suffering from the discomfort of cold walls and drafts that swept icily across floors to freeze innocent feet, Nineteenth Century Man finally did something about it. He invented insulation, but it was only about 30 years ago that the American home owner really woke up to the fact that wrapping his house in mineral wool insulation would not only make him comfortable but would also save fuel. Now almost everybody's doing it.

Instead of buying bigger, more expensive furnaces and burning more and more fuel, the contemporary home owner makes sure his new house is insulated to recommmended standards with batts or blankets of mineral wool in floors, ceilings and walls. Then he buys a smaller heating unit and burns less fuel. He saves enough money on fuel in a few years to pay for the insulation.

He also buys a smaller air conditioning unit, if he's installing one, and pays less for it and less to run it, too.

Then he and his family learn what living comfort really is — as long as they live in that house they're warm in winter and cool in summer, secure and satisfied in thoeir cozy, comfortable heme.

PHYSICAL COMFORT is good for you, according to findings of psychologists. This spacious room with pretty of seating circling a fireplace lends itself to tranquil evenings.

Expert Offers Termite Control

A house will not be ruined or collapse because termites are present. Consider control as another repair job that may be necessary to maintain the house in sound condition, advises Dr. W. K. Delaplane, Jr., Ohio State University Extension specialist in pest control.

"Buy termite control service with the same care and discrimination that is necessary in the purchase of any other service for property," the specialist says. "Always be assured that you are dealing with a reliable firm which has an established place of business."

DR. DELAPLANE suggests five ways you can help assure yourself of reliable termite control service:

- If a firm offers references of work done in the past, take time to check such references carefully.
- When considering a local firm, check your Better Business Bureau or county extension agent to find out whether or not the firm is responsible.
- When considering an out-of-town firm, make sure it has a street address as its principal office and that it is responsible. Check the firm's references. Dependable companies welcome this.

Modern Garage A Must, Says Coak Garage City

Columbus homeowners are proving the theory that today's living calls for more in a garage than a place to put a car, according to one of the city's leading garage merchandising centers.

Joe and Orla Coakley, owners of Coak Builders Garage City at 3535 E. Main-st in Whitehall, feel that the day of the conventional "salt box" garage that sits at one corner of the lot is gone.

"Today's homeowner not only takes pride in ownership of neat attractive property but also recognizes the importance of protecting and increasing resale value of his property," said Joe Coakley, president of the firm.

"The addition of camping trailers, boats, second automobiles and motorbikes requires larger garages than those that were built 10 or 15 years ago," he said.

In addition to custom building garages, Coak Builders Garage City also does interior and exterior remodeling and such home improvements as room additions, recreation rooms, sidings, storm windows and doors, awnings and patio canopies, roofing and fencing.

Wet Basement A Problem? Follow Seven Easy Steps

Basement drainage problems can be solved while the house is being built. They can be corrected later, but at considerably more expense, notes Melville L. Palmer, Ohio State University Extension agriculture engineer.

Palmer lists these suggestions for insuring a dry basement.

BE SURE the lot is graded so that the land slopes away from the house in all directions for a distance of at least 10 feet. If the house is on a hillside, built a shallow waterway on the uphill side to divert water around it.

Place four-inch drain tile completely around the outside of the basement footer and backfill with at least a foot of gravel. Better yet, place tile both inside and outside the footer to relieve water pressure on the floor, and walls of the basement. This pressure can cause cracks in the concrete where there is inadequate drainage.

DRAIN ALL tile lines and surface waterways into a suitable outlet, such as a storm sewer or ditch. A gravity outlet is best, but if the outlet is not deep enough for drain tile they can be drained into a sump and the water pumped out with an automatic sump pump.

DRAIN TILE spaced about 25 feet apart and three feet deep in the yard will provide better drainage for grass, shrubs, trees and gardens. They also will help prevent waterlogging of heavy soils in the area of the septic tank leach bed.

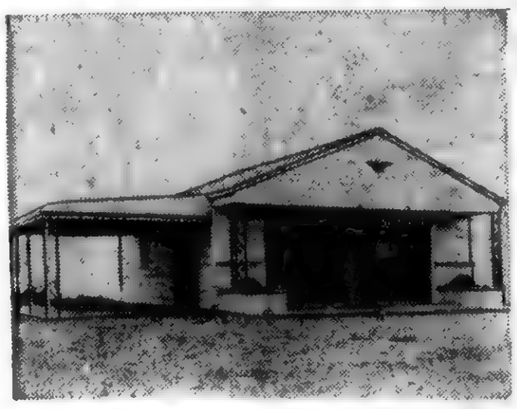
Check Land, Landscape Before Buying New Home

Buying a new home? Then check the land and the landscaping advises the American Association of Nurserymen. Modern advances in landscaping and planting may make the difference between enjoyment of your land for living, and not.



CHECK THE design, the position of the house on the lot and the quality of the landscaping. It usually will pay a prospective home buyer to hire a good landscape nurseryman to go over the property with him and offer advice.

He will check the grades before any painting is done, and might sometimes be able to save good trees. Some builders install the cheapest of plants in a skimpy row along the front of the house just to take away the bareness. Others do a capable landscape job.

The nurseryman can help you decide whether or not you are receiving sound value in the planting. If the builder allows a rebate for landscaping, the nurseryman can tell what you may purchase for this sum.

Some builders do a basic planting job and then provide a landscape plan for the home owner to have completed by a recommended nurseryman. This is sound procedure, too, resulting in good landscaping values that increase the resale value of the home.

IF LITTLE or no landscaping is offered with the house, it can be achieved by experienced landscape nurserymen, by means of an FHA home improvement loan up to $3,500, or more, being available for this purpose. Other types of loans also are available for the purpose.

Plant Shrubs With Purpose

Every plant, every tree or shrub planted by the home owner should have a special purpose. Beauty is the principal purpose for planting the home property, according to surveys, but there are many other reasons, as follows:

FOR SHADE—shade trees offer comfort and beauty in sizzling summer weather. When correctly placed they cool the home, or materially reduce air-conditioning costs. Shade trees lower temperatures near the ground as the layer of hottest air is transferred to the tree tops. They also may provide autumn color. Evergreens provide all-year color, particularly welcome green in winter.

Hedges provide family privacy — much needed in some housing developments. Hedges may provide flowers that are pleasing to neighbors as well as yourself.

Flowering trees, shrubs and annual plants offer the spring, summer and fall beauty of many types of blooms from roses to apple blossoms. Trees and shrubs offer foods in the form of fruits and berries, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Large Home Builders Say Now Is Time To Buy Home

One of Cenral Ohio's largest house builders contends that, despite increased mortgage interest rates, now is a good time to purchase a home.

Virginia Homes, in an intensive promotional campaign aimed at prospective home buyers, points out that "before long, you may regard today's prices as bargains."

While admitting that interest rates are up, Virginia Homes claims that the "let's wait for the price of money to come down" attitude may well be a fallacy.

"No one knows when this may be," they said, "and rates may go even higher."

"Anyway, mortgage interest rates are not the buyer's main problem if he delays," the builder states. "Other more predictable factors are steadily driving up the price of new homes. These include increases in labor, materials and land costs that are adding at least $1,000 a year to the cost of a home.

"Many authorities see at least a 20 percent increase in home prices by 1970," they say.

Virginia Homes officials feel that "half-truths and confusion in the buyers' minds" are responsible for a slump in the home market in recent months.

"The home you buy now lill appreciate in value as prices rise and your home will be a hedge against inflation," they say. "You'll be ahead on income taxes since interest and property taxes are deductible. And you will be enjoying your new home sooner, which is still one of the best reasons for buying today," they say.

Here Are Hints For Household Decorating

Upholstered furniture pieces are likely targets for a variety of stains and spots. How to remove some of the more difficult stains is a problem all homemakers face. A handy booklet which provides suggestions for proper care of upholstered fabrics is available by writing the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers, Space 1721, 666 Lake Shore-dr, Chicago, Ill., 60611, and enclosing 25 cents.

Wood paneling, a popular part of the decor of many living areas in the home, can be redone effectively with a variety of coatings. If an opaque finish is desired, choices inclube flat paint, semi-gloss, emulsion or rubber-base paints. For a transparent coating, apply a wood filler where needed, then shellac or varnish and apply a good coat of wax.

Latex foam mattresses never have to be turned. In fact, the original latex foam units had only one sleeping surface. This is a boon to busy homemakers, especially with super-size units or bunk beds where it is hard to turn the mattress.

Proper care prolongs the life and beauty of wood, plastics, leather and marble furniture surfaces. A compact guide full of suggestions and helpful hints on the care and use of these materials is available for 25 cents by writing to the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers, Space 1721, 666 Lake Shore-dr, Chicago, Ills., 60611.

Can this be a good time to buy a home?

Perhaps you've heard that "money is tight" for homebuilding, and that as a result mortgage interest rates are up. Amateur economists may have told you that now isn't a good time to buy a home. "Wait for the money market to loosen up and interest rates to come down," is their theme song.

Well, is it true? Like most well-meant advice there is some truth in it. Money for new home loans is harder to get and interest rates have gone up — along with everything else. If money becomes more plentiful for home loans (and no one knows when this might be), interest rates may come down slightly. But that is not the main problem if you delay a homebuying decision.

Regardless of slight variations in interest rates, other factors—factors that can be calculated with much greater reliability — are steadily pushing the cost of new homes up. The cost of labor is going up. The cost of almost every product used in a home is steadily going up. The cost of land is going up. These cost increases are adding at least $1,000 a year to the price of a new home. If you wait a year, or two years for possible slight decreases in interest rates, you will pay more for a home than if you bought right now. Many authorities see at least a 20% increase in home prices by 1970.

So is this a good time to buy? Before long you may regard today's prices as bargains. The home you buy now will appreciate in value as prices rise and your home will be a hedge against inflation. You'll be ahead on incomes taxes since interest and property taxes are deductible. And you will be enjoying your own new home sooner, which is still one of the best reasons for buying today.

These are the facts. If you would like more details, stop in at any of the four Virginia Homes Communities and discuss your particular situation with our sales representatives. They can still offer you the best possible terms and financing on some of the best new homes available today.

Money Tight But Loans Available

By KATHRYN MASON
Spectator Staff Writer

Although the interest rates for home loans are going up, they are not as high as they have been in the past and our rates are low when compared to those of other countries.

Also, for the first six months this year the number of home loans is greater than that of the first six months of 1965.

These remarks by Joseph Linville, executive vice president of the Ohio Savings and Loan were followed by a warning. "Don't be misled. This rise in home loans has been caused by a tremendous demand," he said.

"Much of the gain was in the early part of the year. Money has been getting tighter."

Linville projected that the figures for the month of August will be about equal to those of last year.

Interest rates now range between 6½ and seven percent depending on the duration of the loan and the percent of the appraised value of the home which the loan is for. Recent practices have been for the loan to be for 25 years on 80 percent of the appraised value. This means the home buyer must come up with 20 percent of the cost on his own.

Previously home loans could be obtained for 90 percent of the appraised value of the home over a period of 30 years.

Linville attributes the change to the government's policy of using only monetary policy to put a brake on the economy. Monetary policy is procedures used by the Federal Reserve Board to control the flow of money. The alternative is a fiscal policy which concerns legislation regarding money budgeting — such as a raise in taxes.

"Many lenders have gone out of the home loan business," Linville said.

Another difficulty concerns the source of money for the lending institutions which are increases in the net amount of savings and mortgage repayments.

Linville said high prices have hampered our ability to save. Another contributing factor is wealthy persons who invest in government securities, rather than savings, Linville said. "There is less money available for loans now."

All this means the home buyer will not be getting as much of a loan, it will be at a higher rate and he will probably be asked to pay it back earlier.

Linville thinks, however, Joe Doe is getting a fair shake. "Take one of the best security risks in the country — U.S. Steel — the lowest rate they can get is six percent on a 90 day loan."

Put in that perspective, the general public is not getting shoved to the wall considering they want 25-year loans, he said.

Tips Offered By OSU For Painting Interior Walls

Painting interior walls?

Improve a do-it-yourself job by following these pointers, suggests Doris Snook, Extension housing specialist at Ohio State University.

FIRST, assemble supplies and equipment. Select a good quality paint in a suitable type, color and in quantity sufficient for the job. A paint dealer can help in judging quality, type and quantity. Choose and use a thinner according to label directions. Gather brushes, roller, masking tape, drop cloth, foil or paper plate for can and brush, rags and a solid step ladder.

SECOND, prepare the room. remove curtains, shades, blinds, pictures, books, accessories and as much furniture as possible. Cover any remaining furniture. Use masking tape to protect window glass, light fixtures and other fixed items.

THIRD, prepare yourself, read label directions. Wear old clothes, comfortable, firm shoes and gloves.

Banks Offer Methods To Make Financing Easier

Like death and taxes, one of life's certainties seem to be home improvements. If the house is new, there is usually a basement or attic to finish off, or a porch to add. If the house is older, the homeowner needs to begin thinking ni terms of additions or repairs.

The cheapest way to finance home improvements is to save ahead. But if you don't have the time to accumulate such a fund, you can borrow the money you'll need.

Here is a brief description of six ways to finance your home improvements through your bank:

FHA TITLE I loan. You can borrow up to $3,500; take five years to repay loans. Generally you pay five dollars for every $100 you borrow. Interest is discounted; the cost is deducted from the loan at the very start. Remember to add total interest charges to the amount you borrow when you apply for your loan. Then, you will get the actual dollars you need for home improvements.

To qualify, your improvements must be "built-in," or become a permanent part of the property. The Federal Housing Administration insures Title I Loans. So it insists they substantially protect or improve the basic livability or utility of your property.

CONVENTIONAL BANK Installment Loan. It is usually more flexible as to purpose, amount, and terms of repayment. Banks make them entirely on their own. Thus, they are not subject to FHA regulations. And you may finance non built-in improvements such as wall-to-wall carpeting, swimming pools, landscaping.

OPEN-END Mortgage Loan. If your mortgage contains an "open-end" provision, you may be able to borrow more money on the same mortagage. The amount will depend on how much money you still owe.

MORTGAGE REFINANCING. If you have t conventional mortgage, you may be able to retire it. Then get another in a larger amount to include money for your home improvements. Most often, it will involve a new title search, recording, and other extra fees. But the over-all cost will still be lower in most cases than Title I or other short-term loans.

PERSONAL LOANS. You won't be able to get as much money here. Many state laws limit the amount you can borrow. Also repayment periods are usually shorter. But it is worth investigating if other avenues are closed.

NEW IDEA IN KNOLLS ARLINGTON

House Of Enchantment Enchanting

THE FRONT ENTRANCE to the House of Enchantment in Knolls Arlington features a unique walkway and front doors painted in blue hues to match the interior of the house. The home was built by Knolls Developers. Real estate transactions are being handled by Colonial Realtors.

By VICKI HOY
Spectator Staff Writer

The House of Enchantment in Knolls Arlington is a team effort of Knolls Developers, Colonial Realtors, Lawrence and Snouffer Architects, Sears' decorating department and Columbia Gas of Ohio.

They have combined resources and come up with a usable convenient and luxurious home. The formal and informal areas of the house have been blended as successfully as the color scheme of greens and blues.

THE ARCHITECT

Paul Snouffer of Lawrence and Snouffer Architects designed the House of Enchantment.

He described the style of design as "contemporary, and conventional."

"It was designed as a commercial venture and for the general public's appreciation," he said.

Snouffer didn't want to give a name to the house but when pressed by the builders he reluctantly tagged it a "Garden Cottage."

"It is difficult to design a house for people," he said, "because generally they want an Early American Colonial house but want a contemporary design that will allow for all the modern conveniences."

He believes the House of Enchantment is a good working plan. "There is good circulation and the rooms are of a good size," he said. "None of the rooms are too small or cramped, nor are they too large to furnish economically."

He said the outside of the house is a combination of rough-sawed cedar and local limestone.

"The decorator really had a free hand," Snouffer said. "We changed a lot of things for him. We even redesigned the entrance, raising the roof three feet to make room for an antique that the decorator wanted to put in."

"He also came outside and painted the garage door blue to coordinate the outside colors with the interior."

THE DECORATOR

Walter C. Cassell, the home fashion coordinator of the Sears decorating staff, has been limited only by a liberal budget.

"The main idea," he said, "is to show Columbus that Sears, not known for a line of expensive fine furniture, can offer the finest money can buy in furniture and swank decoration."

He decorated the House of Enchantment in a Colonial motif with a unique antique treatment from the New England 1800 era.

The actor and art critic, Vincent Price, works for Sears. Price and his staff are retained by Sears to collect national treasures (valuable art objects) ranging from paintings to drapes. Sears has authentic documented replicas made from these pieces.

The eight-foot antique replica that "raised the roof" is a copy of a John Goddard secretaire of early 19th century New England.

There will be other National Treasure replicas in the House of Enchantment: large wingchairs in crewell print, draperies in the two secondary bedrooms, small decorative art objects, an old fashioned meat tenderizer in the kitchen, wall hurricane lamps and urns.

Most of the house is done in green and blue. Inside, white shutters with blue diamond-glass inserts give the kitchen an early American feeling.

The breakfast room off the kitchen is separated from the family room by a beaded wall. Rows of plastic beads form the roof divider.

A sculpture of a cigar store Indian will stand in the inside garden of the entrance hall. Because of the glass sliding doors off the inside garden, you can see the continuation of the garden outdoors.

Cassell is pleased with the unique drapery treatments he used. In the family room, the top of the pleats are diamond shaped. In another room "flash pleats" are used. These are white drapes with the inside of the pleats colored blue.

In the living room the walls are painted white and every two feet is a narrow strip of blue printed wall paper. This technique makes the whole room look as if it were papered.

The "L-shaped" House of Enchantment is a "break with the new," Cassell said. "It is the spirit of '76 tempered in today's mode."

It seems to be a house easy to live in.

Big Beds Make Better Bedrooms

All the hullabaloo about king-sized and queen-sized mattresses and box springs is nothing new. They have been around for many years but on a more exclusive basis.

Famous men as far back as Abraham Lincoln and George Washington saw and felt the need for more sleeping space. They realized the importance of getting a good night's rest and resorted to the then not-so simple solution — acquiring beds comfortably large enough to fit their frames. They both stood 6'4" in their stocking feet.

THE BASIC REASON for a larger bed is comfort. It will probably become more and more important as present and future generations continue to grow taller, thanks to healthier diets, and vitamin pills.

Since the average person spends one-third of his life in bed, recovering from the hectic pace we have unwittingly set for ourselves, the first thought for the bedroom should be comfort, where one can get healthful sleep:

Aside from the practical needs oversize beds can accomplish, there are a number of decorative possibilities to think about when the decision has been made to exchange a "people" size bed for an oversize one.

THE INSTANT PROBLEM that arises is one that set you to wondering just how to fit an oversize bed into the average bedroom. Since the popularity of these beds has increased in recent years, so have the many ideas created by interior designers.

Visions of knocking out walls, throwing out present furniture and starting all over are for the most part pure fantasy. Bedrooms don't really have to be built around the bed, but quite often the oversize bed can provide the decorative point of interest in size, shape, design and style. With built-in storage areas and master bedrooms designed with master baths, the space problem is simplified.

If you don't have the luxury of a large bedroom but you do recognize the need for the luxury of a larger bed, it can be fitted into the average size bedroom with a few minor adjustments, or additions of furniture pieces designed to create a feeling of more space. One solution suggested is the use of wall-hung storage units for clothes, shelving decoratively attached to the wall which can serve as night tables, or as dressing tables, and bookcases that can be mounted to the wall. One of the secrets in saving space is to place things off the floor to give the illusion of the more freedom of movement in traffic patterns.

AN OVERSIZED BED highlights this master bedroom designed in tranquil hues for maximum comfort. A green pattern is repeated on the mattress cover, wall decorations and their upholstery. Box springs and metal frame match the decor and the pattern is repeated in the bed linens.

Bathroom Lighting Can Make A Big Difference

When it's tooth-brushing time in the morning, will the face in the bathroom mirror look cheery and bright or haggard and wan?

A LOT DEPENDS on the color of the bathroom walls and trim. The right choice of hues in repainting bathroom can make a big difference.

Walls painted in some yellows and greens reflect a most unflattering light. Pink, rose, coral and peach tones reflect a warm healthful glow that starts the day off right. Pure green and gold are good choices. Blues with a touch of red are warmer and more flattering than pure or greenish blues.

Experts recommend semi-gloss or gloss enamel when painting bathroom walls for many reasons. Enamels keep moisture vapor from entering walls and damaging plaster. Enamels are also easy to keep clean, can be scrubbed often and are more mildew resistant.

BEFORE APPLYING the enamel, dirt should be washed away to insure adhesion of the paint and to prevent peeling. Glossy areas should be dulled with sandpaper or steel wool.

To make a bathroom look larger, walls and wood trim should be painted the same color. More than two accent colors in the average sized bathroom are distracting — accents should be picked up in towels or curtains.

By JERRY VAN EGMOND

(Editor's Note: Jerry Van Egmond was born and raised on his father's bulb farms in Sassenheim, Holland. He came to this country in 1958 as a bulb salesman, but decided to make his home here. Presently he is manager of Ongaro's Nursery and Garden Centre, Inc.)

Do you remember early last spring looking out of the kitchen window, wishing you had crocus in bloom like your neighbors? It looked so good after all winter without flowers in the yard.

Some of you, right then, drove to the Garden Center and wanted to buy bulbs in bloom and were highly disappointed to hear that you have to plan two seasons ahead. In case you have forgotten, now is the season to plant your bulbs and plan your early spring garden.

MOST EVERY one is familiar with tulips of some sort and daffodils, crocus, hyacinths. For the beginner, I would suggest to start with some in each group.

Find out when these varieties are going to bloom so you can plan your beautiful spring garden. Not all tulips bloom at the same time; there are tulip varieties, such as Kaufmanniana, which bloom as early as the first week of April and those which bloom the last week of May, such as Montgomery.

THE NEWEST group of tulips is the Darwyn Hybrid Group. The main characteristics of these are their tall strong stems, lasting quality (up to three weeks in my own yard) and their bloom size. Last spring I measured Spring Song, a brilliant red, nine inches across; Apeldoorn, orange red, and Gudosnik, burnt orange, also attained that size, almost the size of a soup bowl.

The majority of these hybrids are red, but this year a yellow one is available in limited supply. This beautiful yellow hybrid is called President Kennedy. I had only three of these in my yard as a test this spring. It is exciting to show these hybrids to your friends.

MOST GARDEN Centers price their bulbs by the dozen. The new buyers of bulbs comment that they wish to buy only one of this and one of that. Generally they do not visualize the effect of "one of this and one of that." Because next spring there is no effect, just disappointment. Plant your bulbs in clusters of dozens of one kind and color and get real beauty. Make it showy.

Please don't mix all your bulbs, because you are getting tall, short, medium, early blooming, late, in between. So when spring comes it can be a mess. If you are working on a budget buy fewer varieties, but buy enough of each to give you loads of beauty for years to come.

YOU KNOW that bulbs are failure proof and that they last several years. Crocus and daffodils can last indefinitely. All you do is plant them. It does not make any difference if you have a green thumb or not. Everybody can raise flowers from bulbs. The success is certain.

For the more knowledgeable gardeners, the one who has planted bulbs for years, look into the smaller miscellaneous bulbs such as chionodoxa, scilla, anemone blanda, frittelaria, allium, aconites, Dutch Iris, and many others. These species can be the cream topping on your spring garden.

Electricity Can Bring You Year-Round Springtime

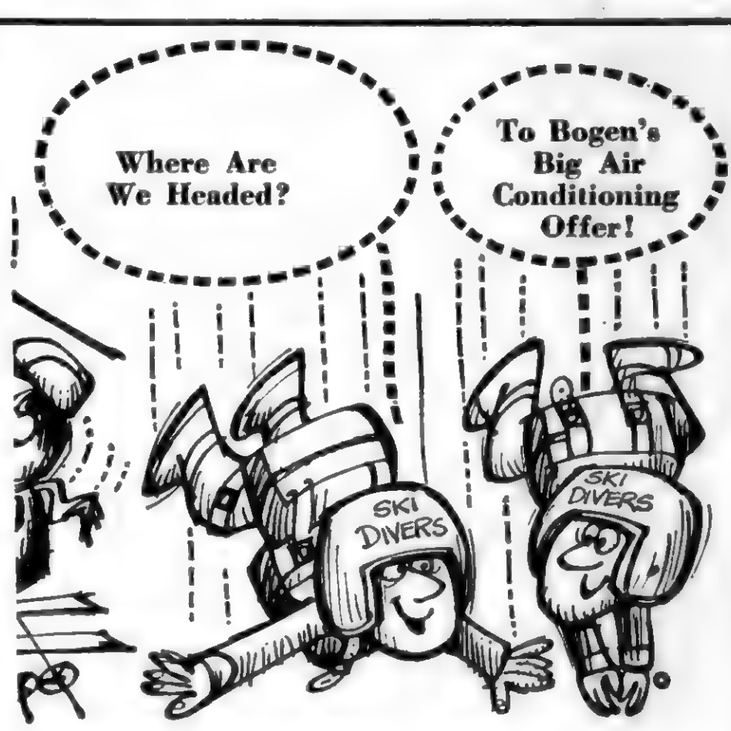
Thanks to flameless electricity you can now be the complete master of your climate, as well as your home, according to the Live Better Electrically Program.

Electric comfort conditioning helps you keep a feeling of springtime in your home every day of the year from the bitter cold of winter to the muggy heat of summer.

In addition, electric comfort conditioning will let you enjoy these important benefits and many more that only electricity can provide.

Everything in your home—heating, cooling, lighting and appliances — can be run by modern, efficient flameless electricity.

Automatic humidity control ensures just the right amount of moisture in the air for a wonderful feeling of well-being. It keeps the skin and nasal passages from drying out and many people feel it also helps to reduce chances of catching a cold. In addition, proper humidity balance keeps furniture from drying out or warping, and reduces mildew.



You'll be able to sit back and enjoy the comfort of a springtime atmosphere year-round. In winter, flameless electric heating does away with cold drafts and sudden blasts of heat. In summer, flameless electric air conditioning provides gentle cooling action. Electrostatic air filters also remove pollen and other foreign matter from the air.

Because electric comfort conditioning uses no fuel, but only clean, modern, flameless electricity, even light-colored walls, draperies and furnishing will stay new-looking season after season.

The working partner of flameless electric comfort conditioning is full insulation, conforming to the all-weather comfort standard for your climate. In addition to increasing the value of your home, this is your assurance of lower operating costs and great comfort.

With most types of electric heating, thermostats in each room throughout your house let you select the degree of heating you want—when and where you want it. Bedrooms, for example, can be set at one temperature while living areas are kept at another.

Because electric equipment uses few or no moving parts, it's as quiet as can be.

First Federal Compiles Enviable Mortgage Record

It's been more than 30 years since First Federal Savings and Loan Association began making mortgage loans and in that time the institution has compiled an enviable record that doesn't show up in the yearly statements.

First Federal has yet to file its first foreclosure although it has made millions of dollars in mortgage loans.

Richard I. Eidson, president of First Federal, says the firm is "proud of that record because it shows we know how to help people become homeowners through the type of mortgage loans that fit easily into a family budget."

First Federal, in addition to maintaining low interest rates, provides other mortgage loan services such as holding closing costs to a minimum, reducing red tape and permitting prepayment of all or part of a mortgage loan without penalty.

"Under this plan, if a homeowner earns extra money or receives a bonus, he can reduce his indebtedness and save on interest," Eidson explained.

First Federal gained the right to use the word "first" in its name by being the first savings and loan association in Columbus to receive a charter from the federal government.

It was also the first savings and loan association to insure savings accounts and to open a branch office.

First Federal's offices are located downtown at 65 E. State-st, on the Hilltop at 2680 W. Broad-st and on the East Side at 2450 E. Main-st.

More Quiet Available In Homes, Rooms

A new idea in remodeling offers a priceless feature for better family living — more quiet in the home.

There are now steps which can be taken to control irritating sounds within a room or between rooms, in existing homes or apartments.

THESE STEPS utilize just two standard industry products —acoustical ceiling tile and sound deadening insulation board.

To control noise between rooms, a plan has been developed for an auxiliary wall of sound deadening insulation board and gypsum wallboard, which can be placed next to the existing wall.

The sound-stopping auxiliary wall uses two-by-three-foot wood studs placed 24 inches apart, on 2x 3-foot wood floor and ceiling plates. between the new wall and the existing wall.

The new studs are faced with half-inch sound deadening insulation board with the nail heads dimpled. Half-inch gypsum wallboard is then applied vertically with the joints offset 12 inches with respect to the sound deadening board joints by installing with drywall laminating compound.

THE GYPSUM wallboard is temporarily blocked around the perimeter until the laminating compound has adequate bond. The gypsum wallboard joints are then taped aand finished and the entire perimeter of the new wall is sealed in place.

As a final step, noise is more effectively confined in a room if the door is of the solid core type with vinyl gasketing and a snug-up threshhold.

To control noise within the rooms, consider insulation board acoustical ceiling tile. Soft surfaces absorb noise; hard surfaces reflect it. Acoustical ceiling tile is essentially a "soft" material which absorbs up to 70 percent of the excess noise striking its surfaces.

SOUND ENTERS the tiny openings in the surface of the tile, and the sound energy waves are reduced or eliminated by the soft porous fibers.

Furniture Is A Gift That Keeps Giving

Deciding on a gift for a special person on a special occasion finds most of us racking our brains trying to think of something appropriate, original and long lasting.

A most obvious idea, often overlooked, is furniture. It is a gift that goes on "giving" for many years.

Furniture as a gift has many advantages. It will last a long time, not only for the service and usefulness it offers but for the thoughtful memories inspired over the years. It is a practical kind of remembrance suitable for any occasion, whether it is a birthday, anniversary, wedding, graduation or such classic observance as Christmas, Mother's Day and Father's Day.

VW Same Outside, New Inside

Columbus area Volkswagen dealers are looking back on record sales and merchandising advances in 1966 as they introduce their 1967 line to the public.

Don F. Marsh, executive vice-president for Midwestern Volkswagen Corp., Columbus-based distributor for Ohio and Kentucky, reports that the 59 franchised Volkswagen dealers in the area twice broke all-time monthly sales records during the 1966 model year—in March and again in August.

As for 1967, Volkswagen officials say their 1967 "beetle" not only looks different from last year's model, "but also incorporates more major improvements that ever before."

Stuart Perkins, president of Volkswagen of America, Inc., explained that the Volkswagen being sold in the United States is actually different from the "bug" built for the rest of the world. This is noticed in reshaped front fenders which provide a new headlight mounting.

Another key new feature is a dual braking system utilizing a tandem-type master cylinder on the VW sedan and coupe. If either the front or rear system fails, the other half still functions.

A new 12-volt electrical system provides brighter lights and quicker cold-weather starting. A new generator begins charging at idling speed, assuring full-charge in the battery even under prolonged stop-and-go conditions.

Other convenience and safety features include retractable lap-type seat belts up front and lap-belt anchorages in the rear, dual back-up lights, two-speed windshield wipers, recessed interior door handles, new safety locks with push-button locking controls, spill-proof battery and soft plastic knobs for all dash controls and window cranks.

Engine refinements include a somewhat larger engine with a 91.10 cubic inch displacement, up from last year's 78-42 cubic inch plant. Torque has been increased 14 percent and the final drive ratio has been lowered to reduce engine speed in all four forward gears.

The 1967 Volkswagen will come in the traditional beetle," the sporty Karmann Ghia, the microbus and the two models introduced last year, the square-back station wagon and the fastback sedan.

Least body changes this year are in the Karmann Ghia, which looks almost identical to the original 1955 model.

The fastback, squareback and microbus models are all virtually unchanged outside but sport numerous interior improvements and new safety features.

The 1967 Volkswagens may be seen at Classic Cars, Inc., 4639 W. Broad-st; Midwestern Sales and Service, 1855 Northwest-bl and Davidson-Green, Volkswagen, 701 S. Hamilton-rd.

DESIGNED FOR EASY LIVING, the 1967 Volkswagen 7-0 passenger station wagon looks the same as last year's but incorporates a number of under-the-skin improvements. Among them are a new third-gear ratio for easier hill-climbing and a 12-volt electrical system and generator which charges even at idling speeds. Also available for 1967 are the standard sedan, square-back station wagon, fastback sedan and Karmann Ghia sports coupe.

Plan Kitchen For Comfort

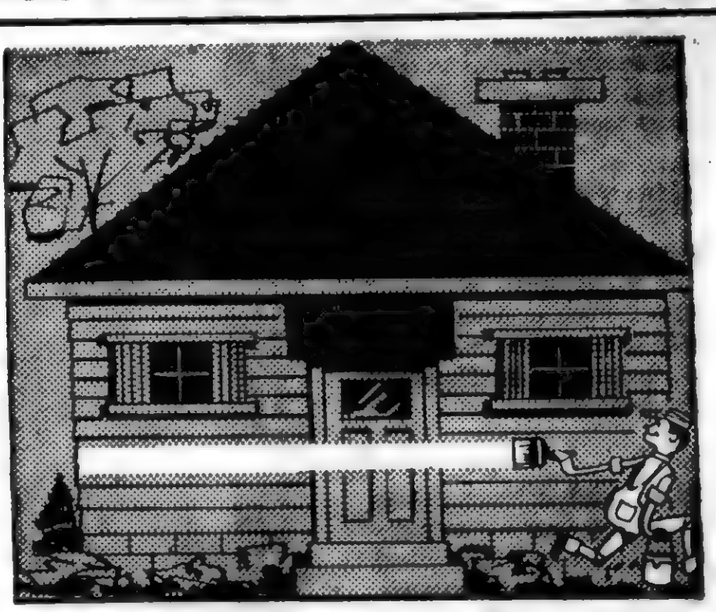
Every homemaker dreams of the ideal kitchen. Expert, well-planned remodeling can turn a harried housewife's daydream into reality. Whether a kitchen is of tiny or spacious proportions, there is an ideal, space-saving layout which would utilize the space provided most efficiently and attractively.

Layout and lighting are two of the most important features in kitchen planning. It's best to start any remodeling with a scale drawing, listing all available counter and storage space, as well as room for appliances and eating space.

OVERHEAD lighting should be soft, with additional fixtures directly over the cooking and eating areas. Skylights and suspended illuminated ceilings are some possibilities.

For maximum convenience, kitchen layout can provide for the sink to be placed between the cooktop and the refrigerator, with counters placed to form a continuous line between the major appliances.

The "U" shaped layout is a popular and convenient one. This consists of the sink, dishwasher and ample counter space on one arm of the "U," cooking appliances on another arm and storage cabinets and a large work counter which can double as a breakfast bar on the third arm. Other layout formations are the "L," "V" and "S" patterns.



To reduce expense in remodeling a kitchen, it is wise to investigate plumbing and wiring and try to stick to existing lines whenever it is possible. However, avoid false economy.

BE SURE WIRING and plumbing capacity are equal to the additional load created when appliances are installed. Making necessary changes in plumbing and wiring right at the start of kitchen remodeling projects can avoid a lot of unnecessary trouble and expense later.

In a large kitchen, extra work space can be had through the addition of a work-island, complete with extra sink and chopping block.

Built-in appliances eliminate the bulk of free-standing appliances in small kitchens and free valuable floor space. Many new models of kitchen appliances are designed for a "built-in look" and space-saving convenience.

Whether the kitchen is large or small, its storage space and convenience can be enhanced by making full use of wall space, with everything from pegboards to built-in cabinets and shelves. Use range hoods or an exhaust fan whenever possible.

Low Upkeep Makes Roof Top Bargain

When the exasperated homeowner complains "I can't earn enough money to keep a roof over our heads," he is using an expression which is as obsolete as outdoor bathrooms. A new roof actually is one of the least expensive items to go into today's home.

The cost of a roof of the most durable type of asphalt shingle comes to approximately $20 per year — one of the biggest bargains in housing.

Heavyweight asphalt shingles are applied for between $28 and $32 per 100 square feet. This brings the total cost of shingling an average 1500 square foot roof to less than $500. Since heavyweights are guaranteed to last up to 25 years, the actual cost of the roof is only $19.70 per year.

Other benefits include protection from costly damages to interior walls and furnishings, which can take place when the old roof starts to leak. The added thickness of heavyweights, those weighing 290 pounds or more for every 100 square feet of roof, protects against weather abuses. Self-sealing heavyweights give maximum protection from high winds. Their adhesive strip bonds them to the shingles below.

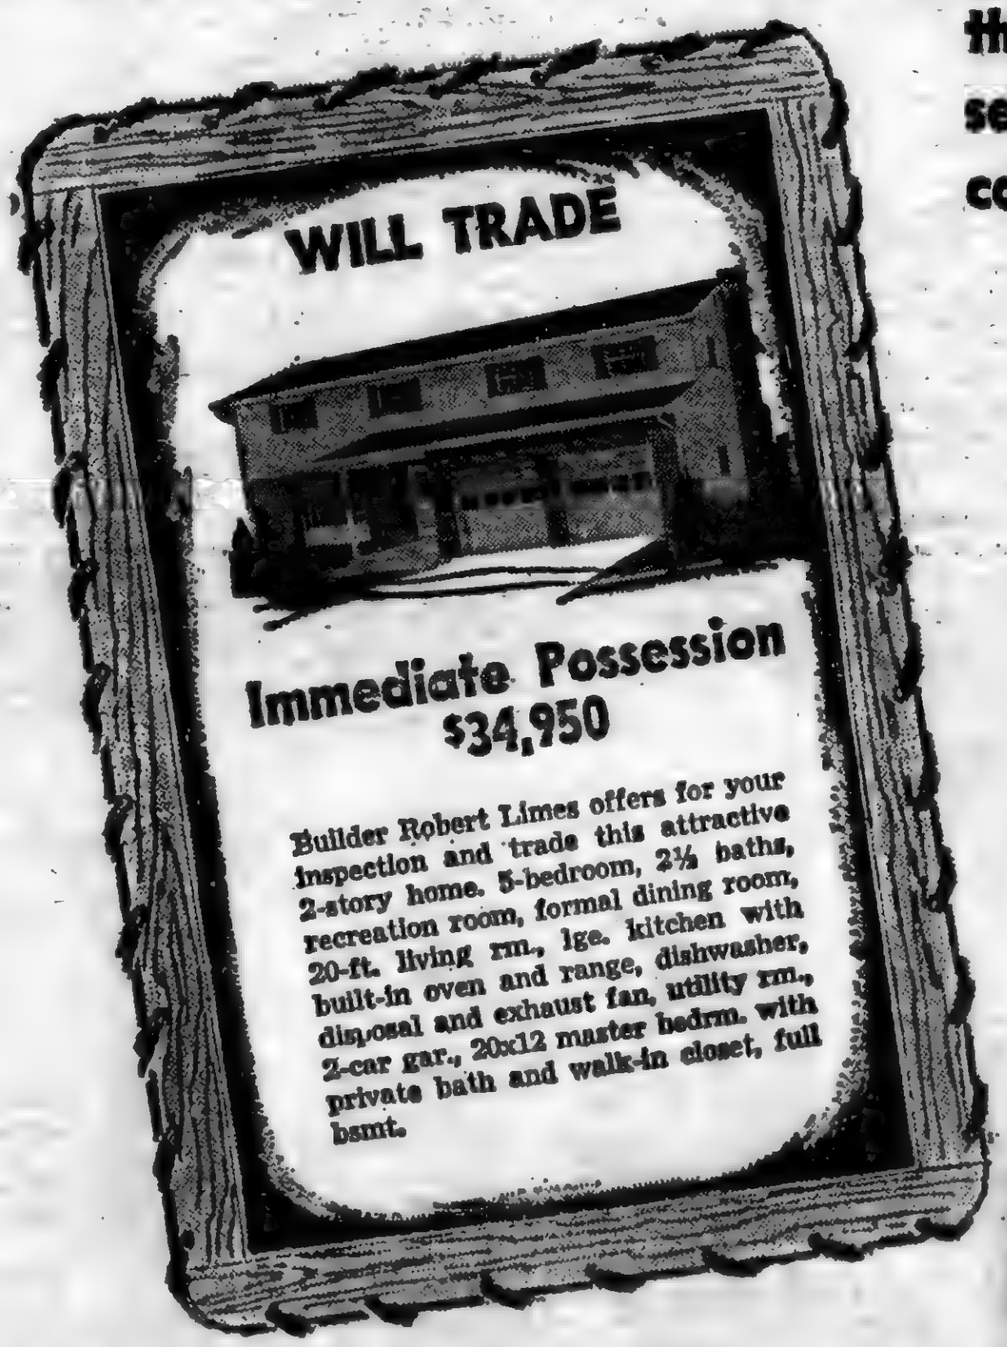
Appearance also is an intangible benefit. When you want to sell the house even after 15 or 20 years, the attractiveness of a new-looking roof will make a good initial impression on the potential buyer.

West Worst, South Best For Patio Position

Changing family living habits have transformed the occasionally used patio into one of the home's most lived-in "rooms." With its new importance in family life, the outdoor living room should be planned and built with care comparable to the rest of the house.

One question is: Where to put it? West is worse. The afternoon and evening western sun will bake the area. A south or southwest exposure is excellent for an outdoor room if protected from the western sun.

Most families prefer their outdoor living area adjacent to the interior living room, with a large window area uniting the two spaces.



Protection from the prevailing winds is another consideration in locating a patio. It can often be situated so that the house is a shield.

PENNIES A DAY

What bargain - conscious homemakers wouldn't spend 2.9 cents a day to save an hour washing dishes? That's what studies say it costs for electricity to operate an automatic dishwasher. It has also been shown that the use of a dishwasher saves the housewife about an hour in kitchen clean-ups daily.

SAYS CITIES NOT MEETING CHALLENGE

Shamansky Asks Urban 'ABC's'

"Action, brotherhood and concern" should replace "apathy, bigotry and confusion" as the "ABC's of urban life," Democratic congressional candidate Robert N. Shamansky urged this week.

"If the American city is to attain its greatest level of achievement, it must begin with a new set of ABC's," Shamansky said. "The future of the city—if there is to be a future—must be developed through a combination of action, brotherhood and concern."

Shamansky said it was clear that "we have failed to build the kind of city that will allow each man the opportunity for full participation in its daily life.

"We have built gleaming skyscrapers," he said, "but we have destroyed the human spirit. We have brought people together in the city but in doing so we have actually drawn them apart.

The 12th District challenger blamed "acute growing pains unparalleled in human history" for the problems of urban centers:

"We cannot hope that time, and only time, will relieve this distress," he said. "Instead, the fate of the patient depends upon the commitment of every citizen to restoring the city to good health."

He warned that "unless we accept the challenge of finding imaginative new ways to solve our festering problems, we may be confronted with problems that ultimately will defy our imagination."

Shamansky said making the widest use of human resources was "the overriding challenge to the city."

"Ask an architect to plan a building and he will do so; ask an engineer to build a highway and he will do so," he said.

"Why, then, is it not also possible for man to achieve the same goals for the human spirit?" he asked. But he said that "first we must make the same commitment to building human beings as we have to erecting our finest structures."

Shamansky said a city's "only importance is measured by the extent to which it serves all of its people—and the dignity it reserves to each individual."

Shamansky also congratulated Gov. James A. Rhodes this week for his decision to debate Democratic gubernatorial candidate Frazier Reams, Jr., before the City Club Forum of Cleveland.

"This is clearly in the spirit and tradition of American political life," he said.

"It is indeed unfortunate for the voters of Columbus and Franklin County that my Congressional opponent, Rep. Samuel Devine, does not share your approach to the voters in presenting issues to them in a public debate with me," he said.

He said the governor's decision was "a reflection on my opponent's refusal to present the issues and his record to the voters.

The Spectator and several local radio and television stations have offered time and space to both candidates to debate the issues of the 12th District campaign.

VIKINGS BEWARE

THREE STRAIGHT DEFEATS haven't dampened the spirit of the Hamilton Rangers, and the Hamilton cheerleaders are convinced they can "rah-rah" their gridders to victory this Friday when they play their first league game at Teays Valley. To get in the victory mood, a bonfire and pep rally are slated for tomorrow evening (Thursday) on the high school grounds at 7:30 p.m. The team's most stalwart fans are (front l-r) Pam Hopkins and Nancy Schneider; (center) Julie Davis and Kathy Brentlinger; (rear) Karen Hoover and Josie Shaw.

Street Plan Is Kayoed

There will be no widening of Groveport's College-st this year.

This fact was evident when bids were opened and the lowest was $36,000, a figure $16,000 over estimates.

Terming the contractors' figures "ridiculous" (in two instances double that of the going rate for like services), the engineer advised council this week to continue its paper work and readvertise next spring.

FOLLOWING ordinances passed Monday, reckless driving on private property will carry a penalty of from $2 to $50 and petty larceny will be prohibitive in cost.

The penalty for stealing something valued under $60 was put at $300 and/or 90 days in jail.

Mayor Robert Baer was apologetic that personal affairs had kept him from holding the proposed meeting Sept. 21 with businessmen of the community to give them a preview of the Blue Plan under preparation for the area by the Regional Planning Commission.

THE MEETING will be held early in October and local businessmen will be informed in advance by mail.

Believing that need for flasher lights near the new junior high is pressing, Baer reported that he has sought additional funds from the county budget commission for that purpose. Any additional funds that may be granted will be used to relieve the financial strain on the water board resulting from the legal necessity of establishing a surplus fund and for the resurfacing of Tollman, Kessler and Madison-sts.

Councilman Pete Franks reported that he has consulted the Groveport council trustees concerning the use of the first floor of the town hall (soon to be vacated by the Seymour Furniture Store) as a community recreation center.

THE COUNTY prosecutor believes this would be compatible with its intended use, and Franks is working on setting up a committee to program its use by persons from all age groups.

Other business included the ordinance employing George Snider in the street department, reports that the fine and bond forfeitures this month total over $1,000 and that five auxiliary police have been sworn in, and the decision that "Doc" Ackerman is going to have to "tend his own fences." (He had requested that a line fence torn down several years ago when sewers were laid be removed from his property.)

The correction of street numbers will be finalized at the next regular council meeting, Monday, Oct. 24. Approximately 100 addresses will be involved.

THIS SPECTATOR PROUDLY SERVES:

City Of Champions?

The time is at hand for the "City of Champions" to prove it has earned that label.

Columbus has long been known as a "great sports town" but largely on the basis of its near-fanatic support of Ohio State football and basketball.

Professional sports have not fared well. The Columbus Jets are a permanent fixture but their attendance has never been anything to boast about.

Now, a new challenge is at hand. Two weeks from tonight, the Columbus Checkers of the International Hockey League make their debut. There is considerable feeling that if Columbus won't support hockey, proven one of the best spectator sports going, it won't support any pro establishment.

Adding to the challenge will be this winter's debut of the Columbus Comets of the North American Basketball League. The league is minor, to be sure, but the team is manned in the main by the Ohio State stars who jammed St. John Arena for years.

The Spectator is excited over the debut of two professional teams in Columbus. This newspaper feels Columbus has a golden opportunity to prove itself a great sports town and move into the so-called "big time."

But it will take public support to do it. It is our hope that support is forthcoming — and in large measure.

Last-Ditch Plea

Democratic congressional candidate Robert L. Van Heyde has taken the bull by the horns and gone directly to President Johnson with a plea to reserve federal funds for the much-needed Alum and Mill Creek dams.

Van Heyde's move is a last-ditch effort to insure federal funding for the controversial projects. Rumors are circulating hot and heavy that the federal government is about to pull out of the two projects.

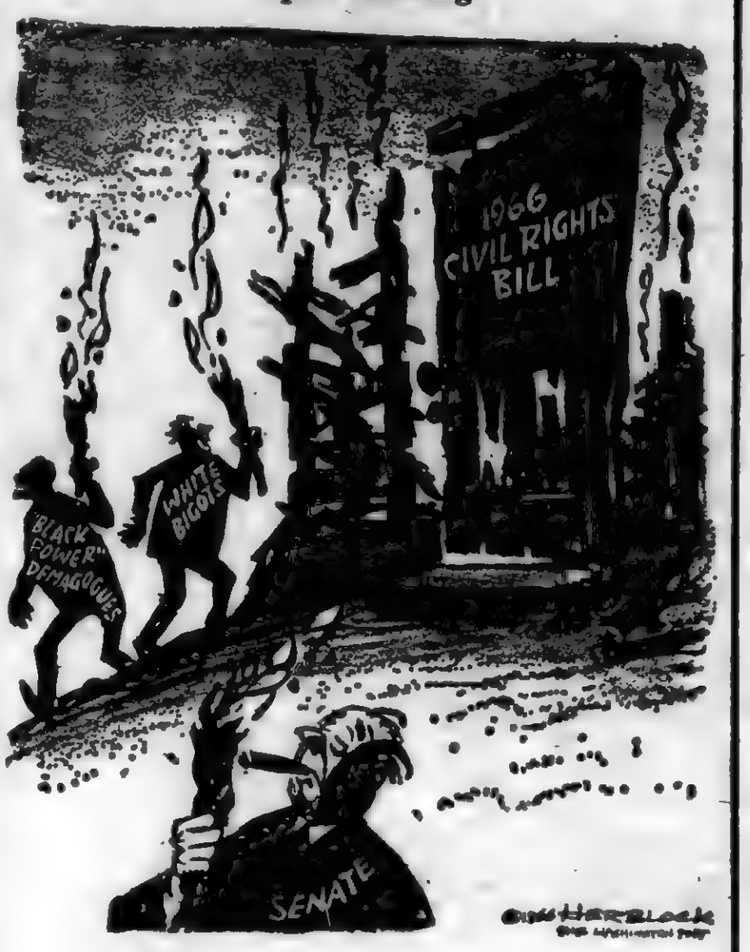
The Spectator warned months ago that unless Columbus and its neighboring communities get down to serious business the entire Corps of Engineers project could be jeopardized. Now it appears those warnings may become a reality.

Van Heyde's voice will help, but he needs support from all the communities which would suffer greatly if the federal government pulls out. The difference in cost between a strictly local project and a cooperative effort between local and federal governments would be staggering.

The time to pull together is now. There will be no more chances.

Fighting Delinquency

A new television series aimed at delinquency prevention began running locally last week and shows promise of providing constructive discussion and suggestions toward curbing the growing delinquency rate.



The series, called "The Way Forward," was compiled with the cooperation and guidance of the Ohio Youth Commission — whose job is rehabilitation.

The Youth Commission and the Public Affairs Department at WBNS-TV are to be commended for their efforts in presenting a step toward prevention. The films will promote constructive discussion and understanding of many of the delinquents' facets—if given a chance.

The Spectator urges parents, especially, to be on hand for these films in an attempt to understand the problems of delinquency and youth.

The 13- program series is being shown each Saturday from 2:30-3 p.m. by WBNS-TV, which donated the half-hour time slot in order to air the series.

The Captive Press

By ROBERT BURDOCK
Editor and Publisher

Most newspapers in the state fall all over themselves to rush into print with the latest publicity handout prepared by one of the dozens of five-figured flaks of the Rhodes administration.

But let an unfavorable story break and those same newspapers stick their collective heads in the sand.

A case is point was disclosure last week by The Spectator Newspapers that employes of the state Public Utilities Commission were systematically being shaken down for $200 and $300 "contributions" to Rhodes' re-election campaign.

There have been no official denials of the charges and in the face of some pretty formidable evidence there will be none. The governor's office itself is in receipt of complaints from commission employes concerning the "cash only" donations.

Commission employes have been questioned by their superiors, not to question the practice, but solely to try and uncover the "leak."

Both Columbus daily newspapers ignored the story. Only a few out-of-town newspapers picked it up. The Cleveland Plain Dealer got a classic quote from one of the mentioned collectors, Commission Secretary Sam Nicola. When informed of the charges Nicola said: "Who would write a thing like that? My, oh my. Oh boy, I have nothing to say. I'm not going to say anything."

And most of Ohio's captive press had the same reaction.

They Said It

"Most people figure that they work for the government about four months of each year. It seems like more than that when income tax rolls around." Odessa, Texas American.

Says Thanks

To the Editor:

I would like to thank everyone for the help offered my people in the area of The Spectator West. It has been most heartening.

We have very good reason to believe that the airport will be closer to 2000 acres than the 980 figure released by city officials. What we want to know is—is the extra land to go to private industrial interests or to go to the realtors getting options, or to Columbus?

Also, this airport at the site would have long reaching effects on the Hilltop area and South-Western School district. It has been known for a long time that if the school district can be broken, Columbus will have a free hand in annexation.

What makes anyone think Columbus will pay $7½ million for an airport, put in sewer lines and bring industry into the area and give Grove City or Prairie, Jackson, or Pleasant Townships the benefit?

Thanks again,
Mrs. Bill Dupler

Polls Questionable

To The Editor:

The efficacy and accuracy of political polls are doubtful. Too often they are designed to propagandize the doctrines of their instigators. This certainly is true of the Ohio Information Committee poll takers.

To carry their hypocrisy and deception to the ultimate, they publicly pretend to be nonpartisan. Knowledgeable citizens know that they represent the GOP in practice and commitment.

Rarely, if ever, do their frequent polls reflect other than GOP sentiments and forecast of victory as they carefully select those they interrogate and are reasonably sure of their political tendencies.

They publicly advertise their activities as a helpful public service. For whom, may be inquire?

barry goldwater ★ Blame To Fall On Dirksen ★

GOLDWATER

Senator Everett Dirksen got a full-scale demonstration of how hopeless it is to expect rational debate of certain issues.

Vice-President Hubert Humphrey singled out Senator Dirksen as the absolute key to the Civil Rights Act of 1966. Without his support, the Vice-President said, "the bill will die."

Whom does the Vice-President think he is kidding? It is not the Republican Party, of which Senator Dirksen is leader in the Senate, which controls the upper body of Congress.

The Vice-President, as his boss constantly does, is trying to pass the buck. The President's own colleagues also oppose it substantially enough to doom it.

But rather than open the matter to serious debate, admitting that opposition is a bi-partisan affair, Humphreys prefers to put his administration in the position of turning the Civil Rights Act into just another piece of political hay-making.

Take the issues involved in the legislation. Dirksen is opposed to the open housing section which he feels to be an un-constitutional interference with the disposition of private property.

For this he will be criticized for everything from racist malice to political manipulation.

There is no known way to change this sad equation so long as this matter is left to violent emotions by an administration that steadfastly refuses to raise the level of discussion above that of a brawl. What I am sure Senator Dirksen will do is to follow the dictates of his conscience, ignore the slanders and smears and pray for a time when debate will finally replace disorder.

When debate is permitted we might, for instance, discuss the fact that government intervention which in any way forces people to integrate is just as bad for freedom in general as government intervention which forces people to segregate.

In a rational time, the senator's attempt to preserve the right to property and privacy would be recognized as important for every American, regardless of race, creed or color.

marquis childs ★ Percy Has Liberal Appeal ★

CHILDS

CHICAGO—The shrewd, hard-working young men managing Charles H. Percy's campaign are convinced he will be elected to the United States Senate in November.

Looking like a hard-driving forward on the college basketball team — the campaign photograph on his poster is straight Norman Rockwell — Percy makes his pitch from early morning until late at night seven days a week. More than a moderate, it is a liberal appeal that sometimes startles his Republican audiences.

Percy is for a more vigorous effort to negotiate a peaceful settlement in the Viet Nam War through an all-Asian peace conference. Sen. Paul H. Douglas, whom Percy hopes to defeat for a fourth term, derided the proposal as "half-baked" and more recently as "dangerous" because, while Red China would be present, the United States would not be at the conference table. Percy tells his audiences the wide support his proposal has had, ranging from Dwight Eisenhower to Lyndon Johnson.

"The Republican party is the party of peace and we will pursue peace as the Administration continues to escalate the war," he said in a speech at a corn boil in Freeport. There were perhaps 700 of the Republican faithful seated on bleachers in the warm September sun, lured by free hot dogs and sweet corn.

Trying to establish a new and constructive image for himself and his party, Percy proposed a system of universal early, preschool education — to be established under the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

This is a bold takeoff, costing perhaps $4 billion a year, from the poverty program's Head Start. Percy is convinced that the benefits of the summer Head Start are quickly lost when beginning pupils enter overcrowded and understaffed schools.

How much issues weigh in the scale and how much the imponderables it is impossible to say. The white backlash is one imponderable. Republicans and Democrats agree that, while it was widely touted two years ago and proved pretty much a myth, it is a realty today, following the furious marches and counter-marches in Chicago's white suburbs. But Percy believes it has been exaggerated.

To independents and waverers in his audiences his appeal is for the election of moderate Republicans — Percy, Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Edmund Brooke in Massachusetts — if the Republican party is to have any future at all. There is reason to believe this appeal is effective and is possibly an offset to the loyalty for past services that liberals and independants hold for Douglas.

One theory is that Republican old liners, hard liners, would be only too happy to see Percy defeated and eliminated once and for all. They could once again rule in their own way. But they would preside over a dwindling host concerned with the myths of the past rather than the complexities of the present.

william s. white ★ Viet Nam Nightmare Lifting ★

WHITE

The long nightmare of Viet Nam is lifting at last.

There is real meaning in the spectacular success of the people of South Viet Nam. In the teeth of tireless terrorism from the Communists, they have voted in better than 80 percent of their total strength in a free election.

By immense majorities, the South Vietnamese have forever destroyed this Big Lie version of current history. By immense majorities, they have shown their determination both to keep their country from the reaching grasp of internal and external Communist trigger men and to make of it a decent state in Asia.

This is a victory for American policy of measureless importance — not for Democratic policy and not for Republican policy but for a partisan stance of strength in travail and of steadfast honor in piled-up adversity.

In the narrower sense, of course, it is a triumph for the Democratic President who has risked most in Viet Nam and has borne the heaviest of the burden from a constantly biting Democrtic New Left at home and the incessantly destructive carping that has come from some of our alleged friends, such as Charles de Gaulle of France.

But if Lyndon B. Johnson is vindicated in this historic hour, so, too, are Dwight Eisenhower and John Kennedy before him, and so are such Republicans as the Senate minority leader, Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, and Richard Nixon and Sen. Jacob Javits of New York and many another of lesser rank and place.

For the first time in the Cold War a nation under Communist attack not only from abroad but at home has been able to conduct a free election as free men. The so-called war of liberation as a special instrument of Communist China lies in ruins in the now-deserted balloting places of South Viet Nam for the cynical and evil fraud it has always been.

The Red Chinese have been thrown back as never before. The policy of a rationally restrained but absolutely determined military resistance to Chinese aggression-by-proxy has been proved beyond all doubt to be not only one of honor but one of effectiveness as well.

Over Asia the long darkness is lifting at least, though not yet dispersed. The Chinese wave of the future is not, after all, to be the wave of the future for Asia, just as Hitler's wave of the future broke at length two decades ago upon the great rock of resolute Allied resistance.

Fall '66 school bells rang out for the small fry quite some time ago but the best is yet to come for those matriculating in our higher schools of learning.

As a matter of fact, this is Orientation Week at The Ohio State University and starry eyed, bewildered freshmen are trying to find their way on a campus that keeps growing so fast it baffles even the alums.

On Thursday, between three and four thousand freshman coeds will see a special fashion show at Mershon as the guests of the Women's Self-Government Association and Lazarus. The theme will be "Where Are You Going?" . . . and you can bet that all phases of campus life will be covered (literally . . . with the newest in collegiate attire).

Fall fashions for college girls are "kicky" . . . not "kooky."

Gone are the Op, the Pop, the Way-out and the outlandish and in their place arrive well-mannered fashions that still retain the contemporary spirit. The total look prevails and this year's most likely to succeed ensemble is apt to include a corduroy hipster skirt, poor-boy top, textured hose and short-heeled chunky shoes.

While subdued fall colors prevail, the fashion palette turns unexpectedly bright in uninhibited stripes, paisley prints, geometrics and vibrant bands of color in the varsity sweater tradition.

Fabric-wise it's a banner year for corduroy, whether it's wide waled or narrow, printed or plain.

Knits fly high and are cherished possessions in every young girl's wardrobe. No one goes off to school this year without an in-depth collection of Poor-boy tops, several T-shirt dresses and two or three sweater dresses with long sleeves.

Pants enjoy another season as a fashion headliner . . . in belled, straight or cuffed versions . . . perched on the waist or balanced on the hip. This year there are variations on the pants theme that will gladden the fashionable hearts of any college or career lass.

The first innovation is, of course, the pants suit that ranges in styling from mod to military. Harkening back to to twenties is another innovation . . . corduroy knickers at their fashionable best when teamed with a little-boy jacket and textured hose.

For evening, it's dazzle . . . rah rah dazzle to shimmering silver and gold. There's an absolute wealth of precious-looking metals in pretty after-five dresses . . . costumes . . . handbags . . . shoes . . . and even stockings

On that note, we'll conclude with a hope that all the starry-eyed freshmen cram for four years and graduate with many precious memories of their college days.

CORDUROY CAPERS in Majestic's plush wide wale corduroy are go-go for campus activity. Jeanne Essig designs fashion dash for a coed's wardrobe . . . jaunty V-neck jacket, petite trouser pleat skirt and Paisley ascot blouse. Make the scene in a knacky knicker outfit . . . solid notched collar blazer, Tattersall knickers and oxford collar shirt. Top both outfits with jaunty Jackie Coogan type caps and you're sure to get a fashion diploma.

Raider 11 Opens Metro Play At F-H

By JACK WITTENMEIER
Spectator Staff Writer

"We played a good ball game. We just didn't win."

That's the way Reynoldsburg coach John Thompson summed up a heartbreaking 9-6 loss to Grandview last weekend—the Raiders' second setback in three outings this fall.

THE RAIDERS piled up 272 yards (164 rushing) as compared with the Bobcats' 188 total and held a lopsided 17-7 edge in first downs.

But first downs don't necessarily win ball games as Thompson pointed out. "We just can't seem to get the ball across the goal line," John lamented.

It looked like the Raiders' second straight win after fullback Denny Spires wiped out a 3-0 Grandview lead.

THINGS LOOKED even better as Reynoldsburg drove down to the Bobcats' 25 with four minutes left to play.

But the 'Cats picked off a pass and marched down the field to score in the final two minutes.

A holding penalty had halted another Raider drive at the 11 earlier in the game.

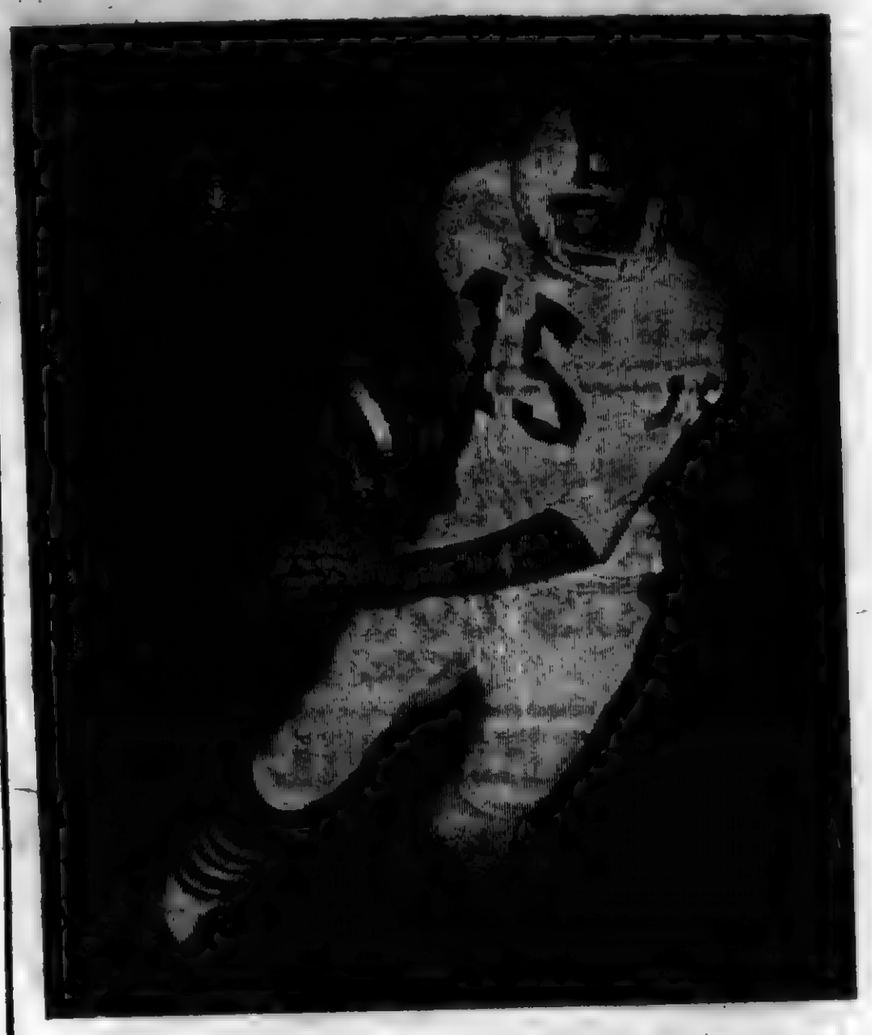
THOMPSON credited the defensive performances of end Dick Baserman and cornerback Jim Wilcoxon and singled out Spires and halfback Mike Herold on offense.

"Herold turned in his best-ever offensive performance and Spires looked as good as any fullback we've had Friday," Thompson added.

But it's Metropolitan League Friday with Franklin Heights playing host for the loop opener.

THOMPSON, who considers league games with the same reverence as Woody Hayes, remarked, "This is the big one."

The Falcons, who had won two in a row before stumbling last weekend vs. Washington C.H. (33-0), operate from a double wing and "T" formation, employing split ends.



"They'll pass 50 percent of the time or more," the Raider mentor added. "They like the flats, rollouts and the deep ones with two real fast ends as receivers."

RUSHING-WISE, Thompson lists Falcon strong points as sweeps, off tackle slants, quarterback rollouts and runs right up the middle.

"They've got more plays than anyone I've seen all year," Thompson concluded. "They give you a lot of defensive problems."

The Falcons and Raiders will be of comparative size up front.

LISTED ON the "doubtful" list for the F-H game are guard Bill Dively (torn ligaments) and tackle Bob Gerdeman.

HANDS APLENTY — Reynoldsburg quarterback Gary Shade (15) appeared to have an extra hand on this voyage around end Friday evening. The extra appendage actually belongs to a Grandview defender who managed to pull Shade down. (Staff photo by Walt Taylor).

UNDAUNTED RANGERS EYE METRO OPENER

Despite early season setbacks, Hamilton Township's Rangers will be gearing up strongly for an opening Metropolitan League win Friday when they visit Teays Valley. Lettermen will have to show the way and that's what new coach Bill McProuty (picture at left) has in mind as he talks with his veteran backs. Kneeling (from left) are: fullback Steve Yates, injured halfback John Gorczyca and McProuty. Standing: quarterback Ernie Spires, quarterback Ernie Bomhard and halfback Jeff Nelson. Seasoned Ranger linemen will also have a big job to do. Leading the charge Friday will be (kneeling, from left): end Steve Nelson, guard Dale Brigner and center Jim Schumacher. Standing: tackle Rick Tomlinson and flanker end Rick Ciborek. Staff photos by Jack Wittenmeier).

Mid-Eight Tests Top Grid Card

By JACK WITTENMEIER
Spectator Staff Writer

George Troutman's Gahanna Lions — the team which has held a strangle hold on the rest of the Mid-Eight lineup for the past several seasons—face their biggest test of the new campaign Friday when Westerville rolls out the red carpet.

"They're (Westerville) a tremendously improved ball club over the one we beat 30-6 last season," Troutman claims.

WITH CONSECUTIVE wins over Whitehall, Big Walnut and Groveport under their belts, the Wildcats appear capable of pulling that carpet right out from under the Lions, who are also 3-0.

Running from an unbalanced line and wing-T, Westerville should represent the best balanced rushing-passing eleven Gahanna has faced this season.

Biggest duty for the Lion defense will be Wildcat TD twins Trevor Newland (scored six TDs vs. Big Walnut) and Jim Campbell.

TROUTMAN describes Campbell as the power runner of the two with Newland the "shifty, speedboy type."

Combined with a decent aerial game, Westerville's forte seems to be the quick hitter and power plays off tackle.

Troutman sees the Wildcats as pretty evenly matched, sizewise, with his Lions and looks for an Oklahoma (5-4) defensive alignment from Westerville.

THE GAHANNA mentor rated his defense's job vs. Grove City as the best all year —the 'Hounds limited to minus 17 rushing yards in the first half.

Total offense found Gahanna's edge at 309-140.

Troutman's "back pat" list included back Charlie Freeman (115 yards in 23 carries), punter Doug Young (upped average to 45.5 yards per boot) and his entire defensive unit which earned its "Panzer III" rating vs. G-C.

TROUTMAN ALSO passed along a warning to fellow Mid-Eight coaches regarding the Greyhounds. "They're gonna' hurt somebody before the season's over," the mentor concluded.

Only Lion likely to miss the Westerville game is speedster halfback Ron Doran, still out with a bad ankle sprain.

"THOSE CRITICAL errors are still hurting us," claims Groveport mentor Bill McCann, whose Cruisers will be trying a fourth time to find the winner's circle Friday vs. Grove City.

Groveport trailed only 14-6 Friday vs. Westerville before the roof fell in during the final stanza. The Wildcats' overall defensive yardage edge was 237-132, all of the Cruiser gains coming on the ground.

McCann's offensive bouquets went to tackle Gary Cook, end Roger Adams, fullback Don Stokes, running backs Ralph Stout and Fred Zarbaugh and blocking back Ronnie Miller.

TOP DEFENSIVE efforts were turned in by tackle Bill Boring, guard Keith Legg, linebacker Donnie Miller and backs Stokes and Zarbaugh.

McCann reported halfback Charles Hamilton (infection) probably lost the rest of the season with Boring (bad ankle sprain or fracture) out for the visit to G-C Friday.

"They don't seem to be making as many mistakes as last year," McCann says of the Greyhounds.

BIGGEST challenge for the Cruiser defense according to McCann will be the passing of quarterback Gary Dagg who likes to go for the long touchdown pass.

McCann rates passing as probably 75 percent of Grove City's offensive game.

IN OTHER games this Friday, Amanda-Clearcreek visits Canal Winchester (0-1-2), Hamilton Township (0-3) travels to Teays Valley (0-3) and Carroll (0-1-2) journeys to Frankfort.

FEARLESS PREDICTIONS

The "Fearless" One, untracked after his initial calls during week one, compiled a second straight "fair" batting average by hitting on 18 of 25 selections last week (overall mark now 44-27).

Here's how "Fearless" sees week four:

MT. VERNON AT WORTHINGTON—Up 'n down Cardinals break pattern. Worthington.

AMANDA AT CANAL WINCHESTER —More bad news for Indian fans. Amanda.

CENTRAL AT EAST — Pirates look like real contenders so far. Central.

WALNUT RIDGE AT MARION-FRANKLIN — Devils aren't likely to drop three straight. M-F.

MIFFLIN AT HILLIARD — Mid-Eight hopeful 'Cats can't afford stumble here. Hilliard.

DELAWARE AT GRANDVIEW — Should be good contest with slight edge to Bobcats. Grandview.

BROOKHAVEN AT EASTMOOR — Inexperience beginning to fall on Bearcats. Eastmoor.

ST. MARY AT ACADEMY — Rams have win streak started but so do Vikings. Academy.

HAMILTON TOWNSHIP AT TEAYS VALLEY — Vikings spoil Rangers' Metro opener. T-V.

WATTERSON AT WEST — Eagle steamroller rolls on. Watterson.

LINDEN AT WHETSTONE — I'd be better off just ignoring this one. Coin flip says . . . Linden.

GROVEPORT AT GROVE CITY — Somebody's gotta get healthy here. On a hunch . . . Grove City.

URBANA AT BEXLEY — Lions due to break into win column. Might as well be here. Bexley.

DUBLIN AT LOGAN ELM — Braves capture third straight. Logan.

NORTH AT SOUTH — Law of averages catches up with Bulldogs. South.

REYNOLDSBURG AT FRANKLIN HEIGHTS — Should be a dandy with Raiders a paper thin favorite. Reynoldsburg.

GAHANNA AT WESTERVILLE — This one separates the contenders from the pretenders. Try . . . Gahanna.

ARLINGTON AT NEWARK — Golden Bears a go-go. Arlington.

PLEASANT VIEW AT WHITEHALL —Both 11's a mystery to old "Fearless" this fall. We'll guess . . . Pleasant View.

READY AT CHILLICOTHE — Could be surprised here but Knight defense should do it. Ready.

CARROLL AT FRANKFORT — Edge to the Bulldogs. Carroll.

SATURDAY

DESALES AT HARTLEY — Another dandy in store here. We'll pick . . . DeSales.

Brookhaven J-Vs at Northland (Friday)

Wehrle at Dublin J-Vs (Saturday)

Hockey League Schedules Available

Complete day-by-day schedules for the entire 1966 International Hockey League season are now available from the Columbus Checkers. To get a free copy, enclose a large self-addressed stamped envelope in your letter to the Columbus Checkers Hockey Club, 88 E. Broad-st, Columbus.

The schedule booklet includes individual scoring statistics, league standings and other pertinent information about the seven IHL teams.

SPIRES SCOOTS — Reynoldsburg's Denny Spires (right) heads for the sidelines as he picks up a first down Friday vs. Grandview, faking Bobcat defender Louis Mascari (left). Spires later scored Raiders' lone TD in 9-6 loss.

Doctors To Study Child Deficiencics

A national nutrition survey of preschool children will soon be launched from Children's Hospital under the direction of Dr. George Owen and Dr. Carl Nelsen.

Dr. Owen, principal investigator, is head of Children's new Nutrition Division and associate professor of pediatrics in the Ohio State Univerasity College of Medicine. Dr. Nelsen, head of the hospital's new Renal Division, is an assistant professor in the college.

FINANCED UNDER a five-year grant from the Federal Children's Bureau, the survey has a first-year budget of $160,000. It will be the first of its kind conducted in this country among preschool children. Studies in other countries have shown this age group to be particularly vulnerable to nutritional deficiency diseases.

In addition to stunted physical development, Dr. Owen said he believes that medical science must also concentrate on the subtler intellectual and psychological impairment which may reflect lack of proper nutrition. Development of the human brain is almost completed by the age of five, he says, and the human organism may well be better able to withstand nutritional deprivation after this age than during the years of rapid growth and development which precede it.

"WE ALL APPRECIATE the importance of the school health programs," he adds, "but we should be concentrating more on the preschooler who in general receives less health supervision than does the child in school."

Columbus Man 'Wins Friends'

By MARY BILDERBACK

Stelios Stelson, a grey-haired man of 63, is literally a one man Peace Corps. His mission, as he puts it is simple, "I want to win friends for America."

He works through the intellect of people by nourishing their minds with books.

IN THE END he usually wins their hearts too.

This summer he made a 37,000 mile trek around the world selling America. He's been working on this job since 1954 when he launched his book campaign.

To date he has sent more than 33,000 books overseas to make friends for America and to combat propaganda. American textbooks have been sent to more than 23 foreign countries where they have been shelved in libraries and schools, but these are getting worn and the demand for them is increasing.

AT THE moment Stelson is working on another project to ship 120,000 books across the ocean in 1967 or before, provided he has the necessary funds.

Stelson estimates that the cost will be between $230 to $265 to ship one ton of books but the postage will vary in different parts of the world.

"I don't just send books," he said. "I send texts requested, novels and other materials like the 'Readers Digest'."

HIS AROUND the world tour was a good will journey prompted by invitations from many overseas friends.

Stelson traveled to such places as Singapore, Manila, Nairobi and Athens.

As an honored guest he was constantly being presented with innumerable awards and titles but Stelson merely shrugs this off with a laugh. He's not seeking the limelight.

DURING HIS trip he dined with kings and slept in palaces. Other times he squatted on the dirt floors of a hut and ate meager meals with peasant families.

Stelson said that the things these people need the most are tools and equipment.

"I talked with royalty, children and farmers," he said. "The majority are friendly toward Americans, but they are most curious to know more about us.

"UNFORTUNATELY, a few Americans who go overseas fail to make a good image. I'm referring to the beatniks and the tourists who are constantly flashing the dollar. These people do not represent America at all."

Stelson's main purpose for the trip was to see how his books are being utilized and how great the need for them has become. "None of my books have been burned," he proudly claims.

Stelson first conceived of sending books to other countries when he noticed that overseas students were constantly reading American books but that they were printed in Russian and full of propaganda.

IN ADDITION to his book project, he is also seeking 200 school teachers who would like to arrange art exchanges with 150 overseas schools. Cultural exchanges such as these have already been established in schools like Upper Arlington and Central.

Goodwill Ambassador Stelios Stelson was a guest of honor at a Japanese tea party during his recent goodwill tour of the world. He is shown with Tokyo high school teachers who have received around 1800 of his books.

Stelson came to America as a 10-year-old urchin with rags on his back and no shoes. He and his mother fled to the States from Smyrna, Asia Minor, to avoid the persecution of the Turks.

His philosophy is simple, "America is the best country in the world and I feel I owe it something. When I passed the Statue of Liberty with 2,000 other foreigners coming over here it meant something more to us than a piece of bronze, it meant freedom.

Stelson is a bachelor who lives in a sparsely furnished apartment at 303 Allegheny-dr. He doesn't own a car so he walks to his government job at the Columbus Defense Depot.

He sleeps too little, usually two hours a day. Sometimes he forgets to eat because he is forever working on his huge volumes of correspondence or packing books.

More than once he has done without to finance his project. Constantly afraid that someone might think he has a racket, Stelson refused financial help for over 10 years. He keeps expert account of public contributions down to the last penny.

Stelson also has the names and addresses of 6,000 people all over the world who are eager to have American correspondents. Anyone may get a pen friend by writing Stelson and enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Perhaps a letter written to Stelson by a Columbus teenager sums up his self-appointed mission the best: "I would also like to say to you, sir, that it is a nice thing that you take the time to find pen pals for young people all over the world and I'm just sorry that there are not more people like you to represent the United States."

Stelios Stelson is shown here with a group of Ohio State students who have offered to help him pack books at a Columbus warehouse. Stelson has about a quarter of a million stored in three warehouses in Columbus. Now, he only needs the funds to ship them overseas.

Child League Plans First Fall Meeting

The Hilliard Federation of the Ohio Child Conservation League will meet Oct. 3 in the meeting room at Sierra Lanes at 8:30 p.m.

There are eight leagues, subdivisions, in the Federation. The organization's purpose is to "better the mother in order to better the child."

"There are over 120 members in Hilliard alone and about 2500 in Columbus," said Mrs. Shirley Olah, Federation president.

The FCCC is a state organization. Individual leagues work towards completing ten state requirements each year. If completing the programs on personal and community improvements, and if dues are paid, the league receives a seal of achievement to put in its historical books.

Anyone interested in joining a league or starting a new one, call Mrs Mary Lou Wood, 876-5707. The only requirements for membership are that the women are mothers and pay the dues.

A $64 QUESTION IN CANAL WINCHESTER

Just What Will $587,000 Buy?

WHAT DOES a school that usually serves 550 children in a dining area that seats 124 do with 300 additional students who bring their own lunches? Canal Winchester School has had little choice in the matter, and has shuffled them off to a bleacher area in the basement to eat beside heating equipment and janitorial supplies. If voters give the proposed bond issue the go ahead at the polls, one of the benefits will be getting these youngsters into a conventional dining room.

What can you buy today with more than half a million dollars?

With a $587,000 school bond issue coming up in November, this question has become a vital one in the Canal Winchester School District.

DETERMINED that the taxpayers shall not be asked to buy "a pig in the poke," the school board and the administration have spelled out exactly how they will spent the money if voters give them a green light.

A wing, parallel to and south of the wing completed in the mid-fifties, will house 12 elementary classrooms including a kindergarten to serve two sections.

This will permit four sections of each grade level to be established (three badly overcrowded sections are now the rule) and allow the fifth and sixth grades to be removed from the high school proper.

AN ELEMENTARY library will connect the two wings with its excavation making room for two "special" rooms planned for music, films, drama, that can be converted to self-contained classrooms.

The stage and present kitchen of the multi-purpose room will be eliminated and the south wall will be knocked out to allow a dining area seating 300 with completely new kitchen facilities to be constructed.

The present shop which the enlarged multi-purpose area will abut will become a study hall, allowing the auditorium and the Oley Speaks music room to be returned to their intended uses.

THE VACATED basement area that is now used as a cafeteria and kitchen will be utilized as a shop for the industrial arts department.

Money not spent for construction is earmarked for equipment for the new facilities and purchase of additional land. (The new wing will drastically slice into the existing playground.)

Although the board members are fully aware that the average of 3.5 mills which will be required to retire the bonds over a 22-year period represent an increased and unwelcomed tax burden, they unanimously believe the construction program is long overdue.

WHEN THE last addition was built, it was considered merely adequate to meet the needs of the 524 students then enrolled.

Current enrollment is 1,080.

Hamilton's Savel Believes In Results, Not Bright Ideas

Planning to improve a school system is a waste of brain power is it doesn't work.

Supt. John Savel of the Hamilton Local School District thinks he and the board have some pretty good ideas on the subject.

BUT WHAT is equally important is that he's determined those ideas are going to get out of the theory stage and go to work in the classroom.

He stated that the best program in the world isn't worth a row of pins if it remains the brain child of an administrator whose teaching staff is left in the dark as to how to carry it out.

Thus the Hamilton "In-Service" set-up has been born.

SAVEL EXPLAINED that in the educational world today instruction techniques are constantly changing.

This has resulted in teachers, competently trained and fully certificated, finding themselves "backwoodish" in some of the newer approaches to learning problems.

"We're not asking our staff to go out and look for new skills," he said. "We're bringing these skills to them."

THIS IS being done by bringing experts (usually from the State Department of Education) to Hamilton for teacher-training, through field trips to other districts where the faculty can observe successful programs in function and by faculty - administration brain - storming sessions.

According to Savel, in-service is particularly important this year with a step-up in three fields—those of special education, reading, and curriculum development in grades kindergarten through six.

Special education classes are now open to students in the primary grades (one through three), intermediate grades (four through six) and junior high (seven through nine). Next year the superintendent plans to extend special education into the high school level with special emphasis on vocational training.

SUCH CLASSES by state regulation, are limited to 15 students to allow a greater degree of individual instruction.

"Our goal is to develop each student for a useful and satisfying life," Savel stated. "This education must be tailored to his particular needs, desires and native ability."

He added that individual differences make it impractical for every boy or girl to aim toward a professional career.

"HOWEVER," he said, "this country needs good plumbers and good painters as much as it needs good pediatricians."

The reading program has been made possible through the funds available from the federal Elementary-Secondary Education Act of 1965 and a local board appropriation of $16,000.

THROUGH THE junior high level, the goal is to bring the students' reading ability up to that of his grade level.

"A talented sixth-grade student can be severely handicapped," Savel added "if he's geared only for fourth grade reading." (Throughout the nation a two-year lag has been commonly observed among students with above average ability.)

At the senior high level the aim is the development of additional skills and techniques.

ONE OF THE first targets of the curriculum development will be putting an end to the "building concept."

After evaluation of the present programs a revised course of study will be set up throughout the district.

"What is good for the children of Obetz is good for the children at South, and what is good for the children at South is good for children at Central," Savel stressed, dispelling the idea of confining any changes to a particular elementary.

HE REFUSED to speculate on what changes may be made.

"That's what we're going to work on," he said "If we knew now where we should go, the time and effort we are going to put into this project would be 'busy work.' "

It's obvious with the "giant steps" Savel is planning there's no time for "busy work" at Hamilton Local.

Those Wanderlustful Caldwells

Kissing the Blarney Stone is one of the few experiences skipped by Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Caldwell on their recent 1,550-mile motor-coach tour of Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England.

The couple, inveterate world travelers, report exploring the medieval castles, browsing through quaint villages for home-spun woolens and antiques and a relaxed cart-drawn tour of the lakes of Kilarney.

AMONG THE CASTLES they visited were Blenheim, the birthplace of Sir Winston Churchill; Edinburgh, the scene of skirmishes since the 15th century, and Holyrood, the one-time home of the ill-fated Mary, Queen of Scots. They toured Coventry to visit the new cathedral built to replace the 600-year-old St. Michael which was reduced to ruins by World War II fire bombs.

They report Cork and Dublin busy, thriving cities in spite of an 11-week bank strike, and the cabarets alive with Irish music, song, dance and wit.

Roman history came alive for the couple as they saw the Roman baths, built by the ancient people, at Bath, still in use; the medieval city of Chester with the Roman-built wall still preserved, and the mysterious monoliths at Stonehedge.

IN LONDON, a city crowded and in fever heat due to the soccer matches being played at Wembley, the Caldwells were able "to dine like Pickwick and wine like Micawber" in a Victorian pub and tavern opened to commemorate the centenary of Charles Dickens' writings.

On the night of English victory over the West German soccer team, the Franklin Countians watched the celebrants splashing in the Trafalgar Square Fountain and the soap box orators, ensconced on ladders, expounding throughout the night.

THE PHRASE "the nights are getting shorter" became very real to the local globe trotters in Reykjavik, Iceland's capital, where darkness fell at 2 a.m. with sunrise a bare two hours later.

Describing the surface of Iceland as moon-like with its extinct craters, the Caldwells noted the bareness of the countryside resulting from the exhaustion of native timber by Vikings of the ninth century to build homes and supply fuel. However, the eternal daylight of summer brings an amazing assortment of flowers, grasses and mosses to the Arctic Circle country.

The couple jetted to Shannon, Ireland, and homeward bound they again took to the air from Greenland, flying low over the bleak barren wastes of Newfoundland.

The trip presented a vivid contrast to their 1964 sortie to the wilds of Africa.

PIN NEWS

Keglers' Korner

By NORMA KIRKENDALL

Howard Dellinger has set a current season's high that will be hard to break—his 782 series was made up of 283-288-256 lines. These were a part of the 1071-3044 by his Cannon Lumber team in the Wink-O Hilltop Merchants League:

In the Olentangy Village Clintonville Women's League Lynn Eckart rolled a 634 (230) but Millie Branch rolled a 256 to top her.

THE NEW season scores are starting high — so it may be a record breaking year.

Columbus has some old leagues, but none approach the N.Y. Bankers in Manhattan whose continuous existence has been 76 years.

Oddity—highest "low game" in an ABC team game is the 251 by Therm Gibson in 1950 His team rolled 1284. Lowest game ever recorded (legitimately) in ABC league play was a seven rolled by Don Wickenhause of Bloomington, Ill., in 1961.

COLUMBUS bowler Merrill Weaver holds the national record of 244 frames without an open frame made in 1944.

When were automatic pinsetters invented? Many of us can remember. And the first public showing was in 1946 at the ABC tournament.

However, Columbus saw them first at Olentangy Village. Actually ABC approval was not given until 1952 for AMF and 1955 for Brunswick. Bowl-Mor's machine did not come along until 1961.

BOWLERS like to read about their sport. Official magazines are WIBC's WOMAN BOWLER and ABC's BOWLING Magazine. Your league secretary receives copies of each — ask to see the current issue.

Another call for old bowling mementos — balls, clothing. trophies, etc. to help WIBC celebrate its 50th anniversary. Call 486-5238 (Norma Kirkendall) if you have something to loan for this unusual display.

Not to be outdone, perennial top-form. Marge Merrick flashed a 287 in a 673 while her Beulah Park team in the Palace League at Riverview came up with a 996-2836 to go topside for the new season.

ZAP CHEMICAL at Rainbow soared to 1021 and 1091 with a high of 3070.

Ford's Football Contest Slated

The Punt, Pass and Kick contest which attracted some 715,-817 boys last season was launched nationally by the Ford Dealers of America and the National Football League in 1961, and is open for boys eight through 13 years of age.

Each boy competes against other boys in his own age group in three football skills: punting, passing and place-kicking. There is no body contact and no special equipment needed.

Many valuable prizes, including trips, will be awarded. Free registration ends Oct. 7. Boys can sign up at the local sponsoring Ford dealership and must be accompanied by one of their parents or legal guardian.

Dick Michaels Named YMCA Swim Coach

All-American swimmer Richard Michaels from Ohio State, will be coaching the swimming teams at the Boys' Branch YMCA, 40 W. Long-st.

Michaels is a fine technician who was recognized for excellence in both the backstroke and the individual medley which requires skill in all four strokes.

Gahanna Wins; Raiders Bow 9-6

George Troutman's Gahanna crew was the only area team that posted a win last weekend with its 34-6 romp over Grove City.

The rest fell. Millersport downed Canal Winchester, 46-0, Logan Elm topped Teays Valley, 12-8, St. Mary nipped Hamilton Township, 12-6, Westerville humbled Groveport, 27-6 and Grandview edged Reynoldsburg, 9-6.

THE LIONS from Gahanna were paced by the scoring of Charles Freeman who added a pair of TD's and an extra point run. The bulky Gahanna defense limited GC to a minus 19 yards.

Ernie Spires scored the only Hamilton points on a two yard run in the first period.

Denny Spires scored the only Raider points on a three yard run.

X-Ray Cruiser Coming To Canal

Chest X-rays will be on the house at Canal Winchester next Thursday, Oct. 6.

The Franklin County Tuberculosis cruiser will be parked in the downtown area from 1 until 8 p.m.

The local chapters of the Future Farmers of America and the Future Homemakers of America which are sponsoring the check-up project urge area residents to take a few minutes to be safe and not sorry.

A Big Headache Tomorrow Today's Baby Talk Can Be

By JANE ROBINSON
Spectator Staff Writer

"That yady with the wed dwess is my mommy," coming from the lips of a two-year-old, goes by unnoticed.

But similar articulation from a seven or eight year old can bring a quizzical look, and from a teenager it spells social catastrophe.

Children with speech problems (estimatedly 10 percent of Ohio's public school enrollment) far out-number those with other types of handicaps.

BUT TODAY in most Ohio schools few children manage to lisp their way to the high school level.

This is the case in Hamilton Township schools, according to Mrs. Sara Tallbacka, one of the two full-time therapists in the district.

Not long before he darkens a kindergarten door, Mrs. Tallbacka or her colleague has carefully tested the child for either speech or hearing defects (the latter are relatively rare).

KELLE BUSH CAME through her speech and hearing screening with never a lisp or a stutter. And Mrs. Sara Tallbacka a few minutes later gave the same clean bill-of-health to Scott Westminster and Dale Redding who were next in line. However, with speech difficulties the most common of all children's handicaps, many others at Hamilton Central have a long pull ahead of them before they have overcome habits and disabilities that tend to impair their communication with the world around them.

THE CHILD who doesn't come through like a silver-tongued orator undergoes training—competent, thorough and regular — until he has mastered his difficulty to the utmost within the scope of any possible physical limitations.

Why so much fuss about a misplaced sound?

In 70 percent of speech problems, articulation of sound is the bugaboo and can be corrected.

PSYCHOLOGISTS today believe that communicative skills are essential to develop the well - balanced and integrated personalities that are capable of coping with present-day living.

Unwittingly, according to Mrs. Tallbacka, parents help their youngsters develop bad speech habits that can take up to several years to erase.

A pair of deaf ears when a child makes known, via "jabberwocky," his needs will do wonders to clear up his enunciation.

CONVERSELY, if he sees his lisp or sound substitution amuses the adults around him, it will be accented for the pure love of "hamming it up."

And it doesn't take a tot with an Einstein level IQ to find out if "baby talk" gets him something when "grown up talk" doesn't, there's not much percentage in striving toward the latter.

UNFORTUNATELY bad language habits are as catching as the three-day measles. If three-year-old Johnny is getting away with infantile speech, 18-month-old Mary will be sure to imitate him.

OF COUISE, Mrs. Tallbacka, stressed, not all speech problems have such simple beginnings.

For the child with auditory troubles, the sounds he must learn to imitate don't come through.

Then there is the child with organic malfunction such as cleft palate or the brain damage left by birth injury.

BUT, ALMOST without exception, the children can be helped. These are the ones to whom the therapists are dedicated.

They use varied tools — tape recorders, mirrors, charts, cards and games.

They enlist the help of the regular academic teachers and the family of the child involved.

AND THEY work patiently until they hear those R's come back into John's or Mary's speech pattern or the hissed "s's" beat a hasty exist.

IN THE MEANTIME Mother and Dad should keep in mind that there isn't anything very cute about baby talk spoken by a lad contemplating his first shave.

PLAN LUNCHEON

CINDY NOBLE proved to be very professional when she modeled the recent NCO Wives' Club fashion show. Cindy, whose mother is a club member, was among 14 youngsters who showed off the latest in back-to-school fashions.

Children Of NCO Wives Become Models Over Night

Cindy Noble wearing a tunic dress of royal blue and wearing white Go-Go boots paraded before the members of the NCO Wive's Club at Lockbourne as the back-to-school fashion show opened at the Club's monthly coffee recently.

Modeled by children of the members, the show featured five members of one family, twins, Darlene and Charlene Kemp and their sisters, Deidre, Sherry and Karen.

The twins wore identical navy blue cotton smock type outfits with white collars and red bows, completed with black T-strap slippers, while Deidre's smock, also with white collar, was red plaid and featured three-quarter length sleeves. Sherry's shift of red plaid was coat style and was worn with a beige crepe blouse, and red patent leather shoes. Karen modeled a green laminated cotton, worn with black oxfords.

Debra Duncan and Balinda Price wore dresses made by their mothers. One of the A-line shifts of the Duncan children was green with ruffled bodice and jeweled neckline and the other was in navy blue plaid. Belinda's brown wash and wear cotton was accented with orange and white print and featured inverted pleats and a matching kerchief.

THE CONNORS sisters, Cynthia and Michele, appeared together with black leotards setting off their blouse slips pin pleated skirts and pink T-straps. A two-piece dress with pleated cotton plaid and a navy jacket trimmed in the plaid of the skirt was shown by Ava Bryant who added brown loafers to her costume.

1967 Rose Buying Guide Available From Society

The American Rose Society has available for the first time an autumn edition of the Society's Guide for Buying Roses. The 1697 edition is now available in time for autumn rose purchases and use with the fall and early spring rose catalogs. With a new design and expanded format, the 1967 Buying Guide lists and classifies by color and type, all roses available on the American market, including those varieties to be introduced in 1967.

The 1967 Guide for Buying Roses gives pertinent information on more than 1,000 rose varieties, including height of plant, color, horticultural classification, and the valuable American Rose Society national ratings.

The national rating of each variety represents an average score from a compilation of votes by American Rose Society members throughout the USA. Roses are rated on a ten point scale, with ten being the perfect, but so far unobtainable score.

Added features in the 1967 Guide for Buying Roses include complete descriptions of all the 1967 All-America Rose selections winners and a separate listing by color of the highest rated roses.

Free copies of the 1967 Guide for Buying Roses may be obtained by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the American Rose Society, Dept. B, 4048 Roselea-pl, Columbus, O., 43214.

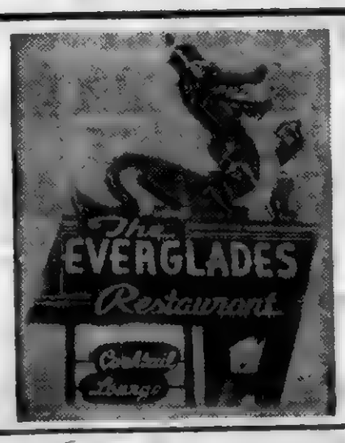
DANCING NIGHTLY

By CLAUDIA ELKINS
Spectator Staff Writer

The American Musical Theater Club opened the Hartman Theater season Monday night with "On A Clear Day You Can See Forever," which runs through Saturday.

"Clear Day" is a musical with the story concept much like that of the life of Bridie Murphy, a woman who, while in a state of hypnosis, relates a former life of 200 years ago. Present and past meet, and, as the story goes, love conquers all.

The stars of the show, Linda Lavin as the patient and Van Johnson as the doctor, are to say the least, surprising. Miss Lavin turns in a sterling performance. It's quite obvious she is really giving of herself in every word and action. Mr. Johnson's performance is professional and polished. He seems comfortably at home on the stage, in all scenes except singing numbers. He is not a great singer, yet his warmth and talent as an actor shine through.



To give you an idea of the size of this production there are 18 scene changes which are executed with creative imagination. Each scene change is accomplished without a curtain, thereby maintaining continuity.

The best staging and musical number is the first scene, second act. Singing and dancing "When I Come Around Again," the class of students relate what they'd like to be if reincarnated.

This enthusiastic cast has created a delightful show. The cast seemed to enjoy their well deserved applause.

County Welfare Program Examined

By BOBB REIDER

Officials at the Franklin County Department of Welfare were recently interviewed to answer questions concerning its functions, including the Title V program.

Pat Mulligan, assistant director of personnel at the agency, commented, "Some people in Franklin County picture the welfare recipient as a loafer who is too lazy to look for work, when quite to the contrary, almost without exception, he and his family have met with unsurmountable adverse conditions coupled with a usual lacking of occupational skills. Then it is our job to mold him into a useful member of society. This is often difficult when the state provides only about 78 percent of the cost of living. And I'm not speaking of 1966. The state standards of the cost of living are still based on the year 1959."

To most efficiently use the funds made available by the state last year, the welfare department adopted in November what is commonly called Title V, a work experience and training program of the Economic Opportunity Act. Request for renewal of the project for a second year has been made.

Basic objectives of this program are: (1) to upgrade skills for employment and to improve the employability of unemployed fathers by conserving their work habits and skills and by developing new skills through work experience and training of a constructive nature, and (2) to help unemployed fathers to secure and retain employment or to attain or retain capabilities for self-support or personal independence.

In order to become a participant in this program a person must meet these eligibility requirements:

(1) Be on Aid to Dependent Children (father not at home because of divorce, desertion, etc.) or Aid to Dependent Children of the Unemployed (father at home but not employed).

(2) He must have employment potential.

(3) He must be registered at the Ohio State Employment Service and available for employment which may be offered to him.

Michael Seidemann, director of Title V at the agency, noted: "While engaged in the project to which he has been assigned, a trainee has the right to safe, sanitary working conditions and the same overall protection covered by workmen's compensation as he enters his assignment. Moreover, the trainee is entitled to full protection of his constitutional rights and most specifically to the provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964."

The success of this program is not only measured by the fact that each week more and more trainees find employment —to date approximately 45 have done so — but by the fact the department sees an improvement in their total life situation. Thus, the department finds that the trainees attend their training sites faithfully.

Total attendance record month after month is in the neighborhood of 95 percent. As these citizens find employment and bring home a pay check rather than a welfare check, their morale improves as does their whole outlook on life.

Murray Lembark, a caseworker at the agency, and Sylvia Brooks, community relations director, gave additional information.

June, 1966, figures showed that approximately 30,000 people in Franklin County are on welfare, "with the majority," Miss Brooks said, "consisting of the blind, disabled and children."

What determines whether or not a person qualifies for welfare in Franklin County?

Lembark answered, "Before a person can qualify he must have exhausted all other means of financial support. In other words, he must prove that he does not have familial aid, social security, unemployment compensation, union benefits, stocks and negotiable bonds, property investment, car worth over $500 according to blue book value, truck for work worth over $1000, or a bank account, safe deposit, etc., valued over $300.

"In addition, he must prove permanent residence and present various medical information. Many who are not on welfare, who should be, are not because of familial pride and basic ignorance of how society could help them."

The main responsibility of a caseworker, Lembark went on to say, is "to determine and redetermine the applicant's financial eligibility and to pursue a proper social work plan to strengthen the family unit as a whole."

"We wish to accomplish with welfare what medicine hopes to accomplish with cancer — be a preventer instead of a healer. We also must educate the general public of our true aims and of our efforts as we educate the people on welfare. It is an uphill battle, but it is one which must be fought."

4-H Members To Celebrate

Nearly 1,500 4-H Club members in Franklin County are joining more than two million other 4-H members in celebrating National 4-H Club Week from Sept. 24-Oct. 1.

Among aims of this year's 4-H Week observances are encouraging more young persons aged 9-19 to enlist in 4-H clubs; to encourage parents to cooperate with 4-H programs and to gain more 4-H leaders from the community.

Aiding the club members throughout the 50 states and Puerto Rico are more than 367,000 local 4-H adult leaders, who guide clubs in their community projects. Some 138,000 older 4-H members serve as junior leaders.

County agent Tom McNutt can provide information on 4-H Week and can be reached at 469-6595.

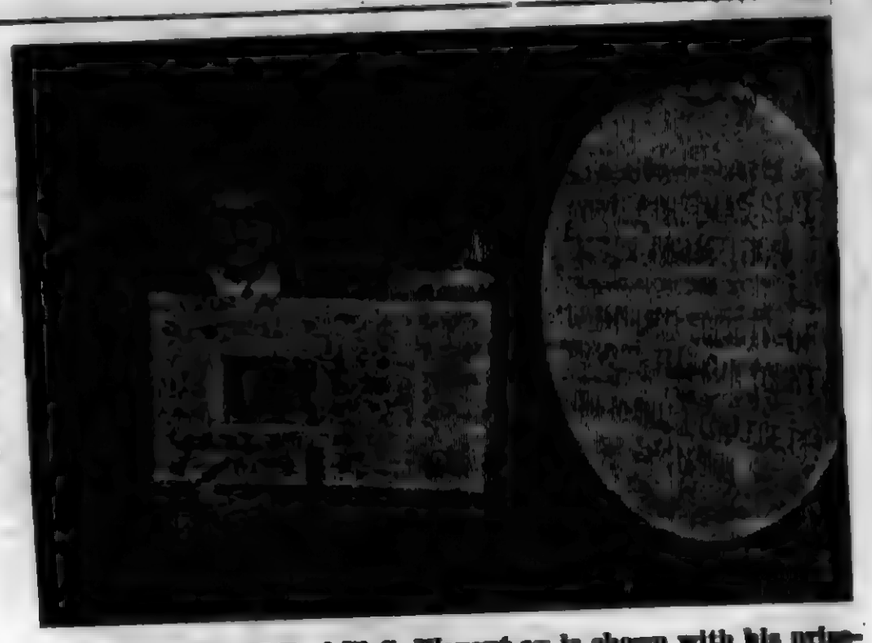
Expansion Under Way At Town And Country Union



Culminating months of planning, both on the part of the Union Company and the Don M. Casto Organization, developers and operators of the Miracle Mile Town & Country Shopping Center, 3600-4000 E. Broad-st, work has begun on the tremendous expansion of the Union Town & Country store.

The completed store will comprise some 45,000 sq. ft. of floor space, going to two floors served with an escalator.

The departmental decor will be in harmony with that of the Union store recently opened in the Kingsdale Shopping Center.

To obtain the necessary additional area, permitting the more than doubling of the present floor space, the two rooms to the east of the store are being brought into the picture.

Work is well along in the conversion of this space which will, in the end, house the men's and young men's departments, a new and smart addition to what will be the Alumni Shop.

Town And Country Cinema Opens

Have you been out E. Broad-st lately? At the intersection of Robinwood and Broad an elegant building of modern design awaits your attention. This massive building is the new Town and Country Cinema which opened this past week under the management of Louis Michael.

The interior is comfortably designed. One feels immediately at east in the expanse and quickly becomes aware of good taste in decorating. All facilities are geared for comfort, this includes two-position theater seats, wide aisles, an art gallery lounge and individual powder rooms, which deserve a special tour of inspection.

And now for the show—"The Torn Curtain" directed by Alfred Hitchcock. To disclose the story line or describe the suspenseful scenes would be as unfair to you as to Mr. Hitchcock's reputation for the element of surprise and suspense.

Yes, Mr. Hitchcock does appear, as usual, but do be alert. If you are looking for another "Physco" you won't find it, but your heart will take several skips here and there. Special attention is due Miss Lila Kedrova, the name may throw you, but her portrayal of a "Polish princess" will leave you spellbound at what can come of good acting. Good character portrayals by supporting roles; Hansjoerg Felmy, Tamara Toumanova and Ludwig Donath, save the important scenes.

Both Paul Newman and Julie Andrews seem withdrawn in several emotional scenes and certainly have more talent than is seen in "The Torn Curtain." Both the theater and the movie are worth your patronage as both are entertaining and enjoyable.

Town And Country Moves On And Up In 17th Year

Town and Country may be the nation's oldest major shopping center, now in its 17th year, but it is showing a remarkable ability to win and to hold the buying affections of countless thousands of area families.

Part of the reason is that it is steadfastly improving earlier facilities and adding new ones.

In recent months complete re-fixturing and re-decorating has been accomplished at the Majestic Paint Center, Sears Roebuck, the Singer Sewing Center, Top Value Redemption Center and the Albers Colonial market.

Newcomer firms are Ye Ole Colonial Shoppe and the Village Set. The very latest and, of course, major addition to the center is the just-opened Town and Country Cinema Theatre. This 1,200-seat movie house, located on Robinwood at E. Broad, is the last word in free-standing motion picture theatres. Acres of free parking adjacent to the theatre make it a joy from the standpoint of ingress and agress.

Another expansion and improvement now in progress is the deepening of the Western Auto store by some 40 feet. Concurrently the entire store layout will be revised with completely new fixtures.

Work is about to commence on the erection of the building which will house the Robot 50 cent Car Wash located at the northwest corner of Town and Country, to the rear of Zettler Hardware, the wash will operate automatically 24 hours a day. The driver never leaves the car. Operators will be the Tremont Enterprises, Inc., under John Pausch and Jack Hellinger.

Still another Town and Country improvement has to do with parking. The entire center has recently had the blacktop treated with dressing and has been re-striped. In so doing the cruising lane adjoining the sidewalks has been made one-way west, with the other lanes alternating east and west. Already great benefits are being felt in the improvement of traffic flow and the ease of parking.

Trophy winners, in addition to the Farm Mechanic-Shop-class winners, were Mike Grunkemeyer for Best Garden Display; Jack Orum for Poultry Showmanship; Russell Bennett for Dairy Showmanship and Clayton Coffey, for best fleece of Wool.

Miller replaced Jim Dill as top cash winner with his prizes totaling $329. Other boys with substantial earnings include Jim Stephenson, $312; Jack Orun and Doug Watkins, $111 each and Vince Kisner, $84.50.

Builders In Slump

Interest Rates For Home Loans At 45-Year High

Builders Seek Help

(Reprinted From The Columbus Business Forum)

Headlines like these are common in our news media these days, but unless you're directly associated with the housing industry or have tried to buy a home recently, you may not be aware of the serious pinch now being felt in this field.

Home builders and developers are scratching their heads over the paradox of the current situation. There are still hundreds of Columbus families who would like to buy a new home, and ordinarily they would have no trouble qualifying for home financing. There are many, many new homes, built on speculation by developers, which are ready for occupancy as soon as the tight money problem eases up. Savings and loan associations, traditionally the workhorse of the home financing business, are caught in a money shortage that has been brought about through stiff competition from commercial banks and the Federal government itself for long-term investment money.

To learn what's happened in the home building and financing field in Columbus, we talked recently with a number of local businessmen who are actively engaged in the field and here is a summary of what we learned.

Ralph Metzger, president of the Columbus Home Builders Association and vice-president of the Metzger Brothers Company, Inc., a local real estate sales and development corporation, made a special trip to Washington recently to join with other HBA presidents from across the country who talked with members of Congress about the serious problems confronting their industry.

In a statement prepared for that meeting, Mr. Metzger observed, "The present credit situation affected building starts in our area only slightly during the first quarter of 1966. However, during the second quarter, the effect has been much more severe and is getting worse. We can foresee signs indicating that there will be no starts at all during the latter part of 1966. Builders are changing their plans and are proceeding on a very cautious and conservative approach, so much so that building permits applied for are being cancelled.

"The banks and savings and loan associations in our area are not making construction loans to builders unless the builder has a firm contract to sell his home before he builds it. Even then he must pay a higher closing cost and at least one percent higher interest rate than last year. Builders are finding only a limited amount of construction financing available and it is being made only to those having done past business with the lender," Metzger continued. "The interest rate is running one percent higher than 1965 rates on all types of conventional mortgage financing. FHA and VA discounts are currently ranging between six percent and 12 percent of the borrowed amount.

"Employment of construction workers and sub-contractors in our area have been very stable, but at the first of July things began to slow down and now men are looking for work. The fall and winter months look bleak for the men employed in the construction field," Mr. Metzger continued. "It is expected that prices will rise on most materials because they no longer will be purchased in large quantities."

Mr. Metzger also observed that "The effect on Mr. and Mrs. Homemaker will be threefold. The equity in their present home will shrink because of the high cost of placing the loan, the cost of the new home will go up because of the higher costs the builder must pay, and the closing costs and interest on the new loan will be higher. These factors will mean less house at a higher cost to the buying public."

Mr. Metzger believes the end result will be to cause many would-be buyers to delay their purchase of a new home until a more favorable mortgage market is available. This means less work for builders, developers, subcontractors, appraisers, suppliers, home furnishings manufacturers, retailers and others. The price of homes will have to rise with fewer houses being built. He also expects that rental units in our area will begin to rent for more per month as the demand for them increases.

"Unless the Administration takes steps to restrain the battle for savings and relieve the financial institutions of their threat of a liquidity shortage, it will find itself directly to blame for an inflationary spiral of prices for housing," Mr. Metzger concludes.

A look at what's happening at the savings and loan associations, traditional suppliers of the bulk of home financing, shows that many of them now must depend on money coming in each month in the form of repayment on existing home loans to supply funds for new home loans. Because of the stiff competition they are experiencing from commercial banks' sale of certificates of deposit and the Federal government's securities which are paying the highest rate of return in memory for short-term investment, the savings and loan associations are in a real pinch for money to use for home loans. According to Harold Esper of Main Federal Savings and Loan Association, home financing rates in the area now range from 6½ percent to 7 percent per year, higher than most home buyers are willing to pay. Many mortgage lenders will not even consider FHA and VA loans. By the end of this year, if current situations still exist, interest rates for investment real estate probably will reach eight percent or higher.

Mr. Esper commented that there are plenty of houses available for sale here but lending agencies are taking a closer look at would-be borrowers than they have for quite a while. Many first-time borrowers must shop around for a loan at any price, and the days of shopping for the most favorable terms on a home loan seem to have disappeared for the time being.

Probably the hardest hit among potential home buyers and sellers are those who ordinarily depend on FHA or VA financing. According to Roy D. Allen, Columbus FHA director, there has been a 50 percent drop in the number of FHA insured home loans made during the first half of 1966, compared with the same period in 1965.

To understand the principal reason for this drop, it is necessary to look at the mechanics of FHA financing, compared to conventional home loans. When the Federal Housing Authority was established, it was with the idea of providing home financing at a cost low enough to make home ownership possible for millions of families who before were unable to qualify for the necessary financing. By insuring the lending institutions (banks and savings and loan associations) against loss from default on an FHA loan, the Government encouraged these lenders to accept the responsibility of making and carrying such loans. But because these lenders must show a favorable return on their depositors' money, some means of assuring this profit had to be set up.

Thus the "point" or "discount point" system was born. First, the Federal Housing Authority determines a maximum rate which its borrowers may pay for home financing. This rate fluctuates, reflecting the general mortgage market rate. At the present time, the FHA ceiling is set at 5¾ percent per year, compared with the going rate of 6¼ to 7 percent on conventional home financing.

To make up the difference in return to the lender between the two rates, the seller of the home, whether it is new construction or an existing home, must make up the difference by paying "points." Each point represents one percent of the mortgage value. At times when there is ample mortgage money available, the FHA points all but disappear. When mortgage money becomes tight, as it is now, the points soar and home borrowing tends to decline. At present sellers are confronted with a point cost of 6 to 15—6 to 15 percent of the mortgage needed to make the home purchase.

The law specifically forbids the buyer to pay this premium to obtain the loan, and sellers frequently balk at having to pay for their buyers' loans, and so a stalemate is reached.

New homes financed through FHA-insured mortgages generally incorporate the expected point premium as part of the selling price. As Ernie Slane, sales manager for the Metzger Brothers oorganization, observed, "FHA points are a cost to us just the same as the lumber we use. So we have to figure them into the original cost of the homes we build."

If you've never been confronted with the problem of selling an existing home to a purchaser who expects to finance through the FHA program, you may have a surprise coming. If your buyer needs to borrow, as an example, $15,000 to make the deal, you may have to pay from six to fifteen points (or $900 to $2,250) to get a lender to make the deal. This cost, in addition to brokerage fees and other selling costs can make it very costly to dispose of a home and many people who expected to trade up to a new home this year have shelved their plans until the money market eases.

According to Mr. Allen of the Columbus FHA office, lending institutions ordinarily rate potential borrowers as Grade 1, 2, 3 or 4 credit risks. At present most of them will consider only Grade 1 and Grade 2 borrowers. He knows of no financial agency now willing to consider a 35-year FHA mortgage, which until recently was not uncommon.

What's going to happen to correct this situation? No one seems to be sure just what can be done under the Government's current anti-inflation program. The Federal Reserve Board determines the so-called "prime" rate which represents the cost to its member banks for borrowing money. In a period like the present, when there is a fierce competition for money for industrial expansion and commercial building as well as for home financing, the prime rate goes up, and with it, the eventual rate to borrowers. The first borrowers to fall by the wayside when the prime rate goes up usually are the home buyers, since they must commit themselves for a fairly long period of time, and cannot expect help in meeting the increased cost of the loan as a business might by charging higher prices for its products or services.

One glimmer of hope in the situation comes from the decision by the Senate Housing subcommittee to approve a bill to be presented to the Senate later this year which would allow the Federal National Mortgage Association to inject some $2 billion or more into the housing market. Familiarly known as Fannie Mae, the FNMA buys Government insured mortgages from private lenders in order to pump these dollars back into the money market for additional housing.

Beyond that, these seems to be little agreement on what can be done to keep the housing industry from suffering a real set-back. Few would deny the need for anti-inflationary measures, but hitting the brakes too hard can be almost as dangerous as allowing the economy to continue on a runaway course.

In the meantime, the local housing industry will continue to tighten its belt and try to get along on fewer sales in the midst of a continuing demand for new homes. Even Solomon might have trouble finding a satisfactory answer for this dilemma.

Salt and pepper
One-half cup finely chopped onion
Three tablespoons vinegar
Two tablespoons brown sugar
One cup catsup
Three tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
One tablespoon prepared mustard
One cup water
Dash hot sauce, if desired

Have spareribs sawed across rib bones so individual servings carve easily. Season spareribs with salt and pepper. Place in a shallow baking pan, cover tightly and cook in a slow oven (325 F.) one hour. Pour off drippings. Combine onion, vinegar, brown sugar, catsup, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, water, and hot sauce. Pour mixture over spareribs and continue cooking uncovered for one hour or until done. Spectator Photographers Catch High School Action

OFFICIAL VIEW — Spectator photographer Don VanHorn provided an official's view of Eastmoor quarterback Randy Yoakum's two-yard sneak to paydirt Friday in the Warriors' 20-0 win over Walnut Ridge. Scotties' Mark Olson moves in too late to halt Yoakum at left.

RANDY'S DANDY — Whitehall's Randy Nichols (14) eyes the distant goal line as he sets out on a 67 yard punt return touchdown Friday vs. Worthington. Nichols' score wasn't enough, however, as Rams lost, 24-14. (Staff photo by Bob Trepp).

DeFourney, Hickey Pace Scottie Hopes

Paced by number one man Rick DeFourney and captain Bob Hickey, Walnut Ridge figures to improve its '65's 2-2-2 mark, according to Scottie cross country mentor Harry McKnight.

Although McKnight rates his Scots higher this fall, he admits West, Whetstone and Brookhaven will be the teams to beat at the City Meet (Oct. 25).

DISTRICT favorites look like Arlington, Lancaster and Worthington, all strong boys in distance events last track season.

Other seniors on W-R's squad this fall are Tony Biscuso, Jim Fitzsimmons and Steve Mastenbrook — all returning lettermen.

Junior members include veterans from the Scotties' '65 track squad in Larry James, Lon Sancho and Steve Williams.

McKNIGHT lists Jack Barber, Leo Winkleman and Jack McNamara as his top sophomore prospects this season.

Here is the remainder of Walnut Ridge's '65 cross country schedule:

Sept. 29 — Marion - Franklin (4 p.m.)
Oct. 1 — at Lancaster Invitational (1 p.m., at Rising Park)
Oct. 6 — South, Eastmoor (4 p.m.)
Oct. 8 — at Ashland Invitational (Ashland College)
Oct. 13 — East, West (4:15, at Raymond golf course)
Oct. 15 — at Worthington Invitational (9:30 a.m.)
Oct. 18 — North, Brookhaven (4:15, at Raymond)
Oct. 22 — District Meet (4 p.m., at Raymond)
Oct. 25 — City League Meet (4 p.m., at Raymond)
Oct. 29 — Regional Meet (4 p.m., at Raymond)
Nov. 5 — State Meet (10 a.m., at O.S.U. golf course)

BEXLEY OPENS BAC CAMPAIGN VS. URBANA FRIDAY

Adults living in the Madison Local School District are offered the opportunity of becoming expert seamstresses and tailors. It's Wind Up Time

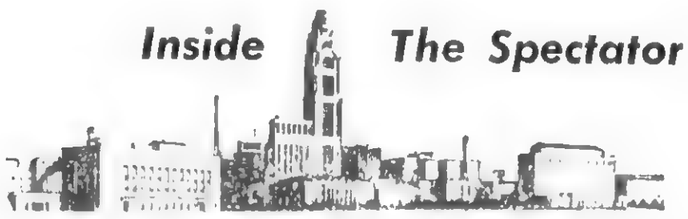
The Canal Winchester Village and School District Welfare Corporation will wind up its annual fund drive this Sunday, Oct. 9. Mrs. W. W. Haynes, general chairman, states that the volunteer workers made preliminary reports Saturday and that the response to date has been fine. In the attempt to contact every family, organization and business of the community, Mrs. Haynes asks that anyone who may have been missed please call her at TE. 7-4250.



C-W Grad In Saigon

Although Saigon is considered by its residents to be a modern city, S/Sgt. Roger M. Marion has written to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Marion of Canal Winchester, that the filth is unbelieveable and the traffic jams indescribable. "Anything and everything they can put wheels on are on the street, creating gigantic city-wide traffic jams," according to the soldier. The Canal Winchester High School graduate who is with the Military Housing Authority in the Vietnamese capital also has written of the deplorable health of the hordes of children flooding the city.

Placing of the huge 108 inch pipe for the Big Walnut Outfall, part of the trunk line system that will feed the city's $32 million sewage treatment plant at Shadeville, is a sight that could well block traffic if it were in a downtown area. The above scene was taken just west of Alum Creek-dr and south of Groveport Pike where the Complete General Construction Co., which holds more than $5 million in tile contracts, is putting pipe down at the rate of 300 feet per day. SOMETHING SMELLY AT FAIRGROUNDS

Merchant Charges 'Hanky-Panky'

By ROBERT BURDOCK
Editor and Publisher

There was an article buried in local newspapers on Sept. 3 that would have called for screaming headlines during any but the Rhodes administration—and particularly right before an election.

The article quoted State Fair Manager E. J. Keirns as being "skeptical" of a charge that a state fair official received money "under the table" from an unnamed Columbus merchant in connection with concession stand locations.

In spite of his skepticism, Keirns said he would ask for an audit of fair records. The article also quoted Gov. James A. Rhodes as not knowing anything about an audit to check charges of hanky-panky.

Being a bit skeptical too, The Spectator did some checking.

The merchant, who made the complaint to Ohio Finance Director Richard Krabach, is Robert Holler, who operates a novelty supply house at 463 N. High-st.

Holler told The Spectator he paid $3,010 in cash at the state fairgrounds to William Onslow, assistant fair manager, on Sept. 6, 1965, for 10 concession locations which he in turn leased. Holler said Onslow initialed a receipt for the cash and produced a photostat of a carbon copy he retained.

Holler further said that Onslow then paid him $500 from the $3,010 roll for a diamond ring purchased from Holler.

Keins is quoted as saying there is no official record of a deposit paid by Holler.

Now it becomes quite obvious there is something smelly at the fairgrounds other than the horse barns.

It would seem a simple matter for state officials to determine the facts. Either Onslow received the money and signed the receipt or somebody forged Onslow's initials. And if Onslow received it, state records should show it.

Either way, a serious charge has been made and the public has a right to a fast explanation.

The Spectator learned Holler was subpoenaed Sept. 29 to appear before the state bureau of inspection of the auditor's office, presumably to give a deposition.

At this rate of speed the whole matter may get cleaned up, or whitewashed, shortly after the November election.

OHIO'S LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday, October 5, 1966 274-1155 10 Cents

FOR ONCE it is not a case of too many cooks spoiling the broth. After all, it takes a bevy of women to prepare for St. Mary's annual Smorgasbord. Shown with their mixing ladles ready to go are, from the left, Mrs. William Coburn, general chairman; Mrs. John Wyatt, co-chairman; Mrs. John Stout, meat chairman, and Mrs. Joseph Brusk, publicity chairman. All the women except Mrs. Coburn who lives in Waterloo, are Groveport residents.

'Come And Get It' Call Rings For St. Mary's Smorgasbord

The women of the St. Mary Church at Groveport take to the kitchen this time of year as enthusiastically as their husbands turn to the World Series broadcasts this week.

And the rumor is that when they get there they know as much about the job they find waiting as Sandy Koufax knows about his.

It must be true.

If you don't believe it, just ask any of the one thousand persons who dined royally last year at what their hostesses describe as an "American Smorgasbord" dinner.

This year's feast, chaired by Mrs. William Coburn, will be held Sunday, Oct. 16. Serving will begin at noon and continue until the clock strikes 6 in the parish hall at Blacklick and Front-st in Groveport.

A preview of the menu promises chicken supreme, baked ham, Marzetti, pickled tongue and an array of salads and relishes that look as if they were awaiting a photographer from "Gourmet."

Tickets ($1.75 for adults and 75 cents for children) will be sold at the door.

Homemade cookies will be available for "tote" and several baskets of groceries will be given away.

Committee women not pictured include Mrs. Dale Rawn, Mrs. Francis Joyce, Mrs. Rita Hubbard, Mrs. George Martina, Mrs. William Kramer, Mrs. John Krauss, Mrs. Hanson and Mrs. Karl Eing.

G-M Cafeteria Set To Open Monday

Relief is in sight for the mothers of Groveport-Madison junior high students who have been packing lunches like mad since school started.

It now looks to Superintendent Phil Williams as if the cafeteria will open Monday, Oct. 10, and the lunch box days will be over.

The delay in opening was caused by the failure of the kitchen equipment contractors (Wasserstom) to deliver some of the essential items without which the plumbing and electrical work could not be completed.

WITH THE contract calling for an Aug. 15 deadline, the board has determined that it will assess liquidated damages against the company. At $10 a day, the penalty amounts to around $400.

In addition to student and teacher inconvenience Williams pointed out that the board was burdened during this time with surplus cooks on the payroll.

When the board meets this coming Monday night, according to Williams, it will find itself no further in its effort to solve the problems of administrative area than when bids were opened Sept. 20.

AT THAT TIME the administration, the board and the architects received quite a jolt.

The lowest bid on the proposed plans for a concrete block with brick facade office building at the junior high site was $74,961.

The architects, according to Williams had believed their own estimate of $63,000 was high. They pointed out that only 3,300 square feet of floor space was proposed, inside walls were those of the block, and the slab foundation was designed to serve as the flooring in some areas.

WITH 19 general, nine mechanical and two electrical bids received, the board could not blame the sky-high bids on any particular contractor.

And even the $74,000 bid looked good in comparison with the highest which totaled $92,000.

It is believed that the relative smallness of the job and the time of the year are responsible factors.

THE BOARD has not yet turned down any of the bids. According to Williams, action is being delayed while the members "window shop" the possibilty of converting existing residential housing to the need.

Contracts that were awarded recently include the $3,370 one of the Berls Electric, Inc., for installing exterior lighting at Asbury consisting of 20-foot mercury vapor units which will light up the sidewalks, parking area and traffic circle. The contract calls for underground wiring.

Slemmons Garden received the contract for planting trees and shrubbery at the Asbury site. The board did not have the funds available for this landscaping until this summer and the work was postponed until fall which is considered ideal planting time.

Comment And Criticism

editorials . . .

Blow For Freedom

Six of the area's major religious denominations have banded together in a project that furthers not only the cause of ecumenism but the battle for basic freedoms as well.

The movement is called "Project Equality," and it requires member churches to eliminate all vestiges of racial discrimination in their own ranks as well as the ranks of the businesses dealing with the churches.

This is a program that would hit violators where it hurts most — in the pocketbook. Suppliers who refuse to pledge to honor the standards of the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Program would risk losing their church business.

Involved in the local program are the Columbus Presbytery of the United Presbyterian Church, the Ohio West area of the Methodist Church, the Roman Catholic Diocese of Columbus, the Columbus Council of the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Ohio, the First Unitarian Church and the United Church of Christ.

These six faiths have put their collective buying power — which amounts to millions of dollars a year — in the forefront of the fight to eliminate racial injustices in all phases of American life.

It is heartening to see the newly-found spirit of ecumenism working so close to home and in such a worthwhile cause.

The Spectator echoes the sentiments of Vice President Hubert Humphrey, who called the program "another tool in our struggle to enable every citizen to enjoy self respect and the respect of his community as a contributing member of a free and democratic society."

Fair Share Time

For the next month, beginning tomorrow, Columbus will mobilize for its largest and traditionally most successful campaign—the United Appeal.

The "pitch" by now is familiar. One gift to United Appeal benefits 69 agencies in Franklin County, ranging from the YMCA and its recreational activities to the Poison Control Center and its life-saving functions.

The 1966 goal has been set at $4,815,430—a staggering sum that looks much smaller when viewed with the knowledge that 250,000 persons benefited from UA agency work in 1965. That comes to just about half the total population of the city.

UA was founded to eliminate the hodgepodge of charity solicitations that served only to sour people on giving money to anyone. It's an easy way to benefit thousands with a single gift.

This year's campaign slogan is "Everybody Wins When Everybody Gives." It is a simple slogan that tells the story.

The Spectator urges all Franklin County residents to give their "fair share" willingly and with the knowledge that UA will touch nearly all our lives in the coming year.

Fight Finale

The Spectator notes with pleasure that the Save the Scenic Valley Committee has thrown in the towel and will not continue its fight to halt construction of the much-needed Olentangy Parkway.

Apparently a defeat at the polls and another in court has convinced the committee it was wrong from the start. On top of that, the cost of carrying out an appeal would have been prohibitive.

This newspaper led the fight for approval of the Parkway alignment and urged weeks ago that the SSVC give up the ghost and drop the battle. It is heartening to note that even the foes of progress sometimes bow to the will of the people.

"Both Sides All Ready?"

Haircuts Change?

BY TED BEARDSHEAR
Spectator Staff Writer

There are some facets of life that seem to change slightly, if at all, with the passage of time.

One of those time honored institutions is the ritual of the haircut. Ever since man became man, other men have been whacking off hair with sharp instruments.

BEARDSHEAR

Probably with the advent of the scissors, the process changed a bit, and a bit more when the electric clipper appeared.

And despite the advance in technology, the principle remained the same . . . to cut off hair with a sharp instrument.

Being comforted with these things, I went the other day to a strange barber.

"Hello," he said.

"Hello," I said.

I sat in the chair.

"Long on the sides and regular everywhere else," I said.

Then, as barbers do, he chit-chatted about cabbages and kings. After a little trim, he told me of a new barbering advance. It was called "razor sculpture." He asked if I wanted it.

"I won't charge you extra," he said.

"Then I don't mind if you try it," I said.

Very carefully he combed my hair down over my eyes and down over my ears. He then took out a bright, shining and wicked looking razor which he stropped very methodically.

Somehow, a man stropping a razor that he intends to use seems a very sinister event. I would not have regarded him as being serious, except that men with razors are usually very serious.

Taking my straight locks in his left hand, he pulled it away from the head. He then began to shave the hair . . . just as if it were a face or something.

He whistled a little . . . which calmed the panic as blob after blob of hair fell over the shoulders.

In quick little motions, he finished up, combed my hair, and whisked off the apron. I stood up and stared at what I thought would be a patchwork of baldness.

Behold! It looked like a regular haircut.

Relieved, I paid the tab. Once on the street it hit me what had happened. Probably the first man with a sharp instrument cut hair something like that.

The profession has come full circle. In a series of slight changes it had evolved to the beginning.

Funny, the more it changes, the more it seems the same.

The Buckeye State?

To The Editor:

We can all find the sunshine in the Sunshine State or the peaches in the Peach State but who can find the Buckeyes in the Buckeye State?

Columbus, the capital city of the Buckeye State, has an ordinance against buckeye trees. The buckeyes are poisonous and the purpose of the ordinance is to protect our children. A property owner is responsible for having a buckeye tree removed at his own expense.

Either we should change Ohio's nickname or we should find a place to plant Buckeye trees so that all may view but not touch the buckeyes. There is such a place—the strip of land between the lanes of our expressways.

Nearly every visitor to our state travels on our expressways. Wouldn't it be appropriate that they be greeted with buckeyes in Buckeye Country?

Questions Safety

To The Editor:

After reading an article about legal loopholes allowing school safety hazards to exist I, a Whitehall mother, am concerned about such existing in Whitehall, and what we are doing about it.

I for one am very concerned, and have wondered about this for a long time. The Fire Chief oversees fire drills, and certain hazards are removed, but what about the school heating plants?

Why are not the people involved in the safety of these plants forced to produce all the safety standards that are humanly possible?

I would think that any mother would be too concerned to sleep very securely at night if she thought such a thing existed. I know it would take a newspaper such as yours to bring out the facts.

The kernel of truth left in the truth-in-packaging bill after it came through the wringer of the House Commerce Committee is so tiny that the backers of the measure have seriously thought that it might be better to let it go down to defeat and start afresh in the new Congress.

Lobbyists for the food processors and manufacturers scored a notable victory when they marshaled the votes to strike out the provision in the bill giving the government power to establish standards on packages informing the housewife just what she gets for her money. Sen. Phillip A. Hart, (D., Mich.), who persisted for four years in pushing truth-in-packaging, presented figures from a University of Michigan study showing that because a housewife cannot make price comparisons, added cost on the bill for household necessities may be as much as $250 a family.

So persuasive were the lobbyists as they moved through Congressional halls that veteran observers of the lobby-industry compared the onslaught to the doctors' lobby in its initial success in blocking Medicare.

Some of the biggest guns in the industry were trained on House Commerce committee members. Rep. John A. Gilligan of Cincinnati, a first-termer, is in a neck-and-neck contest with Robert Taft Jr. Cincinnati is the home base of Procter & Gamble and, needless to say, Gilligan heard from this giant of the soap industry.

Rep. John M. Murphy, a two-term Democrat from Staten Island, has Campbell Soup in his district. With its subsidiaries Campbell's Soup is in a wide variety of lines of food processing and distribution. Another first-termer, Rep. James A. Mackay of Atlanta, a Democrat, has Coca Cola.

With the end of the session approaching, the opposition marshaled a battalion of witnesses — some 50 altogether. They insisted on reading their statements rather than merely putting them in the record. To Chairman Harley O. Staggers, who said he could not recall any previous measure on which so much time had been spent, it looked like a filibuster.

The arguments had an old, familiar ring. We want individuality, the opponents said, we don't want Russian supermarkets.

The greatest stress, however, was put on the cost to the manufacturers if they were required to meet government packaging standards. Witnesses put this as high as $80 million. A select group of committee members was taken to view a display set up by some of the biggest processors showing the costly machines that would have to be scrapped if the Senate bill were to become law.

A witness for the Department of Commerce supplied the best answer to the high-cost argument. If this were the fact, then it was a clear indication of the chaotic state of packaging with claims as to the size and content that the innocent housewife has no way to verify.

A question here is whether the Administration sanctioned the measure that came out of the House committee on the theory that half a loaf—in this instance about a tenth of a loaf — is better than none, and a law on the books can always be strengthened by later amendments.

The mandatory provision in the Senate bill, in the view of its proponents, simply carries out the provision in the Constitution for standard weights and measures. The manufacturers are given a year to agree among themselves on what the standards shall be. A 10-ounce package of dry cereal or potato chips will contain 10 ounces and be so labeled. If after a year there is no agreement, then the government—presumably the Food and Drug Administration — would set the standards.

The kernel of truth surviving in the House bill requires that all packages be labeled plainly and legibly as to contents. But the bemused housewife in the glittering tunnel of the supermarket will still confront the boasts of the giant quart and the stupendous economy size.

william s. white ★ Public Killed Rights Bill ★

WHITE

Now that the Administration's second omnibus civil rights bill lies dead for this Congress there is a great political clackety-clack as to who killed this Cock Robin.

The failure of a bipartisan Senate majority to break a so-called Southern filibuster has been widely reported but not so widely understood. Technically and literally, the bill went down because it was impossible to marshal the two-thirds majority necessary to apply the cloture or gag rule to the Southern opposition. But this is only the surface of the truth.

Technically and literally, too — as the civil rights leader, Sen. Philip Hart of Michigan, now earnestly points out to all hands — it is the Republicans who are the villains of this piece.

True it is that the Republicans this time provided only 10 votes for cloture, where they had come in with 25 to shut off debate on the Civil Rights Act of 1964. It is also true that more than two-thirds of the Senate Democrats again voted for cloture.

But it was not really the Republicans who caused the deed to be done by their simple upwillingness to shut off debate. What killed this new civil rights bill was the American public which made it abundantly plain that it was not at all keen about extending civil rights legislation just now.

The American public responded so negatively because of the spreading resentment against extremists among Negro leaders and because of a powerful and spreading fear of a violence in the streets.

In a word, the right and proper Negro drive for honest civil rights has been deeply, and for the time being fatally, stained by the excesses of the young and bitter-minded Negro demagogues who have so long outscreamed the responsible and old-line Negro leadership.

Nor is this result wholly to be assigned to the white backlash. There has been a Negro backlash, too; not against the concept of civil rights for Negroes but against the persistent perversion of this movement by some Negroes quite willing to do business with Communist forces which could not care less either for this country or for truly democratic rights.

All this had been long feared by responsible moderates in and out of office — and long predicted by them, too. Questions of short-term political gain and loss are real but relatively minor. The G.O.P. pros are not worried; undoubtedly they think, and quite possibly rightly think, that the public is not at all worried either.

In the longer term there is much to worry about, however. It may be put in a single question: How long will it take for the responsible Negro leadership to recapture a movement that had made so much progress only to be arrested at last by violent and ugly extremism?

barry goldwater ★ Kennedy Stealing HHH Glitter ★

GOLDWATER

The true measure of liberal politics may now be taken in the cat-and-dog fight involving the President, the Vice-President and the junior senator from New York.

Democrats all, part-and-parcel of the liberal machinery of the land, they are now proving that the depth of their convictions and the length of their consciences is pretty much a matter of personalities, popularity polls and pushes for power.

The spectacle presented by Vice-President Humphrey is particularly revealing. President Johnson has treated him all along like a second-string messenger boy, with one notable exception. Briefly, around the first of the year, Mr. Johnson suddenly started publicly not only to recognize the existence of the Vice-President but even praise him and permit him some useful duties.

It was apparent even then that the main reason for this sudden warmth was an attempt to turn Humphrey into a political weapon to be hurled against Robert Kennedy whose popularity was clearly on the rise.

It didn't work. The far-left liberals for whom Humphrey once had had such great appeal simply didn't respond as Mr. Johnson obviously hoped they would. To the far-left, Humphrey obviously had been replaced as a hero by Kennedy.

Kennedy is rocketing along, taking his place in the polls as the most popular Democrat in the land. And every day we get some new story in the press about the harsh effect this has on Mr. Johnson. To hear most of the comments, you gather the President is far more concerned by Sen. Kennedy than by many of the other issues with which he is faced.

That principles are not involved becomes clear quickly. Mr. Johnson, Kennedy and Humphrey are all dedicated to a generally collectivist society. What they are involved in is a pure and simple struggle to see who will control the collectivist society they all envision.

The reason the farthest left of the liberal leftists support Kennedy is because they sense he would carry on the collectivism fastest of all. The reason many of them have dropped Humphrey is simply that he stood in the shadows while Lyndon Johnson took the country farther down the road to socialism than even the wildest liberal had dared hope would be possible in so short a time.

Comment And Criticism

editorials . . .

Blow For Freedom

Six of the area's major religious denominations have banded together in a project that furthers not only the cause of ecumenism but the battle for basic freedoms as well.

The movement is called "Project Equality," and it requires member churches to eliminate all vestiges of racial discrimination in their own ranks as well as the ranks of the businesses dealing with the churches.

This is a program that would hit violators where it hurts most — in the pocketbook. Suppliers who refuse to pledge to honor the standards of the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Program would risk losing their church business.

Involved in the local program are the Columbus Presbytery of the United Presbyterian Church, the Ohio West area of the Methodist Church, the Roman Catholic Diocese of Columbus, the Columbus Council of the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Ohio, the First Unitarian Church and the United Church of Christ.

These six faiths have put their collective buying power — which amounts to millions of dollars a year — in the forefront of the fight to eliminate racial injustices in all phases of American life.

It is heartening to see the newly-found spirit of ecumenism working so close to home and in such a worthwhile cause.

The Spectator echoes the sentiments of Vice President Hubert Humphrey, who called the program "another tool in our struggle to enable every citizen to enjoy self respect and the respect of his community as a contributing member of a free and democratic society."

Fair Share Time

For the next month, beginning tomorrow, Columbus will mobilize for its largest and traditionally most successful campaign—the United Appeal.

The "pitch" by now is familiar. One gift to United Appeal benefits 69 agencies in Franklin County, ranging from the YMCA and its recreational activities to the Poison Control Center and its life-saving functions.

The 1966 goal has been set at $4,815,430—a staggering sum that looks much smaller when viewed with the knowledge that 250,000 persons benefited from UA agency work in 1965. That comes to just about half the total population of the city.

UA was founded to eliminate the hodgepodge of charity solicitations that served only to sour people on giving money to anyone. It's an easy way to benefit thousands with a single gift.

This year's campaign slogan is "Everybody Wins When Everybody Gives." It is a simple slogan that tells the story.

The Spectator urges all Franklin County residents to give their "fair share" willingly and with the knowledge that UA will touch nearly all our lives in the coming year.

Fight Finale

The Spectator notes with pleasure that the Save the Scenic Valley Committee has thrown in the towel and will not continue its fight to halt construction of the much-needed Olentangy Parkway.

Apparently a defeat at the polls and another in court has convinced the committee it was wrong from the start. On top of that, the cost of carrying out an appeal would have been prohibitive.

This newspaper led the fight for approval of the Parkway alignment and urged weeks ago that the SSVC give up the ghost and drop the battle. It is heartening to note that even the foes of progress sometimes bow to the will of the people.

"Both Sides All Ready?"

Haircuts Change?

BY TED BEARDSHEAR
Spectator Staff Writer

There are some facets of life that seem to change slightly, if at all, with the passage of time.

One of those time honored institutions is the ritual of the haircut. Ever since man became man, other men have been whacking off hair with sharp instruments.

BEARDSHEAR

Probably with the advent of the scissors, the process changed a bit, and a bit more when the electric clipper appeared.

And despite the advance in technology, the principle remained the same . . . to cut off hair with a sharp instrument.

Being comforted with these things, I went the other day to a strange barber.

"Hello," he said.

"Hello," I said.

I sat in the chair.

"Long on the sides and regular everywhere else," I said.

Then, as barbers do, he chit-chatted about cabbages and kings. After a little trim, he told me of a new barbering advance. It was called "razor sculpture." He asked if I wanted it.

"I won't charge you extra," he said.

"Then I don't mind if you try it," I said.

Very carefully he combed my hair down over my eyes and down over my ears. He then took out a bright, shining and wicked looking razor which he stropped very methodically.

Somehow, a man stropping a razor that he intends to use seems a very sinister event. I would not have regarded him as being serious, except that men with razors are usually very serious.

Hot Contest Looming On Meadow's Ballot

There's considerable interest in the Ohio gubernatorial campaign this fall but in Hamilton Meadows the big polling place next week will be the meeting of the subdvision's Civic Association.

Scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 11, at the Hamilton High School members of the association will be asked to choose between two presidents, each with his own slate of officers.

JIM BROUGTON, who is the presidential candidate of group "A" has as running mates Russell Swope for vice-president; Harry Farringer for secretary and William Brazil for treasurer.

These candidates are pledged to work for a community swimming pool, the lowering of speed limits in the Meadows, closer harmony with the Board of Education and a program of entertainment at the regular meetings.

Bob Thiel heads slate "B." Supporting him are J. Bell for vice-president; George Robinson for secretary and Reed Davie for treasurer.

THIS SLATE has announced it wants to revive the Bingo games formerly sponsored by the Civic Association and abandon overly-ambitious projects such as the Fourth of July celebration in favor of more numerous and short-lived programs. A license tag sale was specifically mentioned as an example of this type of project. They also want new street signs for the community.

Apparently, both slates agree that the Hamilton Meadows directory should continue publication.

With less than 20 percent of the 560 families in Hamlton Meadows currently enrolled on the membership roster, it is hoped that the election and the opportunity to have a voice in choosing the new officers will bring out a high proportion of the residents.

ABSENTEE BALLOTS are also available at the office for those who cannot attend the meeting.

A spokesman pointed out that lethargy has been one of the factors responsible for the water fluoridation issue dying.

A note of harmony was voiced with the statement that both slates have promised, if defeated, to support the winning team.

Butter's Out In School Cafeterias

What is going to happen to Cafeteria prices in county schools?

That is a big question in the minds of administrators in several South East Schools.

Even the students have realized something is amiss when suddenly they found "bread and margarine" or "rolls and oleo" appearing on the cafeteria menus.

IT SEEMS that the surplus butter which the U.S. Department of Agriculture has handed out to school lunch programs so lavishly in the past has suddenly disappeared.

A communique from the USDA states that cheese has also been cut from the available commodities and that ground beef will be "limited." Although it was not mentioned specifically, the wording of the letter leads to the conclusion that there will be no other beef provided. In the past this has been an item of considerable importance on the menus.

The only rosy feature in the directive is the promise of frozen turkeys and chickens in abundance and the statement that commodities to be received will equal the dollar value of those received last year.

PHIL WILLIAMS of Groveport Madison said that if this is true and commodities not previously furnished are now forthcoming in sufficient amounts, school funds can be used to buy the discontinued items without a hike in prices.

All the administrators spoken to agree it is too early to see how hard the cut back in surplus commodities will hit the school lunch programs.

BACK-TO-BOWLING we will go . . . in heather wool coordinated outfits that score high in fashion savvy and good looks . . . in any league. Left: cotton shirt in tiny flower print, with grape or blue predominating, worn with a trim A-line skirt, sensibly short, worn with coordinated pants in grape or blue.

BOWL 'EM OVER in a handsome brick heather wool costume . . . the cablestitch pullover and back-pleated kiltie skirt, to be worn above the knee for maximum good looks and comfort.

Bowling Demands Sport Fashions

Bowling is an indoor game in which players roll wooden or composition balls along a wooden runway called an alley, attempting to overturn ten wooden uprights, called pins, in the fewest possible rolls.

Bowling is popular in the United States and Canada; it is played also in Great Britain Norway, Sweden, Finland and with nine pins, in Germany.

In the good old U.S.A. the bowling lanes are sprucing up for the start of the 1966-67 season, and you can bet your life that the gals who have signed up are getting back in the "swing" in typical fashion.

EQUIPMENT . . . BALLS, shoes, bags . . . is being checked to see what might need servicing or replacement. A few practice games might also be in order to establish an "average."

In addition to all this, any woman can attest to the fact that, whatever the sport, she's more likely to be a winner if she knows she looks her best. So, during these "Back to "Bowling" days at Sears, ladies are busily planning outfits that are as becoming as they are comfortable at the lanes.

The popular Poor Boy sweater is highly recommended for any bowling wardrobe. This skinny-ribbed knit pullover has fashion to "spare" (pardon the pun). It might be wool, cotton or Orlon . . . striped, solid, or printed . . . and any color or combination of colors you could imagine.

PAIR THE POOR BOY sweater with anything . . . pants, A-line skirt or jumper . . . and you have a "striking" team in any league.

The classic cotton shirt is always a good sport, especially when you add Perma-Prest to the variety of patterns, stripes, plaids, checks, tiny flower prints and solid colors.

Little A-line skirts styled above the knees take bowling in good stride. A generous pleat or wrap-around front leaves plenty of room for action..

FOR THE LADIES who are more game (and those of you who get all these puns) the new textured stockings add a dash of difference to bowling shoes. Knee socks and colorful tights make a pretty sight worn with sporty short skirts.

What color to choose in these leg coverings? Well, pick up one of the colors in the outfit to coordinate with the shoes . . . or to contrast. One thing to avoid, is a pale textured stocking or sock with a pale shoe . . . this gives a kind of Charlie Chaplin effect and looks humorous instead of fashionable.

IN THE PHOTO today, the lady bowler is wearing "Fishnet" stockings, or maybe "panty-hose" in the fishnet texture, that are mighty practical. I say this from a personal viewpoint . . . I bought a (one) pair of fishnet hose last spring and I am still wearing them. They don't run . . . they don't snag . . . they are comfortable and they are fashion-right with many fabrics and textures. I think they would be a grand choice for bowling.

There are many fashionable looks for the American bowlers of the feminine gender and with fashions like these, it is not any wonder that there are now over 17 million lady bowlers.

Good luck . . .

Can $2,500 Put You On Your Feet?

By JANE ROBINSON

Does $2,500 sound like peanuts to you?

If you lived in Georgia, peanuts could represent $2,500.

But in Central Ohio it is more likely to mean a barber's chair, a small truck, a tractor or equipment for a photo lab.

A RELATIVE infant in the family of anti-poverty programs is the Opportunity Loan available to people living in small towns and rural areas.

The goal?

According to Wade Jeffers, director of the Farmers Home Administration district office in London which manages the program for the Office of Economic Opportunit, it is a simple one.

"WE WANT to make taxpayers out of tax-eaters," he stated.

Opportunity Loans are made to those without resources of their own who, with a little help, must have a good chance to economically stand on their own feet.

"If they've got the ambition," Jeffers explained, "we've got the money. Because few people are familiar with the program, there's money lying idle, waiting for "takers."

But Jeffers warned that the FHA board, made up of three citizens (of the community it serves) isn't in the business of giving Uncle Sam's money away unless it's reasonably certain it will be returned.

TO BE ELIGIBLE for a loan, an applicant must have little or no income, he must be unable to get a loan anywhere else, and he must be able to earn more through the loan and repay his debt in at least 15 years.

And, it is equally important that the loan be practical. Jeffers took a dim view of the plans of a woman to buy 100 feeder calves to fatten to market weight.

SHE HAD no experience in this field and was planning to buy rather than raise the feed necessary to supplement the available pasture.

A compromise was reached which gave her enough money to learn something about the beef business with two rather than 100 calves and to purchase a second-hand truck to put her dependent son in the hauling business.

Age is a loan consideration.

JEFFERS pinpointed the need of a retired man whose retirement income has been gobbled up by inflation.

"As long as he's willing to work, we can help such a man to keep himself off the welfare rolls," the FHA official said.

He told of a man in his sixties who had a small business supplying firewood to garden centers, but found chopping wood to be an increasingly back-breaking job.

LAST YEAR his income had dropped to the point that he had sought help from welfare.

After checking with his customers, it was learned that his potential market was practically unlimited and he was loaned $1,100 to buy a wood-splitting machine and tires for a tractor.

HE IS SEVERAL months ahead of his $20 a month payback schedule, has been able to finance his own truck for deliveries and within a year is expected to have an annual income of $4,500.

Another equally successful, although much more ambitious, business has been set up for John Ruggles, who lives on the old Xenia-rd, London.

For several years Ruggles has been the only employe and service man for the local distributor of Chore Boy, a company devoted to dairy equipment.

WHEN THE previous owner decided to sell the company to devote all his time as district manager of Chore Boy, Ruggles was his obvious successor.

But Ruggles had no capital to purchase the inventory tools, truck or to operate.

He took a long-term chattel mortgage and the FHA stepped in to assume the balance of the financial responsibility.

AND RUGGLES has been going like a house-a-fire ever since.

He's added a Patz line to his sales and service business and actually shows signs of someday being a "capitalist."

"Of course we had cold feet at," first Ruggles concluder, "but I knew I had a good partner in Jeffers."

PREVIOUSLY attempting to support his wife and children on a salary of less than $4,000 a year, Ruggles anticipates his net income to be at least $6,000 in 1967.

Jeffers explained that there are few restrictions on the type of business ventures sponsored.

A widow, for example, might be given the money to install an extra bathroom in her home so that she could rent one or two rooms, to buy nursery and playground equipment for day-care center or to purchase ovens and other appliances for a home bakery.

Jeffers agrees that it is highly improbable that with an investment of $2,500 (the average loan is $1,500), the recipient is going to offer General Motors or AT&T any real competition.

BUT OPPORTUNITY loans offer a chance for those who otherwise might live the rest of their lives in poverty.

"What must be realized," Jeffers concluded, "is that these loans are given in good faith and the applicant must face the fact that they are not a gift. They must be repaid."

THE FIVE PERCENT default rate is about double that of more conventional loans.

However, Jeffers said he believes that careful screening of applications can cut this figure to a more reasonable one.

IN ADDITION TO moral support, a very real contribution offered by the FHA director Wade Jeffers to Johnny and Ruby Ruggles is bookkeeping guidance. Inadequate bookkeeping is responsible for many small businessmen failing to recognize danger signals before it is too late. The Ruggles have set homeownership as the next step in their program of financial independence.

Elementary Boon To C-W Teenagers

Although it is elementary rooms that are proposed by the Canal Winchester School Bond issue appearing on the November ballot, the junior and senior students will be given a better school if it passes.

The first impact of the new building program would be the freeing of six high school rooms that are now housing fifth and sixth grade students.

This will mean that English teachers can once again have permanent teaching stations rather than being forced to play their current game of musical chairs.

THE ART ROOM can be reclaimed by the art students, the junior health students can come back upstairs out of the basement, the Ollie Speaks room can be restored to its original use as a vocal music area and the band can once again have a room of its own.

Establishment of an elementary library will also be a boon to high school level, as it will remove "the children" from the teenagers' study area.

Where the vocational shop area is now, a new study hall will take high school age kids out of the auditorium. Superintendent Carl Miller points out that an auditorium is not actually a bad study hall, IF there is more than a curtain separating it from the adjacent gym classes.

MILLER POINTED out that crowded conditions experienced in the last few years in itself creates teaching problems.

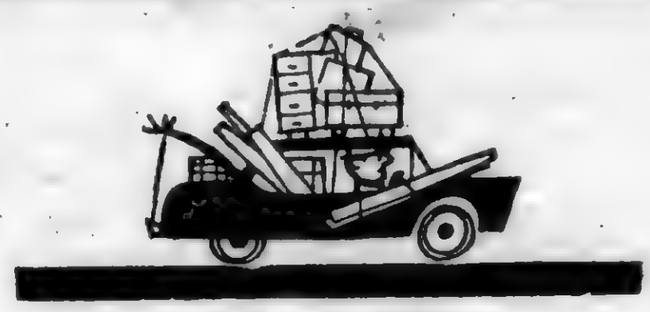
When sardine-like jamming is a rule rather than an exception, classroom discipline disintegrates, the faculty members find themselves at a low level of efficiency and students find learning increasingly difficult.

A fringe benefit will be that to the 250 upper classmen who are relegated to basement benches to eat the lunches prepared at home.

With the new cafeteria, they can become "first-floor" citizens once again.

Miller emphasized that high school problems are growing, not diminishing.

AS EACH class graduates, the sixth grade moving up behind it will be at least 50 percent larger.



S.E. Volunteers

Charles T. Wheeler, general campaign chairman for the 1966 United Appeal Campaign, has announced chairmen and captains for the various divisions of the UA drive.

J. William Henderson, Jr., 2471 Shearingham-rd, will be chairman of the industrial division; Dr. Watson H. Walker, 1801 Oak-st, will be head of the education division and Dr. W. William Brewer, 3545 Olentangy River-rd, will be chairman of the professions division.

Some 15,000 volunteers wil work on the annual drive which has a goal of $4,815,430 to support 69 health, welfare and recreational agencies. The goal is up seven percent from last year.

Among volunteer leaders in the southeast area is Gerald Hartman, administrative assistant for the county schools, who lives at 116 W. Columbus-st, Canal Winchester.

T-V, H-T Eye Major Metro Tests

By JACK WITTENMEIER
Spectator Staff Writer

Metropolitan and Mid-Eight League play highlights action in the Southeast, Gahanna and Reynoldsburg areas this weekend.

Teays Valley (1-3) hosts Pleasant View (1-3), Hamilton Township (0-4) rolls out the welcome mat for Franklin Heights (2-2) and Reynoldsburg (2-2) journeys to Whitehall (1-3) in the Metro encounters while Groveport (0-4) visits Mifflin (0-4) and Gahanna (4-0) hosts Marysville in Mid-Eight play.

OTHER AREA games find Carroll (1-1) inviting Berne Union (4-0) and Canal Winchester (0-3-1) visiting Lancaster Fenwick (2-1-1) in Mid-State action.

Teays Valley grid boss Marion Waits will send his Vikings out in quest of a second straight Metro win Friday against a Panther outfit he regards as "due."

P-V, a pre-season pick to compile a record lopsided with victories this fall, shows only Circleville on the plus side this season with losses to Grandview, Brookhaven and Whitehall.

"THEY'RE still basically a strong ball club," Waits warns. "Remember, they played a couple of tough opponents in Grandview and Brookhaven.

"And they beat a good one in Circleville (a team which trimmed the Vikings, 34-0)," Waits continued.

"Injuries (to halfback Marv Roush and end Bob Betesky) hurt them at Whitehall and the rain (held down Panther passer Charlie Hess) didn't help either.

"THEY RUN well and pass well and look like they've made the adjustments for those two lost receivers," the T-V coach concluded.

Pleasant View, which operates basically from a pro-type offense with split ends and flanker backs, has also been shifting into an "T" formation this fall.

The problem for the Viking defense should be sophomore halfback Jerry Boggs who Waits describes as "probably about as tough a runner as we have in the league."

ANOTHER P-V strength is quarterback Hess whose pet play is the option run or pass. "Everybody talks about his passing," Waits said, "but he's also a very elusive runner."

Waits, who figures his Vikings will give away between 25-30 pounds on the line to P-V, figures the Panthers will offer some type six-man front defensively.

Waits lamented his Vikings' stalling four or five times inside Hamilton's 20-yard line in Friday's 6-0 win over the Rangers.

THE T-V mentor credited quarterback Bruce Roese and fullbacks Bill Welch and Don Daft on offense, adding safety Jim Wells and ends Sid Liming and Joe Bush to the defensive plaudit list.

Hamilton Township, still playing without halfback John Gorczyca (out two-three more weeks), could find another loop companion on the rebound Friday in the Falcons.

F-H has now dropped two straight after kicking off the '66 campaign with two wins.

RANGER MENTOR Bill McProuty describes the Falcon offense as a double wing "T" with both halfbacks split.

The Falcons, whose attack seems pretty much balanced between rushing and passing, will have more team speed than the Rangers, although both clubs will be of comparative size.

McProuty praised the defensive work of middle linebacker Ernie Spires in the loss to Teays Valley last Friday, also pointing to the running of Jeff Nelson and Mark Haesecke.

THE RANGERS, who penetrated into Viking territory only once (got to 12 as time ran out), "had a sloushing good time," McProuty commented. "But not good enough," he concluded. The Rangers piled up 139 total yards.

Gahanna's mentor George Troutman wasn't overly pleased with his Lions' fourth straight '66 win Friday — a 12-6 verdict over Westerville.

"They never forced us to punt," Troutman quipped. "We just gave them the ball ourselves (five fumbles, 35 yds. in penalties).

"A COUPLE of quick touchdowns got us off fast," the Lion mentor continued. "But we lost our momentum and played mediocre ball after that."

Troutman credited his defensive unit for "rising to the occasion" when necessary, however.

The Lions outgained the Wildcats, 231-185, Friday enroute to their 21st victory in the past 22 outings.

TROUTMAN WAS highest on his defensive backfield, pointing out that of 37 opposition passing attempts in the last four games, only eight have been completed with five intercepted.

Defensive laurels vs. Westerville went to back Mel Hoston, middle guard Steve Miller and linebackers Stan Poth and Ron Goldhardt.

Troutman sees upcoming foe Marysville as a team with good backfield balance with a basic running attack which features a "cross series."

"YOU'VE GOTTA remember they've played a couple of pretty good football teams in Hilliard and London the last two weekends," Troutman said.

PIN NEWS

Keglers' Korner

By NORMA KIRKENDALL

It's early in the season but already high scores are flooding in.

For instance, Columbus Builders Supply rolled a 3240 series on games of 1114, 1064 and 1062 — nosing out Zep Chemical's 3070.

DICK BRAUN'S 727 hit a season top — to be replaced by Roy Buckley's 770, almost a record triplicate. Vic Jutt Winko'd out a season-high 289 and 686.

Fiesta is the spot to aim for in Aid to Retarded Children's Tourney for three weekends.

Did you ever hear the word "catola"? Well . . . in New Orleans, they refer to a blind score as a "catola."

YEARS AGO a man named Joe Catola did not show up for his team's first two league games. The team, bowling with a blind, won both games. Joe showed up for the third game and bowled a 300—but his team lost. Now they call blind scores "catolas."

They do things big and different in California. In Reseda there now is "the original Mink League." Every member receives a mink trimmed cashmere. The one thing which is not announced in the ad is how much the bowlers have to pay at each league session.

Qualifiers for "Let's Go Bowling" for men are: Oct. 8-9, Three C; 15-16, Northern Lights; 12-23, Rainbow, and 29-30, Berwick. For women it's Oct. 8-9, Canal; 15-16, German Village; 22-23, Stardust, and 29-30, Capri. Real good chance you may bowl on TV for big prizes.

WATCH Channel 10 at noon on Sundays for action pictures of the Bowlers of the Week.

Oct. 29 through Nov. 30 are dates at Scioto Lanes for the third annual Scioto Men's Classic, including five-man teams, doubles, singles and all events. Entries close Oct. 22. This is a handicap tournament.

PBA will start (in 1967) holding its national championships in the new lanes at New York's Madison Square Gardens. Prize money for 1967 will run over $70,000.

ST. LOUIS will host the 1967 All-Star at Skylark lanes in May — the 26th version of this thrilling tourney.

NOTE — In tournaments other than match game or elimination type when a roll-off is decided on to break a tie for the championship, ABC rules require that at least three games be bowled.

Fearless Predictions

After another "even par" weekend (15-5), the "Fearless" One sent a 59 right, 32 wrong percentage into week five with these calls:

READY AT WORTHINGTON — Knights will need full effort for this one. Ready.

CANAL WINCHESTER AT LANCASTER FENWICK — Hosts in a tossup. Fenwick.

EAST AT BROOKHAVEN — Tigers snap loss streak. East.

MARION-FRANKLIN AT CENTRAL —Should be City League's best offering. Could well be wrong here but . . . M-F.

GROVE CITY AT HILLIARD — On paper looks like runaway but it won't be. Edge to . . . Hilliard.

GRANDVIEW AT URBANA — Hosts winless, should remain so. Grandview.

EASTMOOR AT NORTH — Unless Warriors are looking too far ahead . . . Eastmoor.

GROVEPORT AT MIFFLIN — Cruisers snap losing streak. Groveport.

ST. MARY AT WEST JEFFERSON— Riders should rack up number four. W-J.

TEAYS VALLEY AT PLEASANT VIEW — Panthers stay in Metro contention. P-V.

WHETSTONE AT WEST — Braves bounce back. Whetstone.

WALNUT RIDGE AT LINDEN — Good place for Scottie upset but . . . Linden.

BEXLEY AT DELAWARE — This one should be BAC title indicator. Try . . . Delaware.

DUBLIN AT MT. VERNON ST. VINCENT — Irish maintain winning ways. Dublin.

DESALES AT SOUTH — Strictly on a hunch . . . DeSales.

FRANKLIN HEIGHTS AT HAMILTON TOWNSHIP — Falcons break up two-game loss skein. F-H.

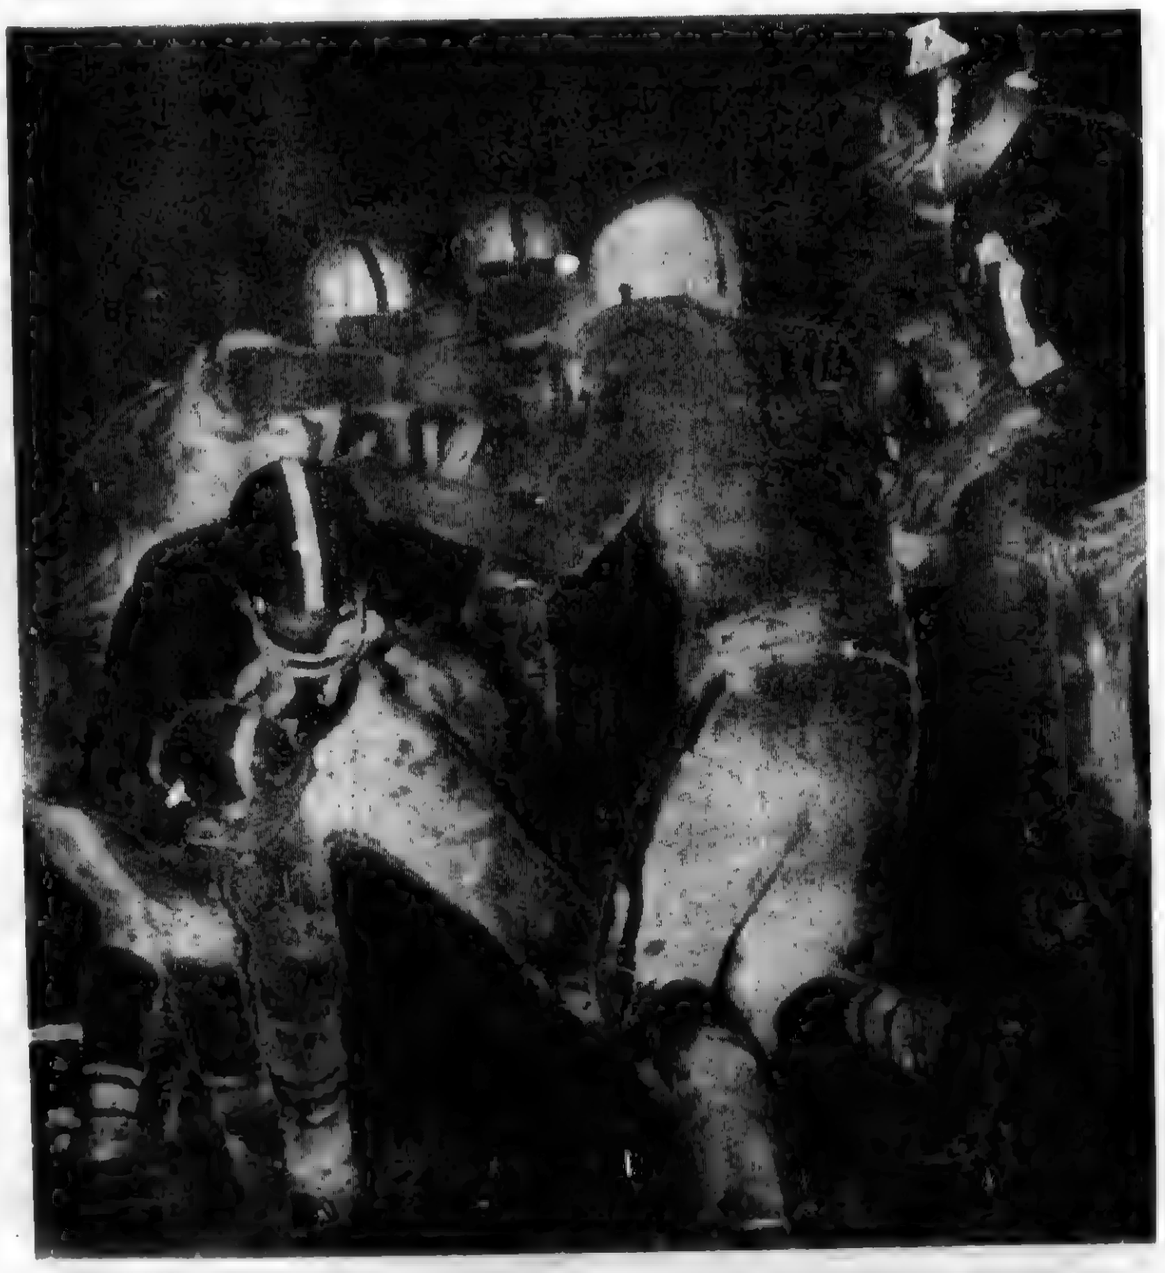
NEWARK CATHOLIC AT ACADEMY — Vikings sail on. Academy.

MARYSVILLE AT GAHANNA — Defending champs still team to beat. Gahanna.

ARLINGTON AT MT. VERNON — Bears add another. UA.

WATTERSON AT NEWARK — Eagles notch No. 5. Watterson.

REYNOLDSBURG AT WHITEHALL —Could be for all the Metro marbles. Edge to . . . Reynoldsburg.



BERNE UNION AT CARROLL—Visitors unbeaten in league play. Berne Union.

SATURDAY

DAYTON ALTER AT HARTLEY — Hawks make it three in a row. Hartley.

OTHER GAMES

Whetstone J-Vs at Northland (Friday)
Wehrle Memorial at Gahanna J-Vs (Saturday)

SLIPPERY MILLS — Just about everything was slippery Friday night at Canal Winchester, including Amanda's Terry Cordle, shown here sneaking throught several Indian tacklers for a conversion. Clearcreek, rain, dampened C-W's homecoming—the former by a 16-8 count. (Staff photo by Bob Whitman).

DAGG-GONE — Grove City quarterback Gary Dagg (13) works his his way through slippery turf and Groveport defenders above as he sets out on 15-yard TD run during 'Hounds' 12-6 win over the Cruisers Friday. Dagg also passed for other score.

MAVERICK

With Muddy Shoes

By RICHARD L. PAUGH

The evening sun is dimmed, the audience waits expectantly and the curtain rises on Act Three of Mother Nature's Play of the Four Seasons.

If there are any of you who haven't noticed the first splashes of color on the hillsides, the striking harvest moon or the thundering sunsets, you're over the hill.

OUT AT Paugh's Patch, the bittersweet hangs lush back on Pippin Ridge and the fox grapes present a banquet table for the hungry grouse.

PAUGH

A kind-hearted deer has left me the top half of an apple, still hanging in the tree. The sassafras trees are clothed in flaming leaves and the cuttings from a large beech tree fall all around me.

Would you believe it, some people are too busy to notice this wonderland?

THE NEXT season to open for Ohio hunters will be for ruffed grouse on Oct. 14. The daily bag limit is three, no more than six in your possession, and you may hunt them from daylight to dark or until your legs drop off, which ever comes first.

The grouse season is in until Feb. 25, the longest hunting period of all in Ohio.

Shirt-tail conservationists were worried for many years about getting the ruffed grouse shot out of Ohio by such a long hunt but by now the staunchest unbeliever must admit hunting pressure has nothing to do with the health of the flock.

LIKE AN experienced bank robber, the grouse always seems to have his getaway planned well in advance of the shooting. Although the daily limit is three, the average wing shot may consider himself lucky if he brings back a single bird each time he takes to the woods.

Pound for pound, the grouse is easily the best drag racer in outdoor Ohio. His timing is superb, usually remaining well concealed in pine boughs until you chance to turn away, then thrashing up and out before you can get your blunderbus nudged into your shoulder.

He leaves you with the feeling that you are a lousy hunter, not fit for the field.

ACTUALLY, in my book, the judging of a good hunter is not how much game he slaughters but whether or not he uses what he takes. I would much rather spend the day with a man who takes one bird but makes sure that it is eaten than one who takes his limit then leaves them to rot.

I would rather see the joy of the outdoors combined with the culinary arts than the carcasses of total slaughter.

The man who enjoys his apron during the summer on the back patio can just as easily turn his "skills" to cooking what he brings home from the field. This is a pleasant surprise to the regular cook who, in turn, will be more than delighted to see you bring back more game.

IF THE day is above 45 degrees, draw your game as you shoot it. A sharp pen knife and five minutes will assure you of quickly cooled birds.

This also leaves the innards in the field where they will be a meal for other hungry animals. Back home the remains represent a messy sink and lessen the enjoyment of the meal.

Here is a simple recipe for broiled grouse: split down the back and rub both sides with peanut butter; broil for 15 minutes, basting every couple minutes with the following: three tablespoons butter, one pinch of basil, one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce and one tablespoon tarragon vinegar. Mix well.

IF YOU WANT to stretch your grouse to fill an extra guest, here's a stuffing: one-half cup mushrooms, one-half cup bread crumbs, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon parsley, one teaspoon grated onion and salt and pepper lightly.

If you get tired basting, drap the carcass with strips of bacon. It keeps the meat tender. The average grouse will feed two — with stuffing, three.

YALE SUMMERS, the handsome doctor's assistant on the CBS-TV show "Daktari," will be the honored guest of the Coonskin Cap ceremonies at Lake Hope on Oct. 9.

The public is cordially invited to drive down and see "Jack Dane" as he gives of his time to the League of Ohio Sportsmen to officiate at the initiation of 160 teenagers into the Order of the Coonskin Cap.

Lake Hope is 10 miles north of Zaleski on State Route 278.

Big Features Listed For October At Beulah

Big features are coming up with Beulah Park now well into its 37-day fall running.

• Two-year-olds get the big chance on Saturday, Oct. 8, when the Beulah Kindergarten Handicap will be run at six furlongs. This is a race for juveniles owned by Ohioans or foaled by Ohioans.

• The Chateaugay Handicap is slated for Oct. 15 and is scheduled for three-year-olds and is also at a six furlong distance, and for horses foaled in Ohio.

• The highlight of the fall season is Oct. 22 when the Ohio Championship is offered at a mile and a sixteenth. The prize is $10,000 and the field already has indications of being the classiest in the long history of the race.

Paul Ward heads the jockeys at this stage of the meeting and recently won his 500th race.

Fund Raising Dates Set For Youth Program

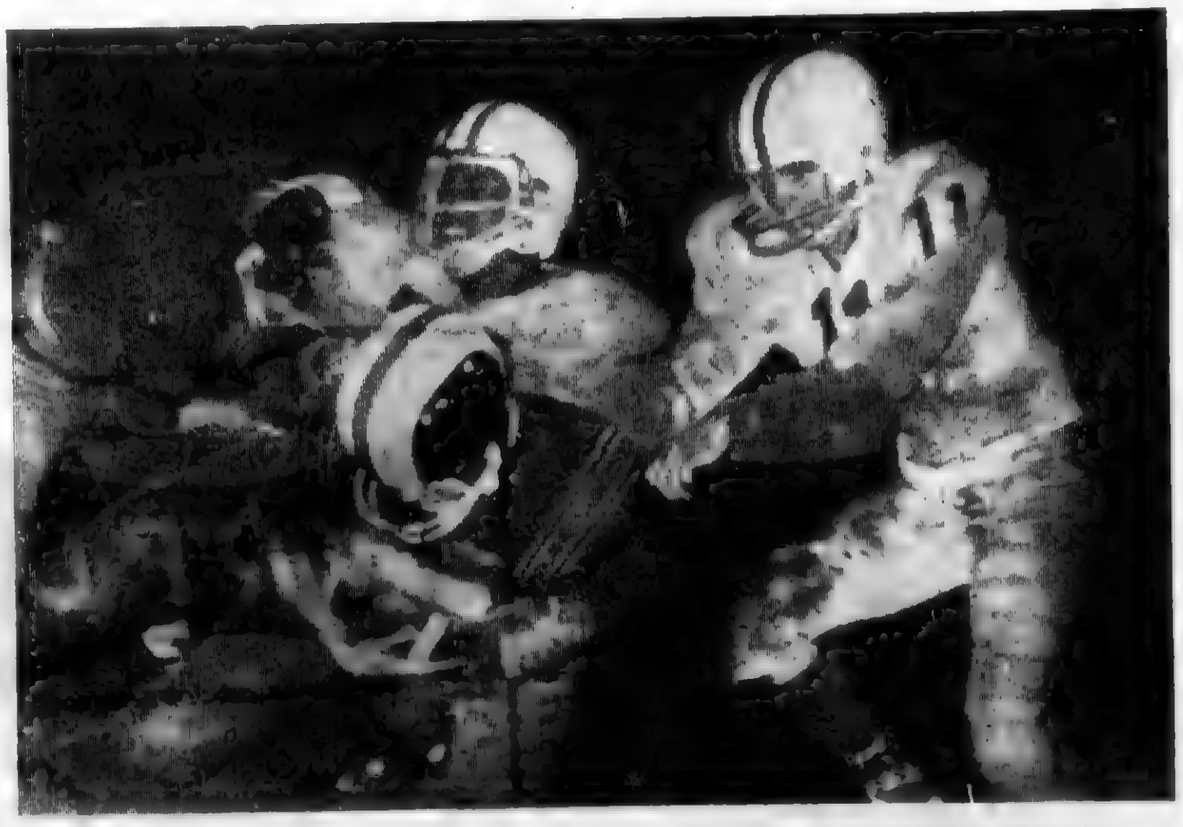
Youth Football officials announced today that 115 boys and 18 girl cheerleaders have signed up for the football program this season.

For the first time, all three teams are fully equipped, through the purchase this year of equipment for 30 additional boys at a cost of $1,500. The new purple and white uniforms were displayed to the public at the recent Firemen's parade.

President Bill Ochsenwald announced that the Annual Business Drive to help pay for the new uniforms will begin Oct. 3, and continue for two weeks. On Oct. 8, the boys and girls will be in uniform for the Annual Door-to-Door Public subscription. Contributors will receive a purple sticker with a white stallion for 1966.

Contributions may also be made by calling 866-5677 or 866-3159.

G-L Wins First Big 'One' 12-6



Gahanna Lincoln, behind Mel Hoston and Chuck Freeman's first period scoring zoomed into the top spot of the Mid-Eight League with still unbeaten Hilliard and London. The slick Lions of George Troutman downed never-licked Westerville, 12-6 in the Mid-Eight feature.

Elsewhere in the area, Reynoldsburg fashioned a mighty offensive punch with a 34-0 win over Franklin Heights on the scoring charge of Denny Spires and two TD passing strikes, despite soggy playing conditions, by Gary Shade.

Amanda slid over Canal Winchester, 16-8 as a tricky reverse with Mark Craig carrying the ball 14 yards posted the Indians lone score. Grove City boxed Groveport, 12-6, and Teays Valley outlasted Hamilton Township, 6-0 on Bruce Roese's three yard TD run.

HAT SALE SET

The Carrie Nelson Black Ray of the Columbus Cancer Clinic will have a hat sale Tuesday, Oct. 11, at the home of Mrs. Robert Wray, 2920 Courtright-rd. The sale will begin at 1 p.m. and continue through the evening. The public is invited.

CRUISER CORRALED — Slippery footing and the persuasive defensive tactics of Grove City's Ron Wheeler (right) and Gale Cooley stalled Groveport runner Donnie Miller's extra yardage aspirations on this play Friday. 'Hounds slid to rain-splattered 12-6 verdict over Cruisers in Mid-Eight battle. (Staff photo by Mike Yates).

HIRING A MAN LIKE MIKE PROVES 'MONEY IN THE BANK'

By JANE ROBINSON
Spectator Staff Writer

Mike Stewart's wheel chairs seem to wear out faster than most.

It's small wonder — the pace he keeps.

Wherever one would expect to find a vigorous young man you'll find Mike and his chair —on a pitcher's mound, in a night club, in church, at a euchre table, on the 50-yard line at West High, at work, and—most recently — behind the wheel of his very own car.

TWENTY-TWO years ago he was born with a defect affecting the spinal cord which has left both legs virtually useless.

He was recently chosen by the Ohio State Employment Service Bureau to help bring to the public the story behind the nationally-observed "Hire the Handicapped" week.

Awareness that a twisted body has little to do with intelligence, ambition, loyalty and on-the-job competence is at last opening factory and office doors that once proclaimed "NO ADMITTANCE" to the physically handicapped.

Mike, who became a "drop-out" at the 10th grade level after five years at Neil Avenue School and another five spent with home instruction, was at a vocational crossroads last year when he was sent to Goodwill for a three-week period of work-evaluation.

THERE HE WAS advised to abandon his stop-gap career of door-to-door sales. By last February he was a steady employe of the Rhoads Glove Manufacturing Co. on E. Main Street.

He is a piece worker on the production line, a job admittedly far from intellectually stimulating.

However, from this job, Stewart has gained two satisfactions — that of the knowledge that he can keep up with experienced workers who are without handicap, and that of "earning his own way."

AND HIS NEW-found self-confidence and financial independence have led him to set new goals for himself.

His long-range time schedule includes enrolling at Central High the fall of 1968 to attain his diploma and two years of post-high school training to qualify himself as a bookkeeper.

When this time comes Rhoads will have to find another "glove turner" and it is quite likely another handicapped person will get the chance to get on his feet, as such is company policy.

GLEN LISTON of the employment Service emphasized that companies that open their payrolls to the disabled have found it money in the bank to do so.

Perhaps it is that the guy (or gal) who knows he already has two strikes against him is a bit more determined that he won't strike out.

Statistics show the handicapped employe has a lower absenteeism rate and a better safety record than his fellow worker. Employers also invariably comment on the "loyalty" of the handicapped employe to his company — an intangible than is difficult to measure and equally hard to come by.

MITCHEL STEWART, as most people in the same boat, is bound and determined he'll get what's available out of life to him through his own efforts.

Mike unwittingly drew a picture of his attitude with two statements.

THE FIRST was, "If there's someplace I want to go or something I want to do, nothing is going to stop me. I haven't made it to the C-Deck of the Ohio Stadium yet, but that is on my list."

The other was spoken when he was talking about his acceptance among his contemporaries.

"I'm fortunate to have always had a lot of friends. When we're together, we all just forget that I'm handicapped."

Dimensions in Living Magazine

...is here today. It's D-DAY!

Delightful humor will be used in liberal dashes in stories spun by today's best raconteurs. Goodman Ace, who, with his wife, Jane, is famous as writer and star of the radio classic, "Easy Aces," and is a regular contributor to the pages of the Saturday Review, dishes up a well-done tale to start us off: "One Cold Coming Up, Medium Rare."

Divine fashions will be described by noted fashion authorities, first of whom is Eugenia Sheppard. Miss Sheppard, who has been described by Time Magazine as "the most outspoken U.S. fashion writer by far," writes about a timely major development in international fashion — "The American Fashion Invasion of Europe."

Decorative interiors with pace-setting ideas will be an integral part of DIMENSIONS IN LIVING. Yale R. Burge, president of the interior design firm that carries his name, leads off with a practical and provocative plan for homeowners — "Room For Thought . . . a place to get away from it all."

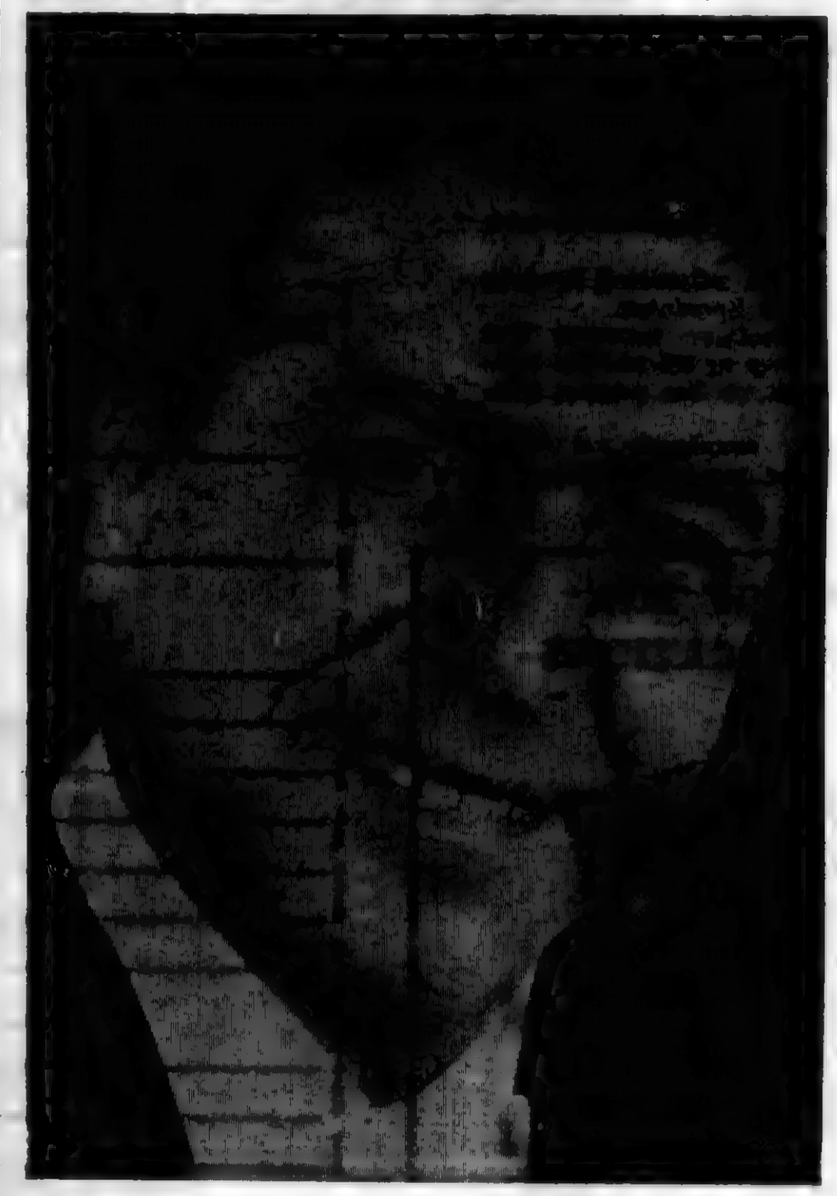
Community Theaters Prepare For Yearly CTA Conference

Community theaters throughout the state are preparing for the annual Ohio Community Theater Associations' annual conferme to be held Friday through Sunday, Oct. 14-16 at the Beasley-Deshler Hotel.

This conference is designed to further community theater through knowledge in all phases of theater. Workshops and discussions on Saturday will include make-up demonstration, films on theater, sound effects, musicals for small theaters, better printed programs and a directing and acting demonstration.



Saturday evening guest speaker, Henry Hewes, drama critic for Saturday Review, will give a talk on "New Directions In Theater." Following this, "Inspiration OCTA" will take place. This is an excerpt contest set up to enhance better productions among community theaters throughout the state. This region, Central Region, will be represented by Gallery Players with "The Glass Menagerie," which won over the other local theater groups this past spring at the annual regional conference.

On Sunday, Roy Bowen, director of theater at Ohio State University, and David Ayers will present an acting demonstration. Throughout the conferme there will be outstanding persons of each regional area present to meet and inform those wishing to learn more about other theater group activities.

More important though is the fellowship among theater advocates that will develop. This conference is certainly designed to be exciting and informative. Anyone interested in attending should phone regional representative Carolyn Lane at 878-5449 for registration or for more information.

A very special "break-a-leg" to all theater groups throughout the state who are participating in either the program or in the areas of competition. For those attending an enjoyable time is in store for you, don't miss this year's conference as this is the beginning of a new stage of development for OCTA.

MANTOVANI TO APPEAR

Montovani and his concert orchestra will appear in person at 8:30 a.m. on Friday, Oct. 14, at Veterans Memorial. Slated For Monday

Production is scheduled for mid-November. Parts are available for five men and six women. The play, a comedy, concerns a would-be actress, her husband and a successful advertising man who yearns to be a playwright.

Bringing Up Baby®

Hints Collected
by Mrs. Dan Gerber, Mother of Five

TODDLER FEEDING TACTICS

Near-a-year babies or toddlers often go through an anti-milk stage. If your baby takes a stand against milk, you can see that he gets a fair share of milk through these simple ruses:

1. Serve extra portions of Gerber Cereals. Top with Gerber Fruit for an appetite incentive.

2. Whip up a simple nog: 2 Tbs. Gerber Egg Yolks • 1 can Gerber Orange Juice • 1 cup milk • 2 tsp. sugar.

3. Treat him (or her) to Gerber Custard Puddings—the ones made with whole milk solids.

The "no-no" stage. Most toddlers go through a normal stage of saying "no" to everything. If the "no" shows up at mealtime, irritating though it may be, it should be ignored like any other play for attention. Baby will stop sooner when he finds he can't annoy you.

Gerber Two-Way Lunch
Junior Spaghetti,
Tomato Sauce and Beef
Junior Creamed Spinach
Junior Peaches on Ice Cream

Nice to share a meal with your toddler occasionally. He'll probably eat more when he sees you enjoy it. (You might want to sprinkle your spaghetti with parmesan cheese.)

Practical and positive approach to feeding problems is to serve a variety of Gerber Junior Foods. "Grown-up" flavors are designed to tune up taste buds. "Custom-cooking" preserves natural nutrients to a high degree. Over 50 lively choices.

New! Delightful! Flavor-bright!

Gerber Butterscotch Pudding
Gerber Turkey Rice Dinner

Strained or junior. P.S. Added attraction for the Butterscotch Pudding: top with crumbled graham crackers for extra nourishment. Would make a toddler feel awfully grown up. Gerber® Baby Products, Box 33, Fremont, Michigan.

The American

by Eugenia Sheppard

There will be a reverse twist to the European fashion story this coming year. Boatloads of clothes will be arriving from America—almost as many as will sail our way from Europe.

Since the beginning of organized fashion — couturiers and all that — American women have idolized European clothes. They have believed that European designers were endowed with some special magic, and that any dress with a foreign name sewn in at the back of the neckline puts them a couple of steps ahead in the race for status. Each season when our stores show the imports their buyers have brought back, along with the copies made here, literally thousands of women jostle each other to get into the opening and see what is going on at the top.

The funny thing, though, is that European women have become equally mad about American clothes. They love the whole concept of ready-to-wear. They admire the easy, American way of shopping, the fabrics, the fit of the clothes and the range of sizes which is three times as wide as it is any place else in the world.

That secret little dressmaker every European woman is supposed to keep hidden from her best friend may have given French women, at least, a reputation for great chic. But the dressmaker is no longer what she's reputed to be. Fittings and pinnings have become time-consuming bores.

It's a ready-to-wear world. And nobody can turn out attractive ready-to-wear clothes more quickly or more effectively than the American manufacturer. Inevitably, most European countries are starting to make ready-to-wear fashions now, but they're still a long way behind. It takes a year for their designers to finish a model and get it in the stores. And the clothes can't help but look dated — to us, at least.

If our ready-to-wear clothes haven't reached Europe before this, it isn't because European women don't know about them. Their fame has been spread by hordes of American-dressed women who are constantly on the move, traveling through Europe. (Last year the most popular gift anyone could take to a European woman was one of those printed rayon jersey shifts from Wilroy that looked as if it came from Emilio Pucci. Remember? You bought them in those plastic envelopes.)

The big barrier has been the high cost of American clothes exported to Europe. When an American dress reaches another country, the price tag can be triple what it was when it started here. And another thing: Funny as it sounds, American manufacturers have suffered from a certain lack of self-confidence. Artisans are self-conscious about admitting to artistic or creative talents. They have hung back and played follow-the-leader to the Europeans all these years.

Now, however, with more European ready-to-wear coming into American stores all the time, a few hardy Americans have decided to start a reverse flow. It's about time! The group is calling itself the A.E.F. Forget that these initials once stood for American Expeditionary Forces. The new connotation is American Exporters of Fashion.

There are about twelve manufacturers involved in the plan to sell American fashions to Europe in a big way. They all make moderate price clothes with familiar labels in them, like Jerry Silverman and Malcolm Starr. Silverman is well-known, especially for his flattering clothes that suit small women. Malcolm Starr is famous for glamorous, glittering evening clothes. Many of the dresses Starr will sell to European girls will be made in Hong Kong so that they won't cost as much as if they were manufactured here.

None of these fashions slated for Europe have been designed or made yet, but they will more or less follow the look of the fall collections – good fabrics, colors and, above all, that marvelous American fit. By next spring, the A.E.F. should be in action, selling dresses from new showrooms in London, Dusseldorf, Zurich and, perhaps, Brussels.

Several London stores, like Woollands' and Harrod's have been operating departments of American fashions for a long time. To raise interest even further, genial Jerry Silverman and his designer, Shannon Rogers, recently rented the famous Pavilion at Brighton for an American birthday party and fashion show.

And clothes aren't the only part of American fashion that is beating a path to Europe. At the Yves St. Laurent opening, models wore marvelous heavy silver Lurex stockings with their pumps. Backstage they were reticent about admitting it, but the stockings came direct from New York.

An American designer of costume jewelry, Coty Award-Winner Kenneth J. Lane, made the costume jewelry for Givenchy's boutique, where Audrey Hepburn shops. He was also "consultant" for St. Laurent's jewelry and many of the popular plastic Pop Art earrings look just like the kind he shows here.

It seems that we Americans are just beginning to discover what great fashion we have had all this time, right in our own backyard.

An interplay of warm color gives this library solid dignity and quiet elegance. Oak paneling is stained nut-brown and its vigorous grain is emphasized by the adjacent use of rough green slate on the fireplace wall. Chocolate velvet covers the sofa while tones of mustard, brown and terra cotta are used on the chairs. For punctuation: the painted finish of a William and Mary chest, and the pattern of a Savonnerie-type rug.

Charcoal flannel-covered walls are studded with silvery metal nailheads for a stunning paneled effect. The same feeling of glitter on dark color is repeated in the stainless steel edging of the bookshelves, which are upholstered in morocco leather. (Vinyl can substitute for leather.) Sofa and chairs, tailored for comfort, are covered in tawny tweed or suede-cloth. Softening accents: Fox fur pillows and an antique Bessarabian rug.

Colors need not be dark to be restful, as proven by this airy, country library. Royal and white bamboo-pattern wallpaper introduces a see-through quality that opens up the room. White woodwork and rugs establish a clear background for lime green, slate blue and yellow upholstery fabrics. Light pours through arched windows, curtainless to feature a view of the garden. Great color accent: Slate blue, lining stark white bookcases.

Room for Thought

...a place to get away from it all

by YALE R. BURGE

How long has it been since you could find a place to get away from it all — a quiet place away from the family bustle, from business, from the world? Our grandparents had just such a place. To them it was the den, the library, the study —or even the back parlor. But whatever they called it, it provided a room for thought.

Today, we need to rediscover this almost forgotten luxury. A retreat of this kind offers a special kind of privacy. It's made for reading, listening to music, pursuing a hobby, visiting quietly with some member of the family or doing absolutely nothing. It's pure luxury, and easily available.

Consider the areas in your home which might be put to use as a room for complete relaxation. What about that seldom-used guest-room, or a section of the attic or basement? Once you have found the proper location, all that is needed is a little imagination and some simple construction. Here an interior designer can be of inestimable value.

The mood of the room is created by the manner in which it is decorated. A dark brown study, for instance, is not only a fitting expression for a certain state of mind, but also an accurate description of a great in-home library. While library might sound a bit pretentious, this room represents a quiet place to sit, in comfort and solitude. The room is handsome, relaxed, as expensive as you want to make it and always, somehow, secure.

While everything in the room is important, from the leather or vinyl upholstered furniture to the handsome fabrics and rugs, the design emphasis is on the walls, which should be made to create a distinguished architectural background. They may take on rich, dark tones when wood-paneled in mahogany, oak or rosewood veneers. But fabric-covered walls can be used to create equally strong and stunning effects.

In combination with these walls, your bookcases gain new dimensions. They should be used to extend the decorating mood rather than interrupt it for mere utilitarian purposes. When properly designed, your bookcases may well become the pièce de résistance, displaying your most cherished tomes.

The simplest-to-construct bookshelves are those of wood or glass, suspended on brackets in wall-mounted metal strips. Despite their ease of construction however, you may prefer built-in bookshelves, which have a more architectural character and allow greater individuality of detailing and finishing. For a rented house or apartment, built-in effects can be achieved with free-standing bookcases made to stack atop each other. These units can be combined in various arrangements to suit new space requirements if you move.

The wide range of handsome building materials currently available practically assures success in designing the bookshelf unit. Wood shelves may be handsomely grained veneers. They also can be stained in a variety of ways. One new stain allows the grain to show through bright, unexpected shades of red or turquoise. Paint, plastic laminates, wallpaper or fabric can cover shelves of more ordinary wood.

In fact, there should be no clear line drawn between the functional and the decorative. For if planned with both imagination and ingenuity, they will work together to create that room you have wished for — a quiet place to get away from it all.

Will The Real JOHNNY CHUNG Please Stand Up?

by Arthur Lenahan

Twenty-five years ago "Bullet" Bill Dudley of the University of Virginia was leading the nation's collegiate gridiron scorers with 134 points; Frank Sinkwich was on his way to rolling up a total 1,872 yards gained for the University of Georgia; Bruce Smith was leading the University of Minnesota to the 1941 College Football Championship; and a fleet-footed Chinese halfback named Johnny Chung was gaining considerable press coverage sparking Plainfield Teachers to football immortality.

Harold Rosenthal, sports editor of the old New York Herald Tribune, recalled the beginning of the Chung story not long ago. As he tells it, he was sitting at his desk in the sports department on Saturday evening, Oct. 25, 1941, waiting for the first edition of the paper to come out, when the phone rang. The conversation, according to an account that later appeared in The Football News, went like this:

"Sports department?" asked an amiable voice. "I'd like to report a football score. Plainfield Teachers, 27; Winona, 3."

"Plainfield Teachers, that a New Jersey school?" queried Rosenthal.

"Yes."

"Okay, thanks very much."

Rosenthal scribbled down the score, to be printed in the Sunday paper in the sports-results column headed EAST, and thus became an unwitting accomplice in the instigation of one of the greatest football hoaxes of all time.

What Rosenthal did not know was that the amiable voice on the other end of the wire belonged to Morris Newburger, a sports fan and partner in Newburger and Loeb, the Wall Street brokerage firm. Newburger subscribed wholeheartedly to the belief that football players are made, not born. He had decided to create one, along with a full-size team for him to star on.

Newburger knew the football scene. He knew that reporters did not attend small games, and the papers relied upon public-spirited parties at the schools to phone in the results of the games on Saturday night. He knew of the chaotic conditions caused by the fact that there was a war, and a draft, on; colleges were starting up with a football schedule one Saturday and dropping it the next. These factors, coupled with Newburger's continuing fascination with the inclusion in the Sunday columns of such institutions as Slippery Rock Teachers College, gave him all he needed to go ahead and plant his imaginary football team.

Riding on his one-shot success with The Trib, he proceeded to map out weekly schedules for the "Jersey Dons." They were to play against such fearful foes and traditional rivals as Scott, Chesterton, Randolph Tech, Ingersoll, St. Joseph's, Appalachian Tech and Harmony Teachers, an imposing schedule for any team, and particularly for nonexistent Plainfield.

But Plainfield had Johnny Chung. Known as the "Celestial Comet," he ran riot over his foes. And his success was not to be attributed to talent alone. It was now made known that his prowess stemmed directly from his "time-honored" habit of devouring a bowl of rice at half-time.

Thus it was that after trouncing Winona one week, Plainfield made it into The Trib and The Times the following week by beating Randolph Tech 35-0. Who was the star? That charging, 205-pound Chinese back, Johnny Chung. (Funny, but all teams looked alike to Chung.)

It must be reported that on one newspaper to which Newburger phoned in the result of the big game, a rewrite man asked about the location of Randolph Tech.

"What do you mean?" asked Newburger, caught short for a ready and pat answer.

"I mean, is it in the East, or the South, or where? Sounds like a school in Wilmington."

"In Wilmington?" parried Newburger. "No, it's just outside."

Of course, every period has its hoaxes, not necessarily in the field of sports. In the late 1700's an 18-year-old boy "discovered" two "lost" plays written by Shakespeare. He managed to have them produced at the famed Drury Lane Theatre before finally admitting that he had written them himself. In the late 1830's, a reporter, striving to build circulation for his struggling newspaper, announced that "The Edinburgh Journal of Science" had found life on the moon and had his readers believing it. But later he admitted to inventing the story himself. Even Edgar Allan Poe had a hand in a hoax when, in the 1840's, he deceived the leading intellects with an account of a trans-Atlantic balloon flight. But the biggest fraud of the 1940's belongs singularly to Morris Newburger.

Newburger now enjoyed the sweetest taste of success. Having duped both The Times and The Tribune, he accelerated into high gear. He "hired" a mythical public relations man to publicize Plainfield and Johnny Chung. He had stationery printed with "Plainfield Teachers Athletic Association" emblazoned at the top to add a touch of authenticity. And he invented a head coach named Ralph "Hurry-Up" Hoblitzel to guide the fortunes of the Dons. "Hurry-Up" pioneered, and was widely heralded for, the unorthodox W-formation, an offensive weapon shaped for the particular talents of the swivel-hipped "Celestial Comet."

Chung, fortified by his half-time bowls of rice, had by this time been credited with scoring 57 of the 98 points scored by his team and had chalked up an average gain of nine and three-tenths yards every time he carried the ball. (Apparently the "W" Formation was his "Cup of T.") He had captured the imagination of the press and was being hailed as an easy bet for the "Little All-American" team. Wrote one football "expert": "Johnny Chung, Plainfield Teachers' Chinese sophomore halfback, has lead his unbeaten and untied team in four starts . . . If the Jersey Dons don't watch out, he may crop up in Chiang Kai-shek's offensive department one of these days."

By now Newburger had let all his Wall Street friends in on the gag and they were roaring with laughter. A prank played on the staid old Times and The Trib! And then The Trib unmasked the fraud, when they attempted to assign a reporter to cover the nonexistent school's next game.

Faced with the bad news, Newburger pleaded to be allowed to finish out his schedule. He would have Chung hurt while dragging five tacklers across the goal line in a close win over Appalachian Tech, then come back the next week to personally cripple the Harmony Teachers team. No dice. The luck of Newburger and of Johnny Chung had run out.

The Times never saw fit to publicly acknowledge their mistake. The Trib, on the other hand, grandly and permanently immortalized Plainfield Teachers by printing a "school song" composed to the tune of Cornell's famous "Far Above Cayuga's Waters," that went like this:

Far above New Jersey's swamplands,
Plainfield Teachers' spires,
Mark a phantom, phony college
That got on the wires.
Perfect record made on paper,
Imaginary team!
Hail to thee, our ghostly college,
Product of a dream!

TRY THE NEWEST, MOST EXCITING INVESTMENT PLAN– AND VACATION WHILE YOU DO IT

There is a family in Alaska whose members happily visit a cooperative apartment they own in Honolulu at least once a year. In between times, they rent the island lodging. A New York lawyer owns three houses in the city and rents them all, against the day when he decides which one he wants to live in when he retires. A thrifty actor has been able, over a period of a few years, to buy 17½ assorted acres on mountainous Tortola in the British Virgin Islands. He can't live on them all, but the ones he doesn't build on are without question a gold-plated (or pound-sterling) investment. Leicester Hemingway, the late novelist's brother, carried this sort of thing to a logical extreme last year when he anchored an 8-by-30 foot bamboo raft to a reef a few miles off Jamaica and christened it New Atlantis. Then he announced plans to seek recognition by other "sovereign states" and issue postage stamps.

All of the above are people who have been clever enough and far-sighted enough to build or buy a "second home." (Mr. Hemingway's, admittedly, may be a trifle drafty for most.) And they found it a great adventure. On the other side of the coin, are the practical aspects of such an adventure. It answers the oft heard question, "Where shall we live when the children are grown up?", and it offers a source of revenue if rented during the periods when the owners are absent.

Let's say you're flying over the Caribbean, and the plane swoops low to approach an island. You are dazzled by the sunlit water below—patterned in jade, turquoise and lavender. Creamy froth curls up on the golden beach. And then, suddenly, a bluff looms high over the sea, and you know straight-off it's the perfect place to build the house of your dreams. Will you act on the idea—find out who owns the land, how much an acre costs, what sort of a mortgage can be arranged? Or will you think wistfully about it later and wish you had?

Or you're motoring in Majorca, keeping a cautious eye on three nuns in a donkey cart, and suddenly there it is—the house that you've been waiting for. Of course, it may need some remodeling—perhaps a good bit of remodeling—but what's that if this is the house of your dreams? Will you follow your instincts and commit yourself, both emotionally and financially? Lots of people have.

A lady artist bought an old ruin of a tower in Ireland and is hard at work fitting out the place with such amenities as a bathroom and hot water. She rents her apartment in New York. A man who has traveled to far parts recently settled for "roof rights" in Minorca (Majorca's little sister). He knew when he saw it that the island was for him. So when he couldn't get the beach property he wanted, but was offered rights to the flat top of a house nearby, he thought, "Why not?" His house in the sky isn't built yet, but he has hopes that he and his Spanish-speaking architect will have a meeting of the minds on the blueprints soon.

It's not just Americans who are getting in on the "second-home" boom. Europeans are, too. The English, especially, caught on years ago, and are plentiful in Portugal, Italy and Spain. One might say that the sun never sets on a Briton who has a home abroad. It will be interesting, incidentally, to see whether the English, and their neighbors on the Continent, now begin to search for their "homes away from home" in this country. The U.S.A. offers a wide variety of sun-drenched retreats. For instance, a New York stockbroker bought a hideaway in New Mexico that proved so popular with his family that one of his sons asked for, and got, permission to attend school there.

There are real estate people everywhere. And it's a wide, wide world. So when you go off on that next trip, watch where, and while, you're going. It may be nothing you want, but then again it may. All of us have a pretty good idea of the landscape that would make us happy: Bucks County (a warm barn), Frederiksted (an old cottage) or the St. Lawrence River (quiet fields and stone houses).

Plan your next trip with that "second home" in mind. It won't cost you any more to travel with a buying eye.

But plan it now!

Herein lies a well-done tale, dished up by an olde master story-teller...

"One cold coming up, medium rare"

by Goodman Ace

Up near Niagara someone's electric toothbrush developed a short last fall—according to an enlightened story as told by Con Edison—and we had a mysterious blackout that developed into a cold. Well, it wasn't exactly the blackout that caused the cold. The blackout was more of a catalyst.

When a guy sneezes in the Gemini capsule, it makes the front pages and the whole country says, "God bless you." I sneezed, hacked, sniffled and dribbled for two weeks after the aforementioned blackout and all it got me was "Goddamnyou, stay away from me." Do you have a minute? I'd like to tell you about it. It went like this . . .

My wife, Jane, lit candles that blacked-out night, just as everybody else did, and we decided that we looked more romantic by candlelight. So we had candlelight dinners many nights after that.

It was during one of these romantic, dimly lit, flickering dinners that I complimented her on the roast beef. She replied, "Stupid, that's sweetbreads," when the phone rang. I groped my way to the instrument, and in the hush of the night and by the light of the silvery moon (and little else), I stubbed my toe against a chair. And that is painful! I said, "Gee!," "Man!," "Yow!" and a lot of other three-letter words. Then phoned my doctor quick.

"Doc," I said, "I stubbed my toe against a chair."

"Which one?" he asked.

"The arm chair in the study by my desk," I replied.

"Not which chair. Which toe?" he shouted.

"Why?" I asked. "Do you have a different cure for each toe?"

"Look," he said, "I'm in the middle of dinner. Come into my office tomorrow and I'll X-ray it."

"OK," I said, "if I can walk tomorrow. I'll have to put some cotton between the toe I stubbed and the next one, and that'll relieve the pain when I walk."

"That's ridiculous," he said. "Never heard of it. You be in my office tomorrow at 9 and I'll see if it's broken."

The next morning I hobbled into his office. He X-rayed the toe and announced it was not broken.

"But what do I do when I walk? It hurts terribly, Doc."

"I'll tell you what you do," he said. "Put some cotton between the toe you stubbed and the one next to it and that'll relieve the pain when you walk."

"Thanks a lot, Doc," I said. "What a marvelous idea."

"And one more thing," he added. "Wear soft shoes. Do you have a pair of soft mesh shoes that you wear in the summer? Wear them."

So I did. In my soft mesh shoes I took the train the next day to visit some friends who had just bought a summer home in Westchester County. It rained on, and in, my soft mesh shoes as my hosts showed me around their grounds. And it rained on, and in, them as I waited for the train to take me home.

The New York Central Railroad, it may be noted here, has windows that no human hand has ever been able to open or shut. Not a breath of air, fresh or dirty, ever penetrates them. But on this ride, with the window sealed by epoxy, a draft found its way to the back of my neck and I caught a cold all the way down to my soft mesh (wet) shoes.

Early the next morning, after a three-box, double-Kleenex night, I phoned my friend, the doctor, at his home.

"Doc," I said, "you know those soft mesh shoes you told me to wear? I wore them and it rained on my soft mesh shoes and I caught a cold."

"I told you to wear them," he cried, "but I didn't tell you to wear them in the rain. Do you have a temperature?"

"Ninety-nine-point-one," I said. "I just took it."

"Was that orally?" he asked.

"Sure. Why? Did you want me to put it in writing?"

"Look," he said. "I'm in the middle of breakfast," (He was always eating.) "I'll be down as soon as I get through."

He came. He took my temperature. He looked at the thermometer.

"Ninety-nine-point-one," he announced.

"Thanks a lot, Doc," I said.

"I'll leave you some pills. Take this pill every four hours."

"The same one?" I asked.

"Look," he said, "I'm in the middle of a lot of sick patients." (He's always in the middle of something.) "You just stay in bed and drink hot drinks. And for heaven's sake, don't go near anybody. See you later."

I thought that over for awhile and decided I couldn't let him dismiss me that easily, so around noon I called his office.

"Doc," I said, "I'm sorry to bother you. Are you in the middle of lunch?"

"No, I'm just beginning lunch," he said.

"Oh, well, you know the hot drinks you told me to take?"

"What about it?"

"Well, I drank one and it upset my stomach."

"What hot drink did you have?"

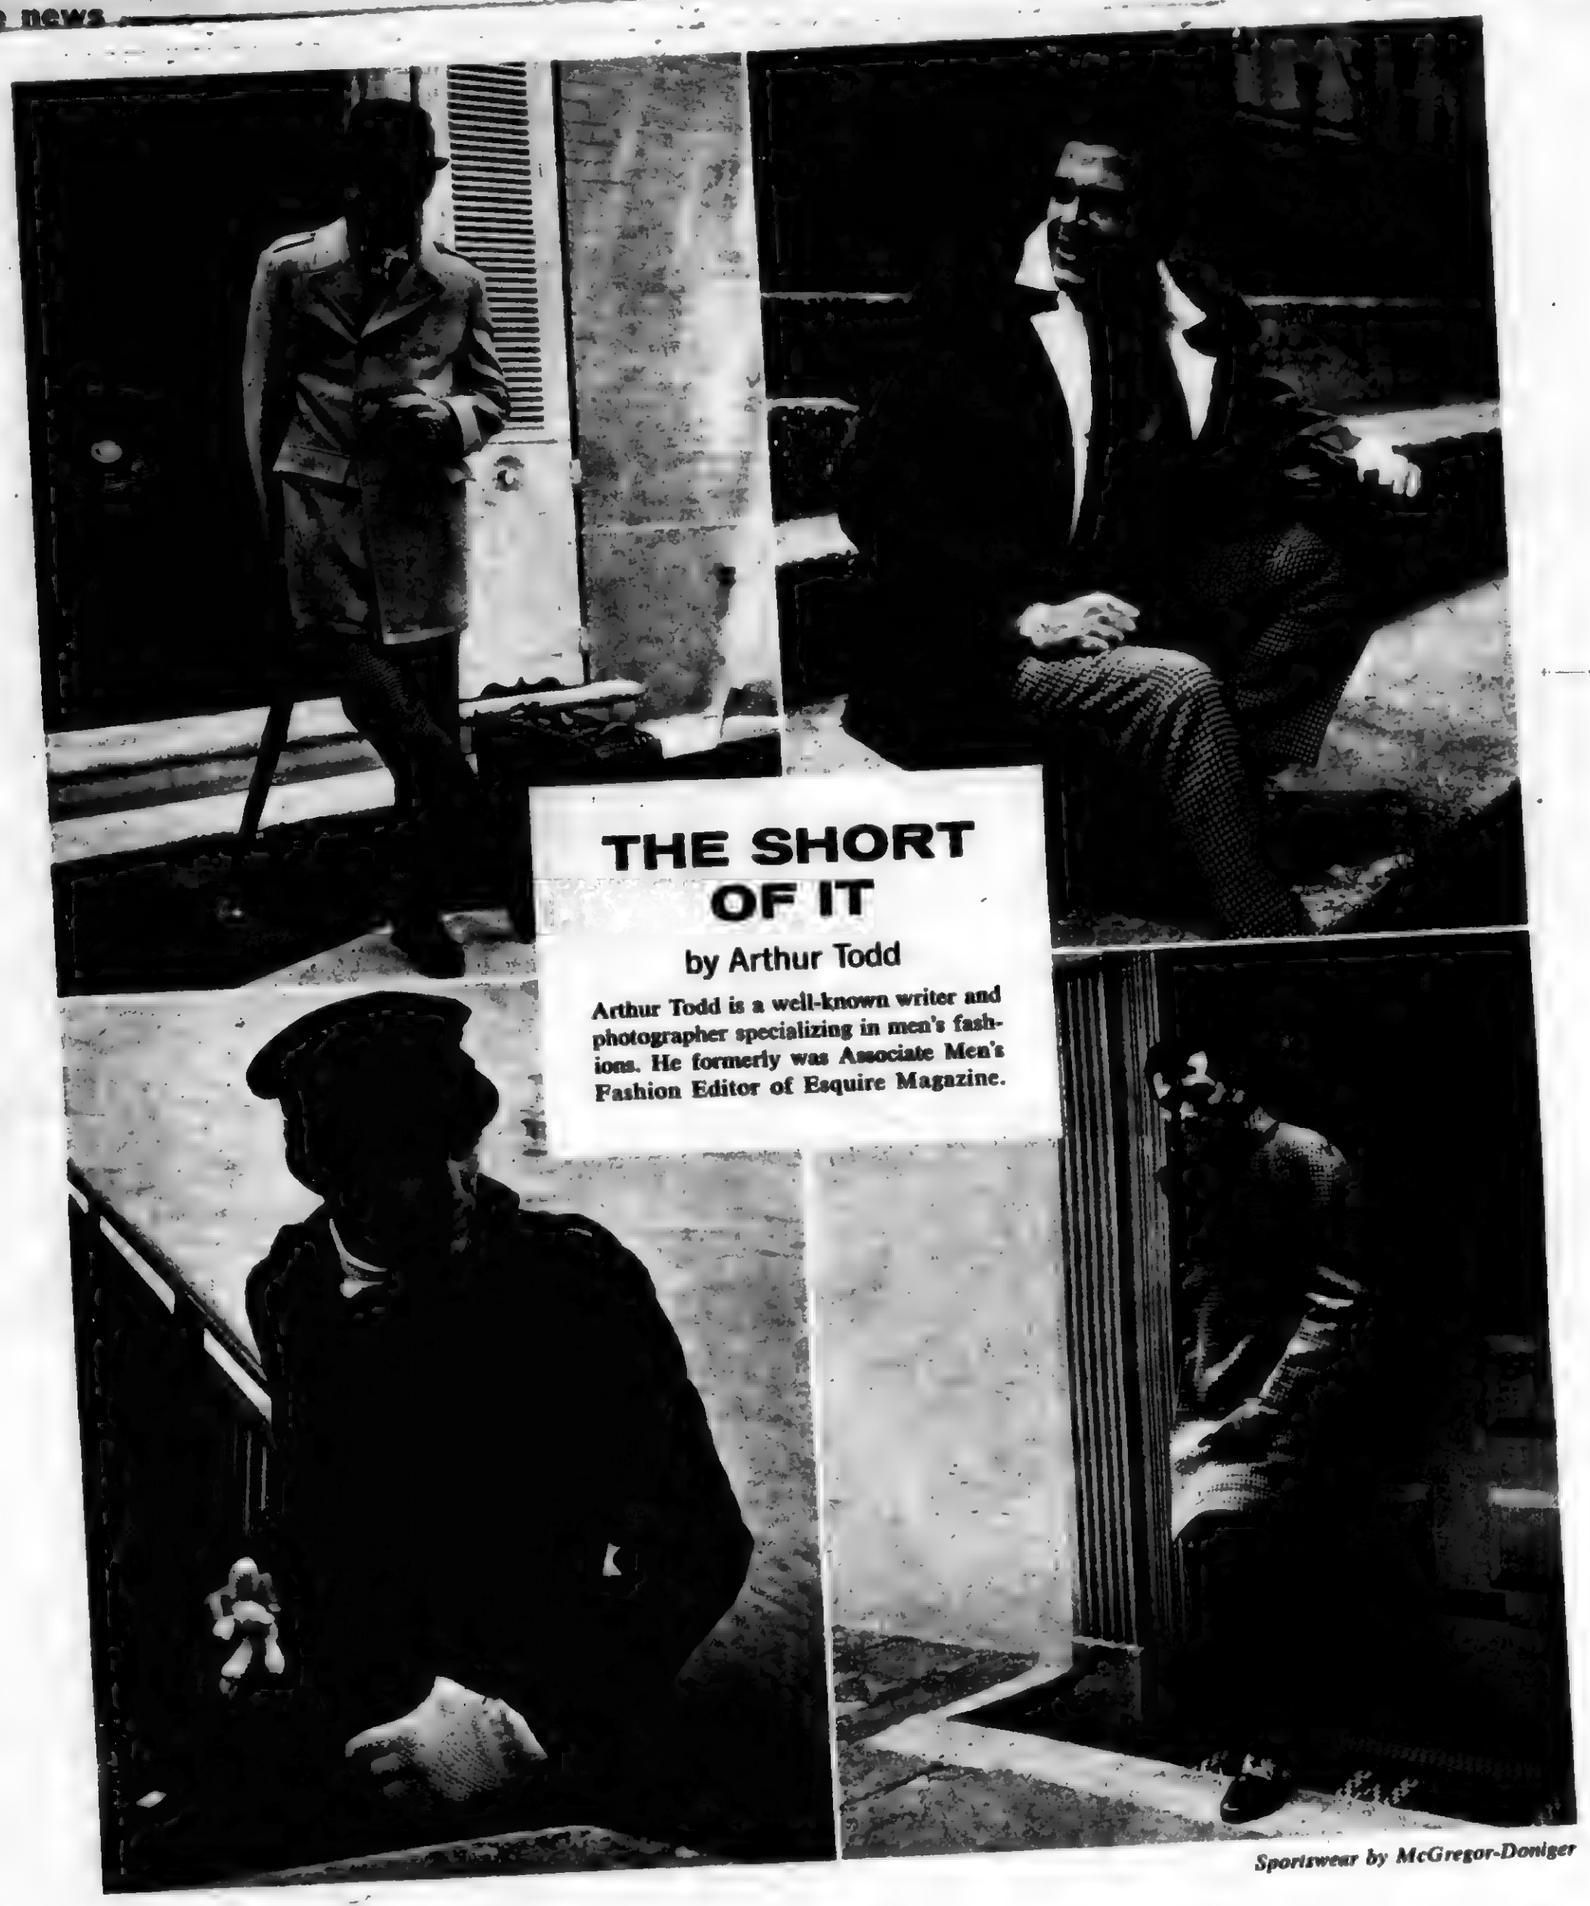
"Beer."

"Oh, for heaven's sake! You drank hot beer?"

"Well, warm, anyway."

There was an apoplectic silence. "Look," he said, "I want you to stay in one temperature—and no draft."

"Is that draft beer, Doc?"



He slammed down the phone. He's forever in the middle of eating something or slamming something. I think he's just about ready for Medicare himself. I know now why they say that a cold is an ailment that can be cured in one week with a doctor's care, and in seven days without it.

Well, that's the story. I can hardly wait for the Second Annual Blackout. I've already had Jane throw away all our candles, laid in a stock of flashlights and kerosene lanterns and rearranged the furniture so that no one, especially me, can trip over anything.

Goodman Ace wrote and starred in the radio classic "Easy Aces" with his wife, Jane. He currently writes "The Perry Como Show" and his by-lined column is a regular feature appearing in The Saturday Review.

THE SHORT OF IT

by Arthur Todd

Arthur Todd is a well-known writer and photographer specializing in men's fashions. He formerly was Associate Men's Fashion Editor of Esquire Magazine.

Sportswear by McGregor-Doniger

When London introduced brevity in men's coats and jackets, the American male was quick to accept the style. Could it be his answer to his girl's skimpskirt and mini-coat? Whatever the motivation, brevity is the soul of one of the new looks that is sweeping the country this season. It's a new dimension in sportswear, putting far greater emphasis on trim, slim trousers combined with country boots, making for a tall, lean look.

Short-cuts often have dual personalities. They are absolutely functional and allow for far more freedom of action. The four styles shown here are examples of what's new for cross-country walking or travel by sports car. But they have other lives to live. College men — and alumni — have decided upon the peajacket and the reversed sheepskin jacket for stadium wear. And these can double as ski clothes. On the other hand, the classic British Warm and the leather-buttoned checked tweed coat come to town in winter. Here is a glimpse of short-cuts on the men's sportswear fashion scene, 1966-67.

(Upper right) The International coat (32 inches) of reversed shearling lamb; worn over London turtleneck multi-color striped Orlon sweater.

(Lower left) Chelsea peajacket (30 inches) in wide wale corduroy; Orlon lined, double-breasted, with epaulets and deep side slash pockets.

(Lower right) District check tweed coat (34 inches) in tan/brown check; double-breasted, with leather buttons, Orlon lining, hacking side pockets.

the way to Your Man's Heart

by CHARLOTTE ADAMS

Author of several best-selling cookbooks and currently a consultant to leading food companies.

Those who complain that the pressure of housework kills some of the beauty in marriage will find no argument here. The complaint seems valid, especially when bolstered by daydreams peopled with upstairs and downstairs maids. But if facts must be faced, so must marital beauty be preserved. To that end we offer a recipe. Easily executed, it promises dinner for just two at the very best part of the day—after 5, at home, alone together. (Children? Well, just once in a while they would love to have a special outing at a friend's house, with their grandparents, anywhere without their parents. Promote it. You'll love it, too.)

The ingredients for the recipe are not unfamiliar, but they often are reserved for guests. Take the same ingredients, leave out the guests and find new magic, all your own. The basic requirements are You and Your Husband; candlelight; a warm and different-from-usual table setting, and a delicious dinner, cooked in advance (or frozen), ready to heat and serve.

Many will want to lead off with the special enchantment of cocktails in the living room in front of the fire. Because you have dressed for the occasion and, best of all, your dinner is all ready to serve, you are off to a marvelous evening.

To add a fillip to the cocktail hour, serve an appetizer that really is an appetizer—liver paté with toast, or smoked oysters, for instance. Then, while a fresh cocktail is in the making, slip into the kitchen to start your dinner reheating. This trip to the kitchen, plus the few minutes it takes to serve it, represents all the work you do this evening. Who needs servants? They only get in the way.

The success of your evenings hinges on organization and imagination. Both the table setting and the meal should receive full attention well before 5 o'clock, preferably sometime in the morning.

Your dining table sets the tone for the evening . . . so arrange a setting both exquisite and exciting. Candlelight, gleaming silver, elegant china and sparkling glassware are musts. The accents: the centerpiece, the accessories and the table linen.

These accents present the greatest challenge to your creativity and offer the greatest rewards. A delightful table setting adds luster to even the most perfect meal. Flowers, fruit, vegetables, or just green leaves can be arranged to make a lovely centerpiece. (An objet d'art, borrowed from another part of the house, can serve as a unique accessory, either in combination with or in place of a centerpiece.)

Your table linen offers the greatest opportunity to introduce a splash of mood-building color. If you have seen all of your linen too often, invest in a length of colorful fabric with which to cover your table top. Then, coordinate the napkins.

It is not necessary to serve a first course. However, if you decide to do so, make it simple. You might dress up a canned or dehydrated soup. For instance, mix canned pea soup with canned turtle soup, heat and film with whipped cream just before serving. That's an excellent boula. Or mix any shredded seafood into canned tomato soup and dilute with light cream instead of milk. You can ring a thousand changes with canned soup.

Your entrée might well take the form of a casserole. It can be prepared in the morning and refrigerated, or made days in advance and frozen. Be sure to use a casserole dish that will complement your silver and china. The best type is of enameled iron or other metal. They come in a variety of lovely colors and can be used equally well on top of the range or in the oven.

The British have long used a serving system in their country houses which fits exceedingly well into our pattern of gracious living today. The main-course dishes are placed on a buffet. And for this type of serving, an electric hot tray is one of the world's greatest inventions. Dinner plates can be heated on it before the casserole or other hot dish is placed there when dinner is served.

All that remains is the dessert—or, if you wish, a salad with cheese and crackers. Fruit, with or without cheese, also will do nicely. And don't overlook those packaged desserts. Many of them can be dressed up so that they seem like the products of a French chef. For instance, there's a new egg custard mix from which you can make a very presentable crème brûlée practically effortlessly. Or you might heat little shredded wheat biscuits in the oven and at the same time heat honey, which you pour over them in time to let it soak in well. Served sprinkled with nuts it's your own version of baklava.

The following two dishes are made to order for this, your night of nights. When accompanied by wine—the epitome of elegance and romance—these dishes are fit for any king, especially yours!

CHICKEN LIVER PATE

1 pound chicken livers
½ pound butter
1 tablespoon finely minced shallot or scallion
1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley
¼ cup cognac
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
Dash nutmeg

Fry the chicken livers in a little of the butter over medium heat 8 minutes, or until done. Put into blender with remaining ingredients and whirl until well mixed and smooth. Pack in a crock and refrigerate at least 24 hours. The remaining portion can be rechilled for later use.

SEAFOOD CURRY

½ pound fresh crabmeat
½ pound lobster meat
12 shrimp shelled, cleaned and cooked
4 teaspoons butter
¼ cup chopped onion
¼ teaspoon mashed garlic
1 teaspoon shredded fresh ginger root
2 teaspoons curry powder (or to taste)
¼ teaspoon brown sugar
4 teaspoons flour
⅔ cup chicken stock
⅔ cup plain yogurt

Melt butter in a casserole and in it fry the onion, garlic and ginger until golden. Add curry powder, sugar and flour and mix well. Add stock gradually, stirring constantly until thickened. Add yogurt. Add seafood and heat well, but do not boil. Cool, refrigerate. Reheat gently. Serve with rice, condiments and a green vegetable or salad.

THE MIND

Explore THE MIND for 10 days as a guest of the LIFE Science Library

In ancient rite, Mexican priestess prepares "magic mushrooms," called divine because they produce ecstatic visions.

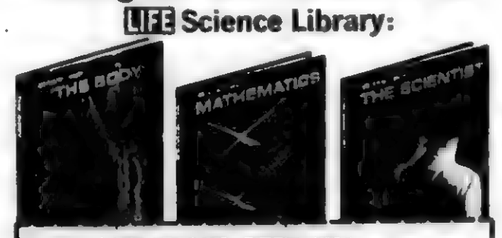
Ten billion "thought cells" are helping you to read this page. And, as your mind yields up its mysteries to science, those cells—which manufacture thoughts, dreams, sensations and feelings—have been tracked down. Those which generate damaging emotions and behavior are submitting to chemical control. Those which aid learning are being multiplied in their efficiency. The day of the super-mind may be dawning.

All the new facts and exciting implications in this field are presented in an extraordinary volume, THE MIND, prepared for the general reader by the Editors of the LIFE Science Library.

In THE MIND you'll see revolutionary teaching machines that assail all five senses at once—you'll consider alcoholism as a biochemical deficiency responsive to medication—you'll find intelligence tests to sample and you'll learn how they're constructed—you'll see the world the insane inhabit through the medium of their fantastic paintings—reproduced in stark color—you'll gain understanding from the brilliant photo-essay on the life and works of Sigmund Freud—you'll learn about "mind changing" drugs and see a witch doctor preparing "magic mushrooms" to induce holy visions—and you'll be amazed at the incredible teamwork of body and spirit required in the making of music.

This conquest of inner space, the mind, is even more exciting than our adventures in outer space. In the foreseeable future, we will be able to increase the mind's powers and correct its errors with scientific certainty.

To discover the scope of these findings, why not borrow a copy of THE MIND, without obligation? Let this excursion into self knowledge be your introduction to the LIFE Science Library.



Prepared with a unique combination of authority, clarity, and visual drama, THE MIND is typical of this exciting series designed to simplify, unify, organize and dramatize the whole fascinating world of science. Even if your knowledge of psychology extends scarcely beyond your ability to spell the word, you'll be caught up in a world of wonders.

In THE MIND, you'll learn about physical and chemical possibilities which make standard psychiatry seem pale. Brain chemistry is working new miracles every day. It has already largely replaced shock treatment for the disturbed, and has made some forms of brain surgery, such as prefrontal lobotomy, a thing of the past. Minute electrical charges promise the basis for a new therapy. Altering the current in the thalamus at the base of the brain can effect tremendous personality changes—even to the altering of sex.

EXAMINE IT FREE

These few words and pictures simply can't do justice to this achievement. That's why we want you to borrow a copy without obligation for 10 days. Then return it if you wish. Or keep it for less than you'd expect to pay for such a lavish book. In either case be sure your children see the book. This series holds a special fascination for people of all ages. Thanks to TIME-LIFE's vast facilities and large print orders, you pay only $3.95 (plus shipping and handling). Then you will be entitled to examine another volume free every two months. But you make no commitments, promise to buy nothing. COSTS RISING THREE PERCENT A YEAR

No Bargain Counter For Classrooms

Many a budget-conscious housewife has looked over a stack of linens that have about "had it" and said, "They'll have to do until the January white sales."

Similarly her husband may have kicked a balky power mower and said, "I'll worry with you until fall when I can pick up a bargain."

UNFORTUNATELY these money-saving delays don't work for taxpayers who are faced with the need of new schools.

A $2 million building planned in 1963 cost $48,000 more by 1964. By last year the tag would have jumped a total of $104,000 and if under construction today, still another $58,000 would be necessary to complete the same school.

NO ONE can guarantee any figure, but experts in the field predict a three percent rise in costs per year, at least through 1976.

These statistics and others are included in the most recent edition of "Product Information for Schools," a buyers' guide for schools and colleges.

The experiences of the Madison Local Board of Education spells out this inflation spiral in dollars and cents.

IN APRIL of 1964 bids were let for Asbury Elementary in Blacklick Estates. The cost per square foot was $11.84. A five-room addition was bid in at $13.46 in September, 1965.

This past June bids were opened for the Dunloe Elementary which is virtually a duplication of the Asbury site. By then, the lowest bids had hit $15.01 per square foot.

Only three months later, bids were again opened, this time for the elementary on the Herderick site known temporarily as Madison Elementary. Costs were a staggering $15.82, again for basically the same facilities provided at Asbury for $11.84 less than 30 months before.

WHY?

The Cost of Building Index developed from more than 100 government price and wage indexes uses the 1957-59 averages as a base figured at 100. It estimates over-all construction costs index to stand today at 118.2.

The study breaks down costs into three subdivisions — those of cost of materials, the cost of on-site labor and the cost of off-site labor.

ON-SITE LABOR has delivered the strongest punch to the taxpayer, with the index standing at 138.3. (Common labor alone flexed its muscles and shows a rise of 46.5 percent.)

Not far behind in the rise was off-site labor, which rose to an index of 134.2. (Transportation cost was a major factor in this rise.)

Building materials, on the other hand, remained relatively stable (only 100.4 in 1964) until the last two years when they began to climb.

NOW STANDING at 103.4, an increasingly discriminating eye is expected to be turned to use of materials.

Metal and plumbing products have led the rise with lumber and wood products close behind.

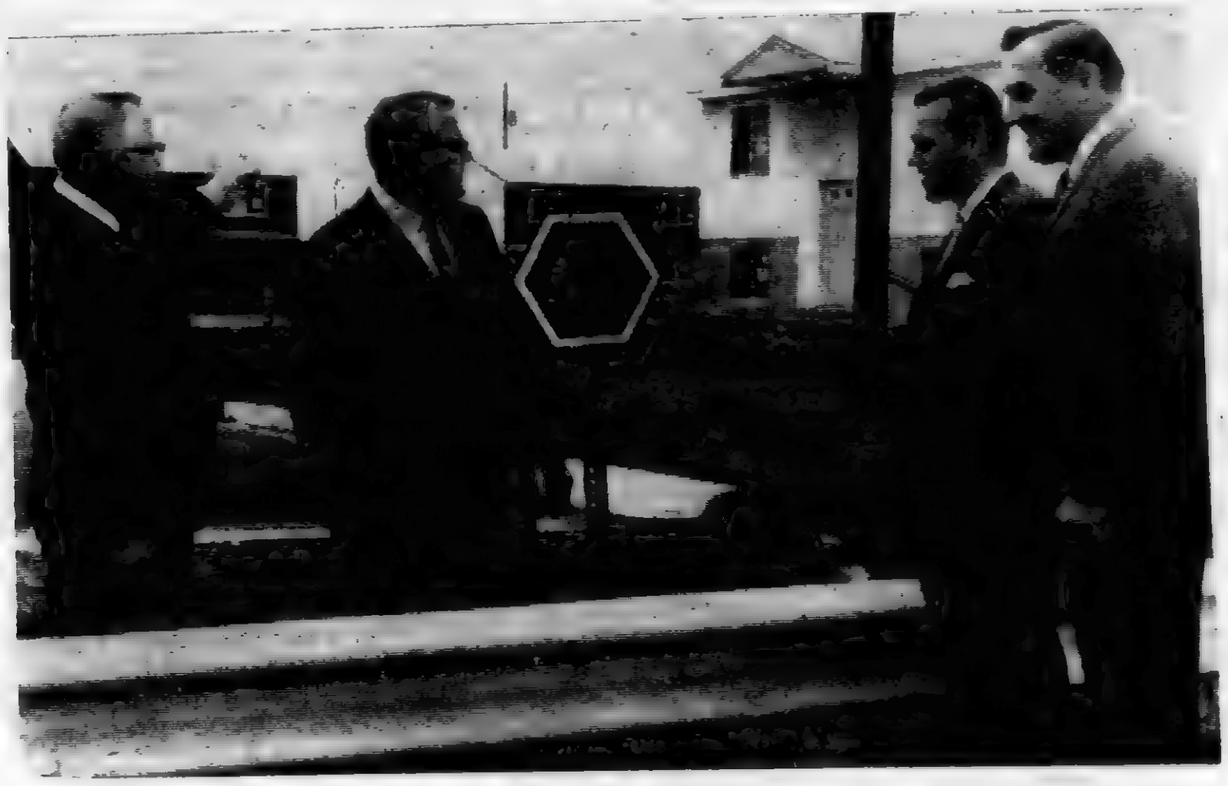
A fourth cost to be considered (not included in the index) is that of bond money.

INTEREST RATES are expected to hover around 3.7 percent for schools this year, compared to 3.27 in 1964.

With bond interest on a 20-year issue adding from 30 to 40 percent to construction costs, even a rise of a fraction of one percent is a major item in a school's construction budget.

The entire picture is an unpleasant one for the taxpayer.

AND SINCE there are no "seasonal buys" in the school construction set-up, the report in Product Information has only two tips.



The first is to "be choosy" in buying.

The second is pay now or be prepared to pay three percent for each year that construction is delayed.

OHIO'S LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

Columbus, Ohio, Wednesday, October 12, 1966 274-1155 10 Cents

THE BARRICADE THAT blocks off Champion Avenue from Southern Pines compounds the problems to be met by Hamilton administrators. Looking over the situation are, from the left, John Ruehling and Don Vansant, principals of the senior and junior high schools respectively; Clifford Elliott, Central principal, and John Savel, Hamilton superintendent. According to information available from the Court House and Regional Planning, the owner of the property, Allen McDowell currently has the legal right to erect a $175 barrier (the reported cost of present one) or any other at the site. However, there are steps that can be taken to invalidate this right.

Barricade Adds To Hamilton's Problems

John Savel, Hamilton Local's new superintendent, is expecting problems the first of the month—130 of them to be exact.

And by the first of the year he expects these problems to be almost doubled.

THESE PROBLEMS will come big, small and middle-sized, but they will all have something in common.

They are the children from the 109 families expected to move into the Southern Pines subdivision, section seven and eight.

These homes, many nearing completion, border North and South Higbee-dr and Allison-dr, approximately five lots east of Ohio-av.

SINCE THESE houses, on the average, are less than 1,000 yards from Columbus' Cedarwood Elementary school which serves the subdivision, Savel was once unconcerned about the new housing.

That is, he was unconcerned until, through a casual conversation with representatives of Virginia Homes (builders of the area), he learned the children from this particular area are "his baby."

The area, consisting of slightly less than 25 acres, was annexed by Columbus around the first of the year.

HOWEVER, the municipal annexation did not remove the land from the Hamilton School District. (Such action requiring a separate move carried out only by the request of another school district and approved by the State Board of Education.)

According to the builders, 65 homes have already been purchased and will be ready for occupancy by the first of the month.

A survey shows that each family moving in has an average of two school-age children. It is expected the same ratio will hold for the 44 additional families expected in the area shortly after the first of the year.

THIS PROBLEM to the Hamilton School District, the weight of which Savel must tussle, is actually two-fold.

First, and of prime importance, where is he going to house 200 or more extra students? Since they would fill about seven classrooms he doesn't have (church area is

Rezoning Asked For SE Site

A request for rezoning of 293 acres on the north side of Williams-rd west of Ricart Ford will be heard by the Franklin County Rural Zoning Board at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 20, at the Court House.

Roy and Mary Tuggle have asked that the property, now zoned residential and agricultural be changed to light manufacturing district.

THE PETITION states it may be used for a drive-in theater.

It is a well-known fact that a corporation currently operating several drive-in theaters in the metropolitan area has been seeking for some time to find a suitable location south of the city, and this site fills that criterion.

A spokesman at the zoning board refused to believe there is any reason to think the drive-in would be constructed with the intention of converting it to a more lucrative business later on.

"A DRIVE-IN represents a considerable investment today," it was explained, "and most large operators are pretty permanently established."

Defeat Jail Levy

The Spectator Newspapers urge Franklin County voters to reject the proposed tax levy being asked by county commissioners for construction of a new county jail.

These newspapers do not pretend to ignore the need for a new jail. It is, rather, the method of getting the facility that is questioned.

For years, the city and the county have talked about a joint office building that would include, presumably, such facilities as a jail. There is no question that this is the ideal and, in fact, the only feasible solution to the problem of housing the growing number of government workers.

But this summer, two riots rocked the county jail and panicked Sheriff Stacy Hall and the commissioners.

Public resentment over the riots undoubtedly had much to do with the quick decision to place the jail levy on the Nov. 8 ballot.

The Spectator feels the county is acting in haste without giving due consideration to the practicalities of the situation.

Neither Franklin County nor the city of Columbus can afford to go on bickering with each other and ignoring the obvious benefits of building a joint office-service complete in the downtown area.

This newspaper urges county voters to reject the jail levy on Nov. 8 and then to pressure both the city and county into working together for the good of Central Ohio.

The Right Way

Residents of Whitehall's Country Club Village have launched a self-help drive that could serve as a guiding light for all of the county's deteriorating areas.

Country Club Village is a 12-year-old development that has threatened to turn into a slum. Whitehall Mayor Paul Haytcher calls it a "danger area" but regardless of the name given it, the area is in deep trouble.

The picture is frightening. In the midst of pleasant suburban surroundings, Country Club Village sticks out like a sore thumb. Yards and driveways are piled high with discarded appliances and furniture. Junk cars are everywhere. Grass in some places grows knee high.

A group of village residents, "sick and tired," in their words, of the downhill slide of their neighborhood, banded together to plan a clean-up campaign that begins Saturday. Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts pitched in to spread the word. The city of Whitehall has promised its full cooperation.

The Spectator feels that this is the ideal way to deal with neighborhood problems—not through government handouts but through a concerted self-help drive in the trouble area.

Residents of Columbus' other declining areas would do well to take note of the Country Club Village program.

Time To Shine

Columbus gets its yearly chance to crow beginning today.

The Columbus Day U.S.A. festival, which begins today, throws the national spotlight on the largest city in the world named for the famed explorer.

Chairman Stu Jones and his volunteer staff have put together the biggest celebration to date. It's a chance for our city to preen its feathers in public.

The Spectator wishes the committee nothing but the best. This city deserves nothing but the best.

Frustrations

BY TED BEARDSHEAR
Spectator Staff Writer

Everyday life is filled with small frustrations that can literally bug the dickens out of a person.

Take for instance the process of shaving. Every morning I face the mirror to begin the ritual. But no matter how careful I am with the aerosol can, I always manage to get enough cream to shave three people.

Not being wasteful, I always shave twice. That usually makes me late for breakfast. Which in turn makes it a real push to get to work on time.

BEARDSHEAR

So much for frustration number one.

A second case in point is the coffee machine. It doesn't like me. If I stand there and stare it down, it delivers the goods. If, however, I turn my head to talk to someone, the machine will very handily upset that cup and let the coffee run down the drain.

Usually, when I am walking toward an intersection I wish to cross, the "Walk" sign will be on in all its lovely green-ness. However, as soon as I take the first step off the curb, "Don't Walk" will flare up in ugly red.

Waitresses always sense when I'm not in a hurry. They are sure to be attentive and swift. If, however, I have 12 minutes and 37 seconds in which to gulp lunch, they usually don't see me until the first 10 minutes have elapsed.

But the crowning frustration had to do with my old friend, the subject of more than one of my writings, my television.

I conked out on Monday evening just as the new shows were being premiered.

Asks Support

To The Editor:

Tonight our city will be added to the growing list of cities which provide their residents with an opportunity to witness the world's fastest and most exciting sport, hockey. The Schmelzer brothers deserve our gratitude for affording the citizens of central Ohio this opportunity.

Mere lip service is insufficient evidence of our appreciation. This community should take an active, rather than passive, course of action and support the Columbus Checkers during the coming season. The team and management need the support of each and every sports fan; in return, a person attending the game will be rewarded with fast action, excitement and many thrills.

One of the local sportswriters wrote that the citizens of central Ohio stand to lose nothing; only the owners of the new hockey club stand to lose. In my opinion, this could not be further from the truth. If the new hockey club fails, it will be due to a lack of support by the fans.

When Columbus was awarded a hockey franchise, it was assumed that the people of this area possessed the civic pride and responsibility necessary to provide a successful operation. Failure of the Columbus Checkers can only mean this assumption was incorrect.

Let's begin acting like a "big city." The mere fact that Columbus is one of the fastest growing areas in the country does not automatically qualify it as a "big city." The city must ACT like one and there is no better way than supporting the Columbus Checkers during the coming hockey season.

Peter N. Cope

I thank you.

WHITE

WASHINGTON — Those who have so long sown the winds of reverse racism and reverse intolerance are now reaping the whirlwind all across this country. A civil rights crisis of entirely new form now in consequence confronts the United States.

One by one primary elections of recent weeks have returned, from North and South alike, the same ugly story. A white majority endlessly bludgeoned by lawless "demonstrations" seeking not to persuade by reason but to blackmail by fear, in the honored name of civil rights, is turning now to an extremism of its own.

Make no mistake about it: A white "backlash" now whips this land, and put in the gravest of peril are all the years of earnest effort by patient and reasonable men to resolve this tragic racial issue in fairness, in responsibility and in common sense.

While one of the most liberal of all states on this issue, California, is again torn by riot and looting, ballot count after ballot count punishes and destroys those moderate politicians who have done so much to bring rational and workable order to this vastly complex national problem. The latest of these to fall is Ellis Arnall, the former Governor of Georgia; but he is neither the third nor yet the fourth, nor will he be the last.

Arnall's defeat in the Georgia Democratic gubernatorial primary by the arch-segregationist Lester Maddox is in a sense the saddest of all in this still-lengthening tale of emotionalism running wild and violent and putting reason to rout. For Georgia had long been in the vanguard of those Southern states which had tried in honor and in honesty to bring Negro civil rights forward without at the same time condoning Negro civil wrongs. And Arnall and those who supported him, including the best of the press in Georgia, typified and embodied this courageous, this memorably necessary effort.

It is not easy from afar to be absolutely flat in one's explanations of what has happened in Georgia and why. But this columnist feels, after a casual but open-eared visit to the state just completed, that one factor in Arnall's defeat can scarcely be in doubt. If Stokely Carmichael of the oddly misnamed Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee did not contribute immeasurably to Maddox's dangerous victory here, then one political writer is ready to turn in his commentator's card.

And it is not alone the Carmichaels, the shouters for "black power" and the apologists for an enemy cause in Viet Nam, who must bear today a frightful responsibility for what is happening in this country. No less it is those doctrinaire white ultra-liberals who have long used the civil rights movement not for attainable and just reform but rather as a whip to beat something called "the South" which in their hearts they do not merely deplore but actually despise and hate. For at least 10 years this has been a bottom reality; and now the bill for this irrational venom is being presented.

The whirlwind has at last come; and the number of those patient men who have heretofore been willing again and again to pick up the pieces and try anew for fairness and order has tragically dwindled now. This is the pass to which we have been brought.

barry goldwater ★ Goldwater Blasts McNamara ★

GOLDWATER

The world's worst secretary of defense, Robert Strange McNamara, has suddenly jolted himself out of the peaceful slumber that has lasted throughout his disastrous term of office. He has at long, long last awakened to the fact that the United States, whose defense he is sworn to uphold, needs some new fighting aircraft.

In mid-September it was announced that we had lost more than 500 planes in Viet Nam. A few months before that, testimony before congressional committees clearly indicated our air losses had cut so deeply that the Tactical Air Command could not adequately perform its mission if called on for any new emergency.

And years before that, while McNamara was busy worrying about installing computers to handle paper work, military men were pleading with him that men, not computers, fight battles and that some of these men, being pilots, needed new planes in which to ply their trade. It was particularly pointed out to the secretary that tactical aircraft, even old-fashioned propeller craft, are essential items in fighting the sort of counter-insurgency wars which communism openly has declared on us.

The secretary snoozed on, and the planes did not get built.

At the same time he was told repeatedly that we needed more helicopters for these counter-insurgency emergencies. The secretary scarcely blinked, and his long nap away from reality went on blissfully undisturbed.

Some months ago he shyly admitted that he had, for all his brillance, been wrong in not ordering helicopters when his professional military advisers had urged him to do so.

And now, once again way past due, he says he has shifted some $700 million in military funds for other new aircraft we need. Altogether he wants 280 more planes than planned in fiscal 1968.

Not only is McNamara too late with his decision, but his reasoning is equally faulty. Although his budget figures the Viet Nam war to end by June 30, 1967, (he has one of Washington's more weird crystal balls) it would be wise to prepare for fighting beyond that, he says.

As he has been for years, the secretary is totally ignorant of our preparedness needs. He justifies this plane order on the basis of actual fighting but his job calls for providing this nation with the weapons to protect itself no matter what the eventuality.

His ruthless cutback of efforts to prepare for a military role in space is a prime example. His reluctant and tardy efforts to keep up our strength in manned aircraft is just another in an ever-growing list.

When you vote this year you might remember that a vote for anyone who supports this administration is a vote, also, for the worst secretary of defense we've ever had.

marquis childs ★ Romney For President? ★

CHILDS

LANSING, Mich.—You can hear in this capital of the motor state the stirring of great events to come. Preparation for the Presidential campaign of Governor George Romney has no official sanction from the governor, himself, who is spending most of his time on the stump aiming to roll up a whopping majority in re-election to a third term.

For a proper launching Romney must win with a majority of 400,000 or more. Preferably he must pull in with him Robert P. Griffin, who is running for the seat to which he was appointed by Romney on the death of the Democrat, 72-year-old Pat McNamara. In almost every talk he makes the Governor plugs Griffin, who is little known around the state.

How can Romney hope to get the Republican nomination when most of the state and county chairmen and the delegates to the convention are conservatives regarding Romney as a defector for withholding endorsement of Barry Goldwater two years ago? The answer of his backers is, first, that millions of rank-and-file Republicans want to prevent a repetition of 1964 when the right took over and nominated Goldwater. They want a winner and Romney can convince them he is their man.

He will do this by going into the early primaries in 1968 confident that he can beat Nixon. If Nixon decides to stay out that will be proof that he does not believe in his own vote-getting ability. It will revive the two-time loser image.

The first primary, New Hampshire, is made to order for their man, as the Romney planners see it. A dinner meeting in that state drew 1,500, and 400 stayed behind to shake his hand, many of them urging him to run for President. Asked about New Hampshire's sweepstakes law he said it was immoral to use that kind of money to advance education.

Foremost in the calculation is the man himself. He sheds some of the same aura as Dwight Eisenhower with whom he keeps in close touch. He expresses the yearning of so many people for the simple virtues of another time. As one of his cynical newspaper admirers puts it: "You can't be sure what he's said after you've heard one of those stemwinders on morality and the home. But, boy, the way he says it!"

That dubious word charisma, the personal magic of leadership, is part of it. So are his own discipline and drive, the dedication that owes not a little to his Mormon faith. He believes in his own capacity to carry through, his own star, his destiny. This is part of the spell of the handsome, rugged-looking individual who took over in Michigan when the state was on the verge of bankruptcy. A constant throughout his career in politics is civil rights. But at the same time in typical Romney style he declares for law and order.

So much can happen in the 20 months before the delegates meet in what often seems an exercise in national lunacy to pick a candidate. Ronald Reagan can become Governor of California and the way-out Goldwaterites push him for the Presidency. Nixon comes in as the compromise between Romney and Reagan.

But if calculations here are correct the will to pick a winner will triumph and the man whom the unionists deride as "Gorgeous George" will step confidently into the Presidential arena.

Acton Urges Amendments Requiring Annual Sessions

Democratic senatorial candidate J. Michael Acton of Lancaster has come out in support of a constitutional amendment requiring annual sessions of the Ohio General Assembly.

Acton, campaigning in the new 17th District, told the Ohio Association of Public School Employes that with biannual sessions "There just isn't enough time to consider all legislation."

"Much legislation," he added, "is enacted at the tail end of each session without due consideration.

"Our problems in education, highway safety and taxation cannot wait for months and months for a legislative session" Acton said.

"Because these sessions are held only every two years, many problems which we as a state could be solving in our own way are neglected and as a result, the federal government steps in and attempts to solve problems which we could be handling ourselves," he said.

THE WOMEN OF Wing 50 of Nightingale Cottage are geared this time of year to "Think Pecan" and as they mull over the candy and cookie section of a cook book, Mrs. Jim Lockett and Mrs. Pete Spurlock of Groveport find the recipes "as nutty at a fruit cake."

Let's Do A Double Good Deed

By JANE ROBINSON

Spectator Staff Writer

Buying a pound (or two or three) of pecans from Nightingale Cottage Wing 50 will serve as a good deed for two days.

The day you order them, you can give yourself a little pat on the back for going all out to make your holiday cooking "just a little bit better" with the help of the Georgia imports.

AND THE DAY they are delivered you can enjoy the glow that goes with knowing you have given a child the help he needs.

All the proceeds of the annual pre-Christmas sale of pecans goes to the convalescent home (on Brice Road) for children from infancy up to 14 years of age.

The work of the Wings is a major source of income for the non-profit organization as it does not receive financial support from United Appeal.

ORDERS MAY be placed with any of the following members: Jane Babbit, 836-5383; Sally Baker, 836-3682; Mary Campbell, 836-3216; Alice Chappell, 235-8014; Viola Eisnaugle, 836-3491; Ellen High, 837-7677; Mildred Kalb, 837-4927, and Marjory Knipe, 836-5879.

A SERIOUS MATTER

GETTING ON THE outside of that super-deluxe sausage-pork-sauerkraut dinner to be held for the benefit of the South Side YMCA next Wednesday, Oct. 19, is a man-sized job. Realizing this, Kim Robinson of Canal Winchester decided it best she go into training for the annual event, knowing one should take full advantage of a feast such as this one. Lunch will be served from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and the "kraut's on" cry will be heard again from 4:30 to 7 p.m. Adult tickets are $1.50 and those for children under 12 a bargain at half-price. Either are available from members of the co-sponsoring YICA and Mothers Clubs or by calling the 'Y' office, 444-2151.

Barricade—

already being leased) this is a critical matter.

Secondly, these 200 children mean at least three busloads twice a day with a transportation system already sorely taxed.

FURTHERMORE, the existence of a metal barrier about 50 feet long is serving to compound the complexity of the situation.

The barrier blocks entrance to the subdivision from Champion Avenue and is placed across a narrow reserve retained by Allen McDowell who platted the property north of Southern Pines a number of years ago.

This barricade adds, Savel states, three miles to the route his buses must travel to transport the children from the subdivision.

INSTEAD OF taking the most direct route which would involve using Lockbourne-rd and cutting over to Champion, the buses will be forced to enter Southern Pines from Parsons Avenue.

This is a matter of concern to Savel and not just because of the additional mileage. A safety factor is involved.

Entrance from the west to reach the extreme southeast section of the subdivision means winding along the roads used by the children en route to the walk-in elementary, Cedarwood.

SAVEL IS working on the coming problems, confident they can be met and/or circumvented, but he's frank to admit that he's not exactly rooting for Virginia Homes to get ahead on its construction schedule.

Red Cross Blood Center Does Life-Giving Work

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of articles written exclusively for the South Side and Southeast Rural-Urban Spectators by volunteer United Appeal writer Mrs. James Durban, 1390 Studer-av.)

How many citizens of Columbus and Franklin County have ever visited the Red Cross Blood Center at 995 E. Broadst?

Too few, for sure. Yet how frequently the need for blood arises in our hospitals — daily for many individuals, and for numerous reasons — operations, rare diseases, automobile accidents.

This service is made possible by contributions to the United Appeal Campaign, Oct. 6 to Nov. 3.

To set the record straight about this vital community service: Red Cross makes no charge for blood itself. Hospital technical charges for testing and matching the blood, and its administration, are made by the hospital.

To ease the cost of blood collection and distribution, a plan has been worked out by which a patient who is expected to require blood can give evidence of prior eligibility or provide that two pints be donated in his name. This reduces his cost and helps to eliminate the constant critical shortage of blood.

To establish prior eligibility (which can be done at any time and is always to your credit in an emergency) a person must prove that he has been a blood donor within the past 12 months; been a member of a "participating group" such as a business, industry, church, etc., in which 20 percent of the members donate each year; donated two or more gallons of blood to the Central Ohio Red Cross blood program; been a resident of an area where the Red Cross Chapter is meeting its annual blood collection quota; or has been a member of the immediate family of any of the above.

Because the number of volunteers working with the Franklin County Red Cross blood center has been adequate, the local center has one of the lower cost per unit operations in the country.

Franklin County Red Cross spends $6.77 to collect, process and distribute one pint of blood. Last year the Center received more than half its annual budget from United Appeal funds.

If you haven't been a blood donor yourself because of ill health or fear of the unknown, you can investigate the chance of establishing your prior eligibility now by calling the Blood Center, 253-7981.

The whole process involved takes little time and you are surrounded by trained personnel and volunteers who make your experience a real pleasure.

Far greater than this pleasure, however, is the satisfaction of knowing that your gift of blood may save a life.

LET'S KNIT A Square Neck Shell

BY URSULA DuBOIS

Flattering to young and old is this fast-to-fashion shell modeled by television actress Brenda Scott.

Depending on the yarn with which it is knit, it is suitable for either beach, daytime or evening wear.

To allow wider choice in yarn, instructions are given in two gauges, one for mohair and the second for flat yarns such as a worsted. (Cost for the former is estimated at $8 and that for a worsted, $3.50)

The instructions also include a pattern for a V-neck as well as for the square line shown. For those who may want to use leftover yarns, instructions are given for a striped shell. The shell features a slight pattern stitch at the bottom which may be eliminated by the timid.

Illustrated instructions for Shell No. 27 may be had by mailing 50 cents in coin, check or money order to Ursula DuBois, Spectator Newspaper, 2465 W. Broad-st, Columbus 4. The instructions are given for sizes 8 through 18 in all patterns.

Many knitters inquire why knitted patterns are not written in half sizes.

The "half-sizer" has nothing to worry about, as such can be fashioned from the regular patterns.

The difference lies mainly in the measurement from the underarm to the waist. If the garment is a dress, one can merely knit one inch less than the instructions call for from underarm to waist. Better yet, the garment can be knitted one-half inch less than your actual measurements from waist to underarm. (The garment will pull down that half-inch in blocking).

It should be remembered that certain yarns such as nylon or orlon block out more than wool. It is for this reason that knitting a swatch-piece and steaming it before measuring the gauge is essential.

KENNEDY GREETS OHIO DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

SEN. ROBERT F. KENNEDY of New York poses with Ohio Democratic candidates at a reception at the Maramor sponsored by the Shamansky for Congress Committee. Kennedy, second from left, was in Columbus to attend the reception and speak to a Democratic fund-raising dinner at the Fairgrounds. With him are, from left: 15th District congressional candidate Robert L. Van Heyde; Shamansky campaign manager Bob Nelson; Robert N. Shamansky, Democratic congressional candidate in the 12th District; Mrs. Frazier Reams, wife of the gubernatorial candidate; and Reams.

Kennedy Stumps For Democrats

By BOB WHITMAN
Spectator Staff Writer

U.S. Senator Robert F. Kennedy of New York flew into Columbus Saturday to lend a sturdy hand and strong voice in support of Frazier Reams, Jr. for the governor's seat and Robert Shamansky and Robert Van Heyde for congressional berths.

The popular brother of the late president told a 2,000-seat, $50-a-plate fund-raising gathering at the Lausche Building that the election of Democrats to these offices "was necessary in order to keep America moving" and that to vote Republican "if they wanted to support stagnation and drift."

KENNEDY spent nearly six hours in the Capital City stopping off at a meeting of the East Central Community Organization (ECCO), a local anti-poverty group before attending a reception at the Maramor that preceded the banquet.

The reception was sponsored by the 'Shamansky-for-Congress' committee and the Senator spoke briefly to the several hundred gathered and then made the rounds around the room.

IT WAS because of Shamansky's work in behalf of the late President John F. Kennedy that New York's junior senator came to speak for the Shamansky and the area Democratic candidates.

All along the street as the motorcade made its way down Broad into the downtown area, bands of people stood on the corners straining for a look at the senator as he passed in a convertible with Reams and Columbus Mayor Jack Sensenbrenner.

AND IN opening the banquet at the Lausche Building he quipped that is was his brother that said "Columbus is the only city in America where I get the warmest reception and the fewest votes." He added that he was here tonight to get some of the votes for the men he supported.

Later in his speech he rapped racial violence by saying that "riots and disorders are not the answers to racial equality in the United States."

He also spoke for controls on nuclear proliferation "for the sake of all the peoples of the world and more especially for the children of mankind."

Kennedy mentioned that "I have a younger brother running around somewhere who will speak in Ohio later this month."

MAYBE WOODY HAYES CAN'T USE THEM, BUT

IT'S HALF-TIME for the advertising teams of the South East Lions Club that are out to break records and earn themselves the title of "All-American." It's not touchdowns they seek, but the sale of ads for their annual "Lion's Roar," the publication that supports their year-round efforts to prove they are "The Club That Gets Things Done" and makes the South Side a better place to live. With 28,000 copies of the pre-Christmas newspaper proclaiming the story of the work of the Lions, the 15 teams claim they will punt, pass or run to get those ads. At the kick-off ceremonies were, pictured from the left, Mike Milcusnich, President Jack Woodworth, ad co-chairman Howard Hoermle, Frank DeFranco, John Hoermle, Hank Lewis and ad co-chairman Walter Carlisle.

AND SO IT GROWS..

Don't let such perennial weeds as dandelions, mouse-ear chickweed, ground ivy, and narrow and broadleaf plantain get carried away in your lawn. Treat your lawn with a broadleaf weed killer containing Silvex now. Get the job done before mid-October, since you'll have more complete control by applying it when the weather is fairly mild.

If weeds are still growing three weeks after you've made the application, spray again. Don't make applications to newly-seeded lawns or ones not mown more than twice.

Pastor Of Church To Move

Evangelist J. Bernard Mason, pastor of the Reynoldsburg Church of Christ for the past seven years, has accepted an invitation to serve the W. Fifth Street Church of Christ in Marysville, Ohio.

The Masons plan to move from their home at 1661 Graham-rd the latter part of October. Since his arrival in Reynoldsburg Rev. Mason has seen the congregation grow from an attendance of 30 to over 200.

BESIDES doing church work the Masons have also been active in community affairs. Both their children are graduates of Reynoldsburg High School. Rev. Mason and his wife, Helen, will reside at 208 W. Fourth-st, in Marysville.

Evangelist Donald Cooper of Mansfield will assume the pastorate of the Reynoldsburg Church of Christ next summer.

TAKING his place until this time will be Rev. David Lavender of Columbus, a former missionary in Italy.

B'NAI B'RITH MENU INCLUDES ALAN ABEL BRAND OF SATIRE

By JANE ROBINSON
Spectator Staff Writer

Alan Abel had one of the toughest shows of his life to follow Sunday when he spoke before members of the B'nai B'rith Zion Lodge No. 62, gathered for the installation of officers.

The affection felt for Allan Tarshish as he received the A Sanford I. Lakin Award was a very tangible thing and again before Abel ever took the floor, the emotions of the audience had been stirred by the account of his family's World War II escape from Europe, by the new president A. C. Strip.

YET, WHEN Abel began to speak, the members were crashed back to earth from the loyalties of long friendships and the pathos and tragedy of a war-torn world to the funnier side of the life we live today.

Abel told them straightfacedly, with the delivery of an old con man, of how he promoted the cause of SINA (Society for Indecency of Animals), the organization dedicated to clothe the poor indecently naked animals of the world.

Recalling the lengths he had gone to "keep the crackpots" out of the organization, his tireless efforts to promote the slogan "Decency today means morality tomorrow," he made it all the more believable by admitting to a few mercenary goals.

Stating that he was merely carrying out the wishes of a slightly befuddled philanthropist, he stated it wasn't bad work for $10,000 a year and expenses helping dispel the belief that the whole thing was incredible.

A RATHER GRAND old man drank in every round of applause drawn by his son Alan Abel when the latter was the after-dinner speaker at the Agudas Achim Synagogue Sunday night. And the best part of it all was that Louis Abel, 4430 Josephus-ln felt that his son was Will Rogers, Shelley Berman and Groucho Marx all wrapped up in one package.

But actually the whole thing was incredible — his spoof which he had perpetrated purely for the fun of it (he figured it a less expensive hobby than drinking); his spoof which drew up to 1,000 telephone calls an hour to a recorder hooked up to a telephone in a broom closet; his spoof which at least forever alienated one woman because her offer of $40,000 was refused; the spoof from which gigantic corporations cringed in horror at the thought of a group of eccentrics leading animals in britches and bikinis.

THE ENTIRE story is told in the "Great American Hoax," the book which was reviewed in The Spectator several weeks ago.

But only after meeting Abel and seeing the polish of his delivery can you actually see how he got away with it.

Although he has at last given up the pretense, he can't help but feel that he has had the last laugh on the gullible news media which at first embraced him as "good copy" and then abandoned him as everything from a nut to a perpetrator of fraud. (He is far from either").

THEY SWALLOWED it for almost three years, and during that time not a single reporter had the good sense or good luck to stick by that impressive looking broom closet door (to which all trails led) past the bewitching hour of 8 p.m.

If they had, they would have met the scrub woman retrieving mops and pails and the hoax would have been over.

WHAT a scoop that would have been for a cub!

After all, even Walter Kronkite had bought the story.

INDIANS EYE FIRST WIN VS. VISITING L-U FRIDAY

Still seeking their first victory of the season Friday when Liberty Union arrives for Mid-State play will be Canal Winchester's Indians. Preparing for a switch in direction this week have been Winchester backs (picture at left), shown above with head coach Bob Blais. C-W backs include (standing, from left): fullback Dave Cook, wingback Mark Craig and tailback Chris Hanners. Kneeling is quarterback Gary Kemmerling. Up front strength this fall has been evidenced in these C-W linemen (picture at right). Kneeling (from left) are: guard Keith Babbert, guard John Sayre, center John Basbagill and tackle Jim Wynkoop. Back row: end Greg Abbott, tackle Dave Fullen and end Bill Miles. (Photos by Jack Wittenmeier).

Cruisers vs Lions In Mid-Eight Clash

By JACK WITTENMEIER
Spectator Staff Writer

It isn't exactly "familiarity breeds contempt." It's more like, "let's beat the home town renegades."

Whichever way you like it, Gahanna grid coach George Troutman isn't looking for any "welcome home" banners draped between the goal posts Friday when he marches his Lions into Groveport.

GAHANNA MAY be where George conducts business but Groveport is where the Lion mentor hangs his hat although the latter patronage hasn't brought any favors each fall.

"Groveport always gives us a hard way to go," claims Troutman, pointing out a narrow 6-0 escape last fall while the Lions were enroute to a Mid-Eight title share.

Not only does George reside in Groveport but so does assistant coach Ed Reary with ex-Cruiser mentor Pete Nix—also a Gahanna helper this fall.

"THEY'VE BEEN hobbled by injuries all season," continued Troutman of Groveport. "But they've got some good size and if they get everybody healthy for us, we've got some trouble."

"They've got a taste of victory now (Cruisers downed Mifflin last weekend, 22-12) and this will be the first time this season our defense has had to deal with an 'I' offense," Troutman concluded.

Top Lion concerns, according to Gahanna mentor will be halfback Ralph Stout ("a real gritty ball player) and quarterback Pete Marinello ("a real good little scamper").

THE LIONS could be without back Al Strickling Friday (flu) but the Gahanna offense has been bolstered by the return of halfback Ron Doran (five carries for 71 yards vs. Marysville) with running mate Doug Young (eight carries for 43 yards) also looking good.

Overall, Gahanna outgained the Monarchs (419, 396 rushing, to 96, 55 passing) with Marysville completing only three of 14 attempts and getting one pilfered.

Troutman also pointed to the fact that his Lions did not have to punt for the second straight week. "And us with a 41-yard punter (Young)," the Lion coach quipped.

ONE ITEM failed to brighten Troutman's Friday evening—five fumbles, even though the Lions grabbed them all right back.

Troutman listed quarterback Mike Kane, middle guard Kerry Shadwick and defensive end Charlie Freeman on his "back pat" list.

Good news for Groveport fans should be just the opposite for Gahanna folks.

CRUISER MENTOR Bill McCann reports his club in the best physical strength since Groveport's opener.

"Everybody's back except Bill Marshall (head bump) and Bob Miklos (bad back) and they should be ready by Friday," McCann reported happily.

The Cruisers piled up a 309 (256 rushing)—207 (201 rushing) advantage on Mifflin Friday with quarterback Marinello hitting on five of seven passing attempts.

McCANN praised the efforts of Dave Richie, Rod McKinster, Ronnie Miller, Don Stokes and Marinello on offense and Ralph Stout, Donnie Miller, Larry Stinson, Dick Scott and Jeff Nelle defensively.

McCann sees Gahanna's basic belly-T offense (with split ends and slot backs) as "more versatile than last year.

"They can pass well but usually do only when they have to, and that hasn't been too often this season," McCann added.

THE CRUISER coach rates Gahanna's fullback-halfback combination as most potent with off-tackle slants, sweeps and traps the Lions' forte.

Asked about the Lions' fine pass defense, McCann said: "The biggest quality of their present pass defense is that front line's good rush on the passer."

McCann expects to see a 6-2, 7-1 or 4-4 defensive alignment from the Lions Friday.

IN OTHER area games this weekend. Liberty Union (4-1) visits Canal Winchester (0-3-1) and Carroll (2-3) travels to Pickerington (1-4) in Mid-State action.

Elsewhere, Teays Valley (1-4) heads for Franklin Heights (3-2), and Reynoldsburg (3-2) hosts Pleasant View (2-3) in Metro League play.

THE SPECTATOR SPORTS

Look Forward . . . Look Spectator

ROESE CUTBACK — Teays Valley quarterback Bruce Roese added a few extra yards on this first-down gallop Friday vs. Pleasant View by changing directions and eluding would-be Panther tackler Bob Betosky. P-V won anyway, 34-6.

Fearless Predictions

Consistency if not improvement, marked the "Fearless One's' predictin' average again this week as the forecaster showed an 18-5 docket (77-37 on seasonal basis).

Here's the outlook for this week:

HARTLEY AT WORTHINGTON — Coward's way was just to flip coin. Hartley.

LIBERTY UNION AT CANAL WINCHESTER — Hosts just too strong. L-U.

EAST AT CANTON McKINLEY — Tigers having their troubles this fall. Canton.

BEXLEY AT GRANDVIEW — Another dandy with another title likely headed for the winner. Bexley . . . by a nose.

CENTRAL AT WHETSTONE — If Rutan's back, Braves; otherwise, I don't know. Try . . . Whetstone.

GAHANNA AT GROVEPORT — Cruisers always seem to get up for this one but Lions just too strong. Gahanna.

NEW ALBANY AT DUBLIN — Irish have four straight but Eagles should stay unbeaten. New Albany.

BROOKHAVEN AT WALNUT RIDGE —Could go either way but Bearcats seem to have found themselves. B-H.

ACADEMY AT CENTERBURG—Viking schedule not getting any easier but . . . Academy.

WHITEHALL AT HAMILTON TOWNSHIP — Rams much better than record would show. Whitehall.

LINDEN AT EASTMOOR — Both clubs know the importance of this one. Comparative scores are no help. By less than a nose . . . Eastmoor.

PLEASANT VIEW AT REYNOLDSBURG — Logical spot for Panther upset but edge still to Raiders. Reynoldsburg.

TEAYS VALLEY AT FRANKLIN HEIGHTS — Falcons and less slid. F-H.

NORTH AT MARION-FRANKLIN—Devils gearing for stretch run. M-F.

HILLIARD AT LONDON — Sink or swim situation. Winner here assumes Mid-Eight favorite role. We'll try . . . Hilliard.

WEST AT SOUTH — I gotta feelin' I'm gonna live to regret this one but . . . South.

XENIA WOODROW WILSON AT WEST JEFFERSON — Hard to knock success. West Jeff.

WESTERVILLE AT GROVE CITY — Wildcats smarting from two close setbacks, figure to be real angry. Westerville.

DESALES AT ARLINGTON — Bears wearin' schedule blinders and would hate to lose homecoming. Arlington.

SATURDAY

CARROLL AT PICKERINGTON — Visitors should be hungry. Carroll.

READY AT WATTERSON — Knight defense still tough but not tough enough. Watterson.

LITERALLY FORMING a carpet of tomatoes, the unstaked plant put in last spring by Carl Hooffstetter has spread over an area equivalent to a nine by 12 carpet. If you can't believe the fantastic number of fruit this wonder hybrid, which puts to shame Jack's beanstalk, has borne, just take a trip down to the Hooffstetter home south of the Asbury Church on old 33, a little north of Canal Winchester.

Steve Allen Should Call This Man

Carl Hooffstetter has had a secret lately that's been hard to keep.

But he realized "telling" could besmirch his reputation as a truthful man.

AND WHO wants to be labeled a liar for the first time at the age of 82?

So until this week he has been quiet as a church mouse about a certain tomato plant in his back yard.

One day he went out to his tomato patch and, after looking it over, could scarcely believe his eyes.

WHEN HE reported what he had seen to his daughter, she promptly decided her father was seeing double — at least.

She changed her mind when she, too, took a look.

Together they called a neighbor to verify what they had found.

Even with a neighbor to back them up, they were hesitant to spread around the story of what they saw.

AFTER ALL, how many people would swallow it if you told them you had 440 (that's no misprint—we mean four-hundred forty) tomatoes growing on a single vine?

A check with Ohio State University indicated that very few would, as around two hundred is the previous record.

Hooffstetters overly-ambitious Valiant had an inauspicious start this summer.

The veteran farmer who's turned to "just-for-fun-and-the-freezer" gardening in his retirement years usually puts in three tomato plants.

LATE THIS spring he mentioned to Dr. Walter Peer of Canal Winchester that he had not gotten around to his "spring planting."

Peer offered him a handful of plants, apologizing for their spindliness (they had been slightly frost-bitten) and expressing the doubt they were worth the effort of putting into the ground.

A month later Hooffstetter was inclined to agree with him.

Even with tender, loving care, they refused to grow one iota.

AND THEN one morning he noticed they had literally "shot up over night."

From that day on there was no stopping them, although only "old 440" is a record breaker.

Clean, flameless electric dryers cost less to maintain.

Go flameless...put on a happy face!

Most people already know that electric dryers cost less to buy and install. But did you know that an electric dryer continues to save you money year after year? That's a fact. Take maintenance, for instance. Flameless electric dryers have approximately 15 fewer working parts to break down or wear out. This means fewer service calls and longer life for your electric dryer. Another thing, electricity is 100% efficient. And your flameless electric dryer uses only clean, flameless electricity for energy. It's easy to see why every day, more and more people give more reasons for going electric.

All indications point to a record-breaking deer season in Ohio this year.

Weather forecasters are sticking their necks out by predicting an early winter and our five-day deer season is back in December where it should be.

THE ROADKILL in 1966 is a whopping 36 percent over last year and our biggest fatality year to date.

Even though the five-day period is set for bucks only, it is estimated that our deer herd is more healthy than at any other time in modern history. The only barometer to the size of our herd is the highway mortality rate. By using these figures, the novice deer hunter may plan his trips into country that has the biggest population of bucks.

PAUGH

During the first six months of 1966, there were 361 deer killed on Ohio's highways. The top ten counties were: Trumbull (44), Ashtabula (36), Williams (25), Washington (20), Hocking (14), Meigs (12), Tuscarawas (12), Lucas (12), Athens (11), and Mahoning (11).

BY STUDYING the map of Ohio, a pattern of deer to auto ratio can be figured out. Williams and Lucas counties are in the Northwest Zone where special permits are needed — signed in advance by the landowner where you wish to hunt. This excludes all but a privileged few hunters.

Ashtabula, Trumbull and Mahoning counties occupy the extreme northeast corner of the state and involve an average of two more hours of travel to get to the hunting areas.

Tuscarawas is a good hour away and by itself in the top ten. The biggest (and to this writer, the best) area of success should be the four county block of Hocking, Athens, Meigs and Washington.

FURTHER STUDY of the amount of traffic in each county indicates to me that the 20 deer killed in Washington County were done in by a lesser number of cars on the highway, signifying that the deer are denser there than anywhere else in Ohio.

Traditionally, the Northeastern counties come up with the greatest hunter success figures and that will probably be true this year but this is because there are a great many more hunters taking to the fields than in southeastern Ohio.

With Cleveland, Akron and Youngstown all feeding hunters into that corner of the Lake country, the herd is more completely hunted than in the hilly, sparsely driven counties to the south.

YOU MAY approach the deer season in two separate ways. First, you may buy your license and go out cold on the opening day, depending wholly on the "luck of the hunt" to put the venison on your table.

Secondly, you may get out there now and scout around for tracks, half eaten apples and busy waterholes.

Using the second system, you are getting many times more outdoor action for your money, getting a good bit of exercise and clean air and the thrill of the hunt.

LONGBOW season opens Oct. 15 (dawn to dark except during the gun season) and remains open until Dec. 31.

The same hunting license and deer permit will allow you to bow hunt and gun hunt but you may take only one deer each year, not matter what you use. During the gun season, all deer checking stations will be manned — you must register you kill before dark of the day you kill it.

Otherwise, you may be fined for transporting an illegal deer —even if you observed all the rules while hunting it.

RPC Predicts 24 Madison Buildings

Madison Local Board of Education has been accused of "thinking big" in predicting future growth.

However, the soothsayers who are preparing, with help of Regional Planning, Groveport's master plan, make the local board look quite conservative.

PHIL WILLIAMS, Madison superintendent, reported to his board this week that the planners anticipate an eventual need of 16 elementary schools, three junior highs and two senior highs.

(Presently one senior high, one junior high and four elementaries are in operation with two more elementaries under construction. Options are also held on three sites and a fourth site is platted as a school reserve.

The consultants indicated that early consideration should be given to sites in Amberly, near Munk's Corner, and in southwest Groveport and that additional acreage be obtained to allow future expansion at Brice.

AMBERLY presents no site problem, as a school reserve is already platted and the board has long been aware of the need of acreage at Brice and Munk's Corners.

However, the recommendation for a second site in southwest Groveport is another matter.

With Groveport Elementary already in existence and an option held on the Ohde site near the swimming pool, the board had believed elementaries in Groveport proper would be adequate.

THE DISCREPANCY in viewpoint comes from the RPC stand that the Groveport elementary will eventually be taken over by the high school.

The board is reluctant to proceed on this premise as the combined area would accommodate about 2,000 students, a figure double what members consider ideal for a senior high.

Another problem wrestled with by the Madison Board when it met this week is the one of priorities for the use of the balance of the building fund. (Funds not yet earmarked include the windfall of $50,000 interest earned by short-term investment of bond monies otherwise idle until construction projects are complete.)

ATTENTION was again given the critical need for central office facilities.

With bids for a 3300 square foot block building with slab foundation coming to what is considered a fantastically high price, several alternatives are being weighed.

They include purchase of a house and converting it to office space, purchase of a building that would not require remodeling, renting office space in a commercial office building or construction of a wing at the northeast corner of the junior high.

WILLIAMS reported to the board that enrollment as of Oct. 1 of this year is 3,557, a gain of 475 students over the like 1965 tally. This represents a gain of 15.4 percent.

Groveport Plan Draws Fire

If success of the meeting to which the Groveport Planning and Zoning Commission invited area business people last week to acquaint them with the village's master plan can be judged by the response, it must be called a "flop."

A mere handful, including old faithfuls such as Jim Young, Kermit Alspaugh and Dick Hamler, showed up.

AND THOSE who did appear seemed less than thrilled with the maps, showing the suggested development of the area.

Alspaugh was perhaps the most kind in his appraisal of the meeting. "I think it was good to put it before the public eye, and I am confident that something can eventually be worked out," said the local realtor.

The fact that the plan shows residential devolopment to the southwest of the village in the area near Saltzgaber Road went against the thinking of Jim Young, developer and proprietor of the Big City Garden Center.

HE BELIEVES that Groveport should not attempt to annex property which it cannot service with utilities and he sees it a foregone conclusion that Columbus sewers will serve this area between Walnut Creek and Rt. 665.

Similarly he questions the feasibility of Groveport planning including areas to the north near Blacklick Estates.

'I thought it had been determined ages ago that the land across 33 was of little concern to us," he said.

ON THE OTHER hand, he believes the acreage west of Groveport (this side of Canal Winchester) cut off from Columbus sewers is one that Groveport could provide with utilities and a "natural" for annexation. (The planners preparing the report have ignored this area for development, allegedly it is "blighted" by the flight patterns used by craft from Lockbourne AFB.

Young also takes exception to the proposal that Rt. 665 bypass the village.

"I admit it makes for motorist convenience," he said, "but the village needs the business," he stressed.

HE SUGGESTS as an alternate that Rt. 665 which now dead ends into Groveport-pk be brought down the pike to College Street which he would like to see widened into a four lane highway.

"This would mean obtaining additional right-of-way to a depth of one lot on both the east and west. I have a house on College which I'd be willing to donate to the village for progress."

From the recent howls of protest from residents when they learned the street was to be widened four feet, it is doubtful many would share Young's views on the matter.

CHUCK TAYLOR, the planner with Turner and Associates which under the auspices of Regional Planning has prepared the plan, indicated it demands the support of the people of Groveport—support given freely without consideration of personal gain.

With the plan due for completion by the end of the year, Mayor Bob Baer believes it important that the village revamp its zoning ordinance to conform with county zoning and adopt a subdivision ordinance while Taylor is still available to advise the village.

He also feels it imperative that a plan be made for capital improvement which will anticipate the problem of sewers and water that will be needed in the next 10 or 15 years.

ANOTHER PART of the planning of which Young is critical is the statement the community should have one home to every five acres.

Bob Thiel To Head H-Meadows Civic Group

The slate of officers headed by Bob Thiel, running for president, was elected by the Hamilton Meadows Civic Association last week.

Others elected were J. Bell, vice-president; George Robinson, secretary, and William Brazil, treasurer.

Although only about 40 were present to vote, a number of the members were represented by absentee ballots.

Saturday, Oct. 29, was designated by the Association as Beggars Night in the Meadows, and a committee of parents named to form a "protective patrol" while the children are out "tricking or treating."

The group also expressed concern over the prolonged closing of Lockbourne Road because of sewer construction just north of the Walnut Creek bridge. Traffic has been detoured since early September, but contractors have indicated the thoroughfare will be reopened in about a week.

It was announced that the new Hamilton Meadows directory will be distributed without charge by the Association to every resident of the community within the next 30 days. A spokesman explained that adults rather than children will make the door-to-door delivery this year to insure that every household receives one.

The next meeting is scheduled on election night, Tuesday, Nov. 8. At that time the winner of the $100 cash prize to be awarded in connection with the recreation fund drive will be announced.

Grebus Challenges Local Youth To Enter $25,000 Essay Contest

Youth in the area have been challenged by the Groveport Lions Club to develop a plan for World Peace.

According to President Bernie Grebus, meeting this challenge can earn one young man or woman a $25,000 education or career assistance grant.

The Peace Essay contest is open to anyone at least 14 years old who will not have reached his 22nd birthday by Jan. 15, 1967.

The essay, presenting a formula for world peace, must not exceed 5,000 words in length. Art work is not to be included and it will be judged 75 percent on content, 10 percent on organization, 10 percent on style and five percent on the mechanics of grammatical construction.

The contest, sponsored by 20,000 Lions Clubs throughout the world with membership of more than 800,000, is a progressive one starting at the club level, advancing first to the district, then the multiple district and to the eight world geographical divisions.

Each winner in the last mentioned division will receive a $1,000 cash prize and travel expense-paid trip to the 50th anniversary convention in Chicago next summer. At the International Convention, the grand winner will be announced.

Closing date for the contest is Dec. 10. "We want to alert our youth to the need for world peace and focus attention on that important goal," Grebus said, as he urged local youth to accept the challenge.

Complete details and entry blanks can be obtained from any Groveport Lion or by phoning Grebus at 836-3709.

Southeast Women Invited To Tea For Senate Hopeful

MICHAEL ACTON

Invitations to attend a tea for J. Michael Acton, candidate for state senator from the 17th district, have been sent to Reynoldsburg-area women.

The tea, sponsored by the Acton for Senate Committee, will be Monday from 1-3 p.m. at Haft's Restaurant, 6887 Main-st, Reynoldsburg.

Ralph V. Thomen, chairman of the committee, announced that women not receiving invitations are also welcome to attend.

C-W Board Sets Up Rigid Tutorial Policy

It's not going to be a "snap" to earn credit through a tutor in Canal Winchester.

The question concerning the validity of credit earned outside the classroom has resulted in the Canal Winchester School Board's establishment of a policy on the matter.

A MAXIMUM of two such units may be counted toward graduation, unless under special circumstances, the administration recommends consideration of additional credit. (The policy does not concern school-sponsored home instruction).

The tutor shall be properly certificated by the Ohio State Department of Education and must have the approval of the school principal.

A STUDENT must meet with his tutor at least 40 hours with assignments making his work load at least 120 hours. The tutor is responsible for submitting to the principal a record of the work covered and an additional report on the quality of the student's work.

The policy is not retroactive, and units of credit earned before adoption of the current policy may be counted toward graduation. However, anyone who already has two such units is not eligible for further tutoring towards graduation credit.

IN ADDITION to discussion of the upcoming bond issue (the Board learned that the construction proposal has received the unanimous endorsement of the local Lions Club) groundwork was laid for an adult education program at the October meeting.

Questionnaires are slated to go out next week to determine the extent of interest in seven classes which largely fall into the category of "enrichment" courses.

Sunday, June 4, has been set for both baccalaureate and commencement services for the class of 1967. Baccalaureate begins at 2 p.m. and commencement begins at 8 p.m. It is believed the new procedure will prove a convenience to out-of-town guests.

The eighth grade graduation has been scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday, June 2.

Comment And Criticism

editorials . . .

'No' For The Market

Councilman Ronald DeVore's absurd plan to put Central Market back on that valuable 4th and Town corner comes up before Columbus voters Nov. 8 and The Spectator firmly urges a "no" vote on the proposition.

This newspaper fought for removal of the market six months ago when it was learned the market was holding up re-development of the area.

DeVore lost his fight to save the old eyesore. Now he wants the taxpayers to foot the bill for a new market—not a modern structure to blend with the awakening Market-Mohawk area but a provincial-style building that will turn into an eyesore itself inside of 10 years.

Old Central Market merchants by now have found new berths in North Market, moved out toward the suburbs or gone out of business. There is simply no need for a Central Market anymore.

The Spectator urges a 'no' vote on the market proposal Nov. 8. A 'no' vote in this case is a vote for progress.

'Yes' For The Kids

Franklin County voters will be asked Nov. 8 to approve renewal of a .3-mill levy for education and training of the area's retarded children.

The money obtained from this small levy is used to finance the Franklin County Retarded Children's School program and other programs aimed at easing the tragedy of mental retardation.

An energetic citizens' committee headed by Dr. Clyde Schoenfeld of 918 Varsity-dr and Mrs. Wilbur Crist of 239 Fairway-bl is working hard to obtain renewal of this much-needed levy.

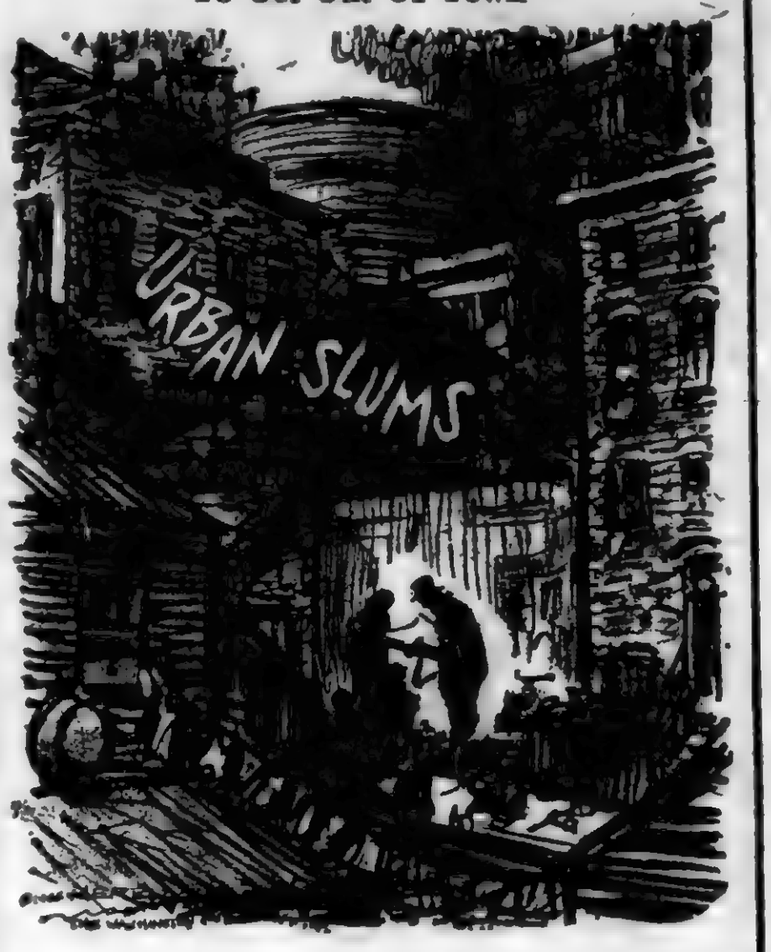
The Spectator Newspapers urge voters in Franklin County to consider those less fortunate than themselves and vote 'yes' on Nov. 8 on the retarded children levy renewal.

Voice To Trust

The Spectator Newspapers in the forthcoming weeks before Nov. 8 will take positions on various candidacies and issues before the voters of the areas they serve.

These endorsements will be made in an honest attempt to help voters make wise use of their franchise. It is all too easy to run down the list and vote for all candidates of a particular party. In a sense, this is endorsing the party's selection rather than making an individual choice.

The Spectator Newspapers urge selective voting. If you are not personally acquainted with the candidates and the issues, accept the judgment of someone you know you can trust.



The endorsements which will appear on these pages will be an honest effort to aid the voters and to convince our readers that The Spectator Newspapers are independent voices that can be trusted.

Black Bags

Candidates who are currently displaying their vigor as "men on the go" on billboards and literature would inspire more public trust if they would forego the use of one particular prop.

No voter wants to see a politician advertise the fact that he carries a small black bag.

"It Says Here Congress Is Anxious To Get Out Of Town"

Wolf's Clothing

By ROBERT BURDOCK
Editor and Publisher

BURDOCK

It's no secret that U.S. Congressman Sam Devine (R-12th Dist.) is the political darling of a prominent Columbus banking and publishing family.

And now that Franklin County is going to have two congressmen, instead of just one, it is only natural that the same power establishment would throw its considerable support behind one of the candidates for the new congressional district.

It would seem logical due to the steadfast Republican leanings of the power structure that this support would be for a conservative Republican of Devine's political stripe. Right?

Wrong!

The Republican candidate for congress from the new 15th (Western) district is Chalmers P. Wylie, like Devine, a conservative. The Democratic candidate is Robert Van Heyde, a political moderate.

But the fund raising party held recently at the family citadel on Journal Island at Buckeye Lake was for Democrat Van Heyde, not for Republican Wylie. This sudden bi-partisan display can hardly be considered altruistic.

The "guests," some of them reluctantly, donated $500. The host was reportedly far more generous.

Any citizen has the right to support whomever he pleases for political office. And the voters have a right to know whose harness their horse is pulling.

It's just as difficult sometimes to differentiate between a wolf in sheep's clothing as it is a lamb in a wolf's shirt.

They Said It

"Kentucky citizens are taking quickly to the concept of mail-order law enforcement, Kentucky State Police report. Post Office Box No. 10, Frankfort, Ky., is an address used by State Police since last December to which citizens may report crimes and remain anonymous. Since that time 140 letters have been received, State Police Director Col. James E. Bassett says. Thirteen arrests resulted from the first 50 letters received.

Get The Broom

To The Editor:

For many years I have known how to use a broom. There didn't seem to be anything that was too degrading about this operation. And, in the intervening years I have seen many men perform this same operation.

Now my point is this . . . why in the name of good common sense is it such a terrible thing for the crew on a wrecker to use a broom after they have pulled cars (or trucks) over to the side?

You see broken glass every day throughout this town and you as a motorist are required to drive through it, after which you must have a tire repaired or replaced.

Mathematically, it certainly would seem feasible that a company which indulges in the removal of said "wrecks" could be (and should be) required to sweep away the debris. The cost of a broom is $1.59 — the cost of towing is from $5 on up.

Seeks Answers

To The Editor:

It was a pleasure to listen to Open Mike on a local radio station on Oct. 6. There were a few provocative questions that I do not feel were answered with complete candor.

I believe the donating public has a right to know the answers to these questions and the ramifications thereof.

Is South Side Settlement House or any of its staff members associated with radical groups and if so, will United Appeal continue to support them?

Does Goodwill Industries advertise for non-handicapped employes while presenting an image or needing United Appeal funds to expand so it can accommodate more handicapped individuals. If so, will United Appeal continue to support this agency?

GOLDWATER

This administration at last admits that defoliation is not a dirty word. Not only that; it now says major defoliation efforts actually are under way in Viet Nam.

To read the papers you get the idea that the use of chemical sprays to kill jungle foliage, stripping the leaf and vine cover from Communist supply and attack routes is perfectly routine. Defoliation is precisely that —a routine military technique in such areas as Viet Nam.

But during the Presidential campaign, as many will recall, defoliation became a pretty hot issue when, in the course of an interview, I pointed out that defoliation was one way to get at hidden Viet Cong trails in the jungles.

Thanks to the sort of reporting that became all too familiar in certain segments of the press during the campaign, the interview was flatly and absolutely distorted to say that I was advocating the use of nuclear weapons in Viet Nam.

The administration and its supporters took up the hue and cry and turned "defoliation" into one of those scare words that makes national debate impossible during a political campaign.

While this scare word was being used to frighten voters, however, there is now reason to believe that actual chemical defoliation was being carried out in limited areas even then.

The same thing happened in regard to bombing. While I was being denounced by Mr. Johnson for wanting to step up our air war, and while he was giving the impression that he would never permit bombing of North Viet Nam, our planes were dropping bombs on northern targets.

Today's defoliation in Viet Nam is accepted as so routine that it scarcely makes the front page, and photographs of defoliation runs, showing our planes spraying wide swaths of chemicals across jungle areas, are just another pictorial part of the Viet Nam coverage.

This is as it should be. But the past distortions of defoliation were altogether wrong and do no credit to this administration. Even worse is the possibility that the administration's efforts to use defoliation as a weapon agains Republicans rather than against the enemy in Viet Nam may have resulted in a slowdown that will have to be paid for, not in votes, but in American lives. The question is whether, in the period between the election and now, this administration slowed defoliation efforts just to protect its political points.

Anyone who has become familiar with this administration's manipulation of facts can be pardoned for wondering about this latest item.

WHITE

The more one looks at it and the more one talks to the savviest professionals in both parties the more it looks that the Congressional elections of next month are going to turn up hardly more than a standoff in numerical terms.

There is simply no perceptible national trend one way or the other, but for the fact of life that a party in power historically loses at least some ground in non-Presidential years and will almost certainly do so this time. It is, of course, a firm bet that the present two-to-one Democratic majority in the House of Representatives will be reduced — but not, so far as detached reckoning can see, by very much.

This Congressional campaign, indeed, is a strange one. Against all form, for example, neither the Republicans nor the Democrats in private really see any strong or wide public reaction simply against Congressional "ins" — whether these ins be Republicans or Democrats. Nor does either set of managers, again in private candor, discern any truly sharp issue anywhere on the horizon, with the important possible exception of the white backlash.

Experienced ear-to-the-ground travelers in both parties, for illustration, call the Viet Nam War a so-so issue at best. The inflation issue tends to favor the Republicans but only somewhat vaguely, they find. For if food prices are surely higher and if housewife discontent is surely present, all this is somewhat offset by the collateral truth that the average husband is making more money than he ever did. If more dollars are going out, more also are coming in.

The backlash is totally real but here again no clear forecast of its net effect can realistically be made. The reason is that backlash is by its nature a spotty thing, rather like a series of small tornadoes in the spring-time. If this were a Presidential year, with the whole country voting at once, it would undoubtedly hurt the President materially, if only because the Democratic party has taken the more advanced position on civil rights. But what it will do in 400-odd separated and hedgehog-like Congressional districts is any man's guess.

To be sure, the Democrats did extremely well in Congress in 1964 with Lyndon Johnson at the head of the ticket; but it must be recalled that their Congressional fellows had already done well in 1962. And it must be stated, moreover, that 1964 was a year that saw the nomination of a totally unelectable G.O.P. Presidential candidate, Barry Goldwater, and of the most savage division within the party at every level since the era of Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft.

★ Wonderful World of Governor Rhodes ★

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a three-part series on the administration of Gov. James A. Rhodes, written by Abe Zaidan, editor of the WRFD Commentator. It is reprinted from the Oct. 6 issue of The Reporter magazine).

When Governor James A. Rhodes revealed his plans last January to seek re-election this fall, reporters and other onlookers who keep a close watch on the career of Ohio's chief executive were not the least bit surprised that he had chosen to run for what appears to be a certain second term. It was only how he broke the news that they might not have anticipated.

First, the governor phoned the 15-year-old son of a Teamsters boss in Toledo to announce his candidacy. Next, his office released a perfunctory one-paragraph statement that made it official. Then he declined to talk to newsmen about it. It was pure Rhodesiana—the sort of thing people have come to expect from the 57-year-old Republican governor since he swept into office in 1962 with the biggest majority ever amassed by an Ohio gubernatorial candidate.

But why the son of a Teamsters official? Well, according to the startled lad, he had written to the governor to inquire about his intentions. But it also might be noted that a few weeks earlier, the Toledo local had been the first group to endorse the governor's re-election at a dinner honoring Rhodes.

The Wall Street Journal, after sending a man out to size up Rhodes, appraised him as "one of the nation's most unorthodox political figures." That he is. Probably no other politician is more of an enigma to his own party, more exasperating to his Democratic foes, more disliked by Goldwaterites, more simplistic in his approach to state government, more cocksure of the rightness of his administrative techniques — and more awkward in explicating the varieties of state responsibility.

Having arrived at the top of the state ladder after serving as mayor of Columbus and state auditor, he has taken pains to reshape the state Republican Party in his image while convincing the public that there is no better alternative to his kind of leadership. Welfare groups may protest low relief grants; union publications may denounce his cosseting of big business; civil-rights demonstrators may charge him with ignoring their rallies. Yet he manages to turn up with an occasional citation from an admiring NAACP chapter here and a local union there. One way or another he contrives to cover almost all bases. Soon after his election, he shrewdly named the publisher of a large Negro newspaper chain in Ohio to his cabinet as industrial-relations director and put a number of other Negros on the state payroll. Such moves tend to blunt charges by angry civil-rights leaders that he ducked out of town the weekend of a protest march in Columbus. Although he is hardly one of organized labor's favorite politicians, Rhodes nevertheless is on good terms with building-trade unionists because of his campaign for construction projects around the state.

Partly because of his popularity at home and partly because of Ohio's big block of electorial votes (which went to Johnson in 1964 but to Nixon in 1960), Rhodes has been touted as a dark horse for the Republican national ticket in 1968. Barry Goldwater sees his as a "sleeper." But Rhodes repeatedly denies such ambitions. Each time he does, the talk dies down for a while, only to revive when off-season political speculators get together down at the press club.

For the moment at least, Rhodes seems content enough to maintain his image as an "Ohioan for Ohioans." At the Midwest Governors' Conference in Cincinnati in late June, where he was named chairman, Rhodes chose the occasion to announce his $28-million surplus in the state treasury — a gambit designed to show his out-of-state peers, as well as Ohio's citizens, how well things were going back at the Statehouse.

Later at the National Governors' Conference in Los Angeles, where interest in GOP prospects quickened in the presence of Ronald Reagan and Governor George Romney, Rhodes kept himself in the background and let his finance director issue still another glowing statement on Ohio's finances. Indeed, Rhodes was one of two Republican governors who failed to show up at a Reagan breakfast, his aides explaining only that the governor had a tight schedule. (The other absentee was William Scranton of Pennsylvania, who was committed to a meeting arranged a month earlier). The Ohio press corps later reported that Rhodes was on a golf course or preoccupied with collaring industrial prospects for Ohio, or both. Reagan said he was "sorry Jim wasn't at the breakfast. He's done a lot of good things in Ohio."

When the conference ended, Rhodes had still given no hint about his preference for a 1968 GOP Presidential nominee. Rhodes' customary standoffishness toward national Republican affairs has marked him as a loner in his own political family — a position Republicans can ill afford to maintain in their unity drive against President Johnson. He turns down most invitations to appear at out-of-state party functions, preferring the image of a hard-working governor who is just trying to help his state become No. 1 in everything from tomato-juice production to state-fair attendance. (The estimated cost of this year's state-fair entertainers alone was upwards of $300,000—providing an extravaganza that Ohio's have-nots viewed somewhat more grimly than did the farmers for whose delectation it was staged).

Groundwork Laid For Meetings

By JANE ROBINSON
Spectator Staff Writer

"Whatever we do ain't going to please an awful lot of people," Dr. Richard Mall empnasized.

The chairman of the Intercultural Council on Education didn't mince words as he spoke before the Council of South Side Organizations at the October meeting.

HE APPEARED before them to acquaint them with the work of the committee appointed by the Columbus Board of Education and asking them to hold a public meeting in an attempt to learn the thinking of thec ommunity on education problems, especially those made more complex by de facto segregation.

Pointing out that law prohibits the School Board from delegating its responsibilities, Mall stressed that ICE has no actual power, but expects its conclusions and recommendations to have a "moral force" on the board.

Stating that no guidelines were available when ICE was formed and that the members have felt their wayal ong, Mall said that the 17 citizens serving to predict what the counology," he said.
facts of life, and what they don't know staggers the imagination."

MALL STATED that although it is much too early to predict with what the council will come up with, he does know the "Council is not going to be told what to do," and any recommendation will be made in "good conscience and independently."

"We are learning the misconceptions that exist between Negro and white, many of which are downright mythology," he said.

Hitting hard at prejudice, Mall stated that he believes no man, white or Negro (even a member of the clergy) is completely honest if he denies his prejudice.

"A MAN MAY not even understand his prejudice, but it is intuitive, and it does exist," he hammered.

Mall indicated that half of the battle will be won when white and Negro face the problem squarely and discard the idea that if intercultural problems are ignored, they will fade into the night.

Mall recalled that when the council was first formed, it was more or less ignored until the NAACP brought up the question of busing.

"THOSE WHO had been too shy to come forward had plenty to say on this matter," he rued, stating the bus proposal was premature, putting the council in an untenable position.

"We were not ready to make a decision on this point at the time of the Mohawk meeting, and we are not ready to do so today," he said.

Stating that Amos Lynch, editor of the Call and Post, had made it known he didn't think too much of the council by giving them a "polite amount of hell," Mall said he felt that Lynch's attitude is shared by many.

"THEY DON'T have much faith in us" he said," but they wish us well."

The CSSO agreed to set up a meeting which would give the people of the area the opportunity to express themselves.

Although ICE members will be on hand to be "the eyes and ears" of the Board of Education, the meeting will be sponsored only by the CSSO. (A dozen other community councils have been approached to set-up like meetings).

"WE DON'T know yet what makes the South Side tick; in fact all we know about the South Side is what makes it smell," Mall quipped.

A PROFESSOR OF SPEECH at Ohio State, Dr. Richard Mall, is an articulate speaker and exceptionally well-qualified to bring the story of ICE to the CSSO. While waiting his slot on the program, his appearance had the Council members scratching their heads in their effort to "place" him. Their curiosity was abated when he revealed that he had been in most of their homes as the judge on TV's "Traffic Court."

Contributions To Fashion World Earns Coty Award For Gernreich

By MARIANNE TOMLINSON

Spectator Fashion Editor

Rudi Gernreich's original contribution to all areas of fashion have earned him the Coty American Fashion Critics' Return Award for 1966. Often described as the "kookiest American designer of major reputation," Rudi Gernreich is an original among American designers. His fashions are never inspired by Paris or fashion history any further back than Claire McCardell, whom he admired deeply. His clothes are contemporary, and because they are non-conforming clothes to which stock adjectives like pretty and alluring don't apply, they are often controversial.

Rudi Gernreich, though, is too vitally interested in the whole form and philosophy of current fashion to stop for editorial approval. He has changed through experimenting and learning, but he believes that fashion itself has not changed in a major way, only intensified. He goes his own way serently, often swimming upstream.

Rudi Gernreich received the 1966 Coty American Fashion Critics' "Return Award" signifying his second selection for the top fashion honor first given him in 1963.

The Gernreich fashion story began in Vienna where Rudi, as a child, became familiar with his aunt's salon de couture. Even at that tender age he knew they were just the kind of clothes he didn't want to make. He came to this country in 1938 and, five years later, at the age of twenty-one, became an American citizen.

Rudi Gernreich's early fashion career included a brush with fabric designing, advertising, and a stint on Seventh Avenue that he has described as "a disaster." On the west coast, however, he settled down to doing what he likes to do . . . knits, swimsuits and uncomplicated clothes. He brought back the knit maillot to the American scene and the swimsuits with the Gernreich-invented giant cutouts have been seen on every beach in the world.

In the spring of 1964 Gernreich launched the most controversial of all contemporary fashions . . . the topless bathing suit . . . which brought loud pros and cons from fashion authorities in all parts of the world. Conversely, for Spring 1965, he launched a bra, called the "No-Bra Bra" for Exquisite Form Industries, the largest brassiere manufacturer in the world, and a collection of little girls swimsuits for Regal Knitwear.

For Rudi, Fall '66 is the era of the head, foot and leg, all covered decoratively. The dress is an accessory to the body, and the body's fashion consciousness is total.

The uncomplicated is the absence of Gernreich's designs. About fashion in general he says, "We are living in a cycle of shapelessness. I don't believe there'll be a real change in fashion without a major social or economic change."

Rudi Gernreich returns to Seventh Avenue every season, where he shows his collection for Harmon Knitwear, a New York firm with which he has long been allied as designer. His couture collection he designs and manufactures in California.

Awards and recognition have come to Rudi Gernreich from many sources. For his swimsuits, he received both the Sports Illustrated Award, and the Coty American Fashion Critics' Special Award. In 1963, he received the Coty "Winnie," most coveted of all awards, for his "highly imaginative, highly contemporary color sense, and his determination to accept no limitations in the adventurous field of fashion designing."

Rudi's a rebel with a mischievous gleam in his eye and a marvelous sense of humor, as I've discovered when interviewing him in New York. During his most recent showing, one editor tried to get him to be realistic. She pointed out that he designs for shapeless women and that round little girls do not grow up to be flat boys. She asked him what ladies with round feminine figures should wear. His typical Gernreich reply . . . "nothing."

You're going to hear more of this fellow, that's for sure, but there's no telling what he'll take off next.

Our hat's off (nothing else) to Rudi Gernreich.

Assuming the average household will consist of five people, Young claims this does not jibe with the prediction that 42,000 people will be living in the community in the foreseeable future.

Pointing out there are only 36,000 acres in Madison Township he insists the figures are incongruous.

AS ANY MOVE involving change is sure to be controversial, the reactions are not unexpected.

However, Baer believes that when the plans are finalized and better understood than at the present time, they will gather the support they need.

On the other hand, Young believes what they will gather is dust.

Ferguson Charges Cloud With 'New Political Low'

Thomas E. Ferguson, candidate for auditor of state, has charged that Roger Cloud, incumbent state auditor, "granted a special favor to his campaign finance chairman at the expense of all taxpayers."

Ferguson said that Cloud, a member of the State Board of Deposit, voted to place two million dollars of free, state money in the Central National Bank of Cleveland. The chairman and chief executive officer of the bank is Cloud's finance manager, James Nance, Ferguson said.

The Democratic candidate said, "Cloud has violated his trust of public office." He said he wondered if bankers and businessmen that "Nance has pressured into contributing to my opponent's campaign realize that his bank has such a handsome deposit of state funds."

"This is another case of conflict of interest involving the appointed state auditor," Ferguson said. He accused Cloud of reaching "a new low in state politics."

Ferguson demanded a correction to the alleged injustice.

The public is invited to attend. Tickets may be obtained from any member or at the door.

Johnson Lists Points In Campaign Platform

Highway Department official, Robert L. Johnson, Democratic candidate for county commissioner, has detailed a six-point "Program for Franklin County Progress," in his campaign against incumbent Robert Southwick.

The platform includes support of joint development by the city and county of an incinerator authority and opposition to the jail tax levy on the grounds it was "poorly planned" and showed "poor judgment on the part of county commissioners."

Johnson also said he favored joint city-county air and water pollution control, updating of county welfare goals, reform in the county employe retirement program and an end of "one-party domination of government in a free society," by election of a Democrat on the board of commissioners.

Johnson, a 36-year-old businessman and former State lives with his wife and three children at 2302 Gardendale-dr.

Jersey "Success" Story

Three years ago when her grandfather Ray Wetherell, Sr., of Pickerington, gave her a heifer calf, "Etta's B. Success," Marilyn Wetherell felt she had a winner and nominated her for the 1966 Female Futurity Jersey Jug Show in the All American Jersey Show at the fairgrounds. Her foresight paid off handsomely Sunday when the three-year-old was named winner, and Marilyn received $1,005 which the Pickerington eighth-grader promptly stashed away for her college education. This is the second winner in the Wetherell family. Cousin Ronnie won the same show in 1956. Etta's B has been Marilyn's 4-H Club project for the past three years.

Red Carpet Readied

Mrs. John Stevens, 147 E. Deshler, will play hostess Friday to 50 members of the Lockbourne AFB Officers Wives Club who want to know firsthand what German Village "is really like." Their bus will arrive at the Stevens home at 10 a.m. where the walking tour will begin. The itinerary planned by "Liz" includes a preview of a home in stage one of restoration, a look at one of the compact duplex apartments (the Stevens home is a spacious one), a visit to St. Mary Church, a tour of the Old World Bazaar with its arcade of unusual shops and a stop at Marny's Flower.

Association Fights Mental Illness

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of articles prepared exclusively for The Spectator by Mrs. James Durbin, 1390 Studer-av, a United Appeal Volunteer writer.)

While many citizens in the Columbus and Franklin County area are concerned about the health of their communities, to most of them this health means ensuring adequate facilities for the care and treatment of illness, dispensing vaccines to prevent disease among children and providing special assistance to those with major medical problems like tuberculosis, cancer and the like.

Until the problem strikes close to home, too few citizens consider the need to be concerned about mental health until . . .

- A husband, father, brother, uncle or friend loses his job, disappears, or attempts suicide.
- A young mother, wife, aunt, sister or friend suddenly is admitted to the hospital with "nerves."
- A teenage son or daughter explodes in violence or other rebellion without apparent cause.

Then they discover that there are more people in the hospitals with mental illness, at any one time, than with all other diseases combined.

Through the Mental Health Association, a United Appeal agency, citizens of Franklin County are showing their concern about mental health by supporting the current United Appeal campaign, now being conducted to raise $4,815,430 for 69 health, welfare and recreation agencies.

More than $5,000 of the $56,446 budget of the Mental Health Association is provided through United Appeal contributions — making possible such services as information, education, referral, volunteer services and program planning.

To accentuate the positive aspect by building mental health, the association offers films and speakers to interested groups. The office at 131 E. State-st has a well-stocked pamphlet rack covering every phase of mental health, from humorous presentations about "everyday tensions" to the attractive magazine, "Motive," published bi-monthly by the Ohio Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction.

Other positive programs include a monthly meeting for professional persons — ministers, teachers, policemen, personal workers—who are in a position to spot the symptoms of mental illness and when properly informed, refer the troubled person to the proper place. Materials are sent to guidance counselors in schools and informaiton is provided for local Academies of Medicine throughout the state.

To fight the problem of mental illness existing today, the association conducts studies and surveys of current needs in the community and prepares legislation necessary to expand programs on the state level. It assists local officials in planning for long-range needs in the community, such as a mental health center for the downtown area to be built with city, county, state and federal cooperation. The association is also involved in programs of research and training at local treatment facilities, including the Columbus State Hospital, Mt. Carmel, Riverside, University and Harding.

Psychiatrists say that contact with volunteers in a hospital situation is a vital part of getting well for most patients. "Bells for Mental Helth" are volunteer service groups organized by the Mental Health Association several years ago to provide needed services for patients in mental hospitals in our area. A Bell can be composed of any number of persons — some are 10 or 12 strong, others as many as 40 — who are interested in helping in some way. No regular meetings are necessary and projects can be once a year or once a month according to the group's preference.

A new program is that of rehabilitation — assisting patients to adjust to their homecoming and helping them to find satisfactory positions. Business and industry play a vital part in this portion of the program.

Probably the greatest amount of personal assistance provided by the Mental Health Association is that of "referral"—informing telephone inquirers where the nearest and most appropriate treatment is availale. A directory of all available sources of help is provided for doctors, teachers and lawyers in the community.

Through membership in the National Association for Mental health, the local group can provide nation-wide service.

Youngsters Present 'Wendy The Witch'

Parents and friends of the third graders at St. John the Evangelist School are invited to "Wendy the Witch" at 1 p.m. Monday, Oct. 31.

Students participating in the Halloween play, according to Miss Jeanne Esselstein, their teacher, have, in addition to providing the talent, made their own costumes and stage settings.

5 YEAR GUARANTEE

If you recently read one of the popular consumer reports, you know how careful you must be when you buy a used car. Of course, you can't know everything about it, so you must depend on the dealer who sells it to you. When you buy from Haydocy Pontiac you are assured of dependability. You know you are not buying a "pig in a poke." Haydocy Pontiac gives you the facts on the car to start with and gives you good service plus an ironclad guarantee when you buy. It is well known that Haydocy Pontiac has many times gone far beyond the usual guarantee to be sure that a customer is happy. No buyer ever drives away from Haydocy Pontiac with a car and who later becomes dissatisfied with something get the "cold shoulder" 'when he returns. Haydocy Pontiac has even exchanged cars with buyers when they were not happy about something. That's when you know you can depend on the car you buy when you buy it from Haydocy Pontiac.

And So It Grows

Protect bush and climbing roses for the winter by piling soil eight to 10 inches high around the canes about mid-November. Since the ground may be hard by then, get a mound of soil ready now. Or use a mulch of corn cobs, straw, peat moss, or leaves.

In most areas of Ohio, there's still time to salvage a few cuttings from such annuals as geraniums, coleus, and chrysanthemum. Take tip cuttings four to five inches long, and plant them in a mixture of half sphagnum peat moss and half perlome. Set the container in an east window and water when the soil feels dry.

Danger Signals Flashing In C-W; Too Many Kids, Too Little Space

By JANE ROBINSON
Spectator Staff Writer

Canal Winchester school growth has not been spectacular.

For this, the community can thank its lucky stars.

The board has not been forced to desperate measures such as half-day sessions for elementary students or extended sessions with senior high school students starting the school day at the crack of dawn and junior high students in class until almost dusk.

BUT GROWTH has been steady, and since 1954, enrollment has increased an average of nine percent a year.

Today, enrollment stands at 1083, more than double that tallied 12 years ago.

Carl Miller, superintendent of the district, states the board and administration have exhausted stop- gap measures that can be taken without downgrading the quality of education traditionally offered in Canal Winchester.

IN FACT, according to one primary level-teacher, the toll is already evident.

Although 15 first graders were retained last year, second grade teachers have learned to their dismay that many of those promoted have not completed the work ordinarily covered in the first year.

This is directly attributed to faculty overload which lowers teaching efficiency and to overcrowded classrooms which results in disciplinary problems that makes learning difficult.

NOVEMBER passage of the $587,000 bond issue which will provide the construction of a new elementary wing, an elementary library and expansion of the multi-purpose room to provide adequate cafeteria and kitchen facilities can reverse this situation before the damage is irreparable.

But contrary to what some dreamers believe, most good things in this world are not free.

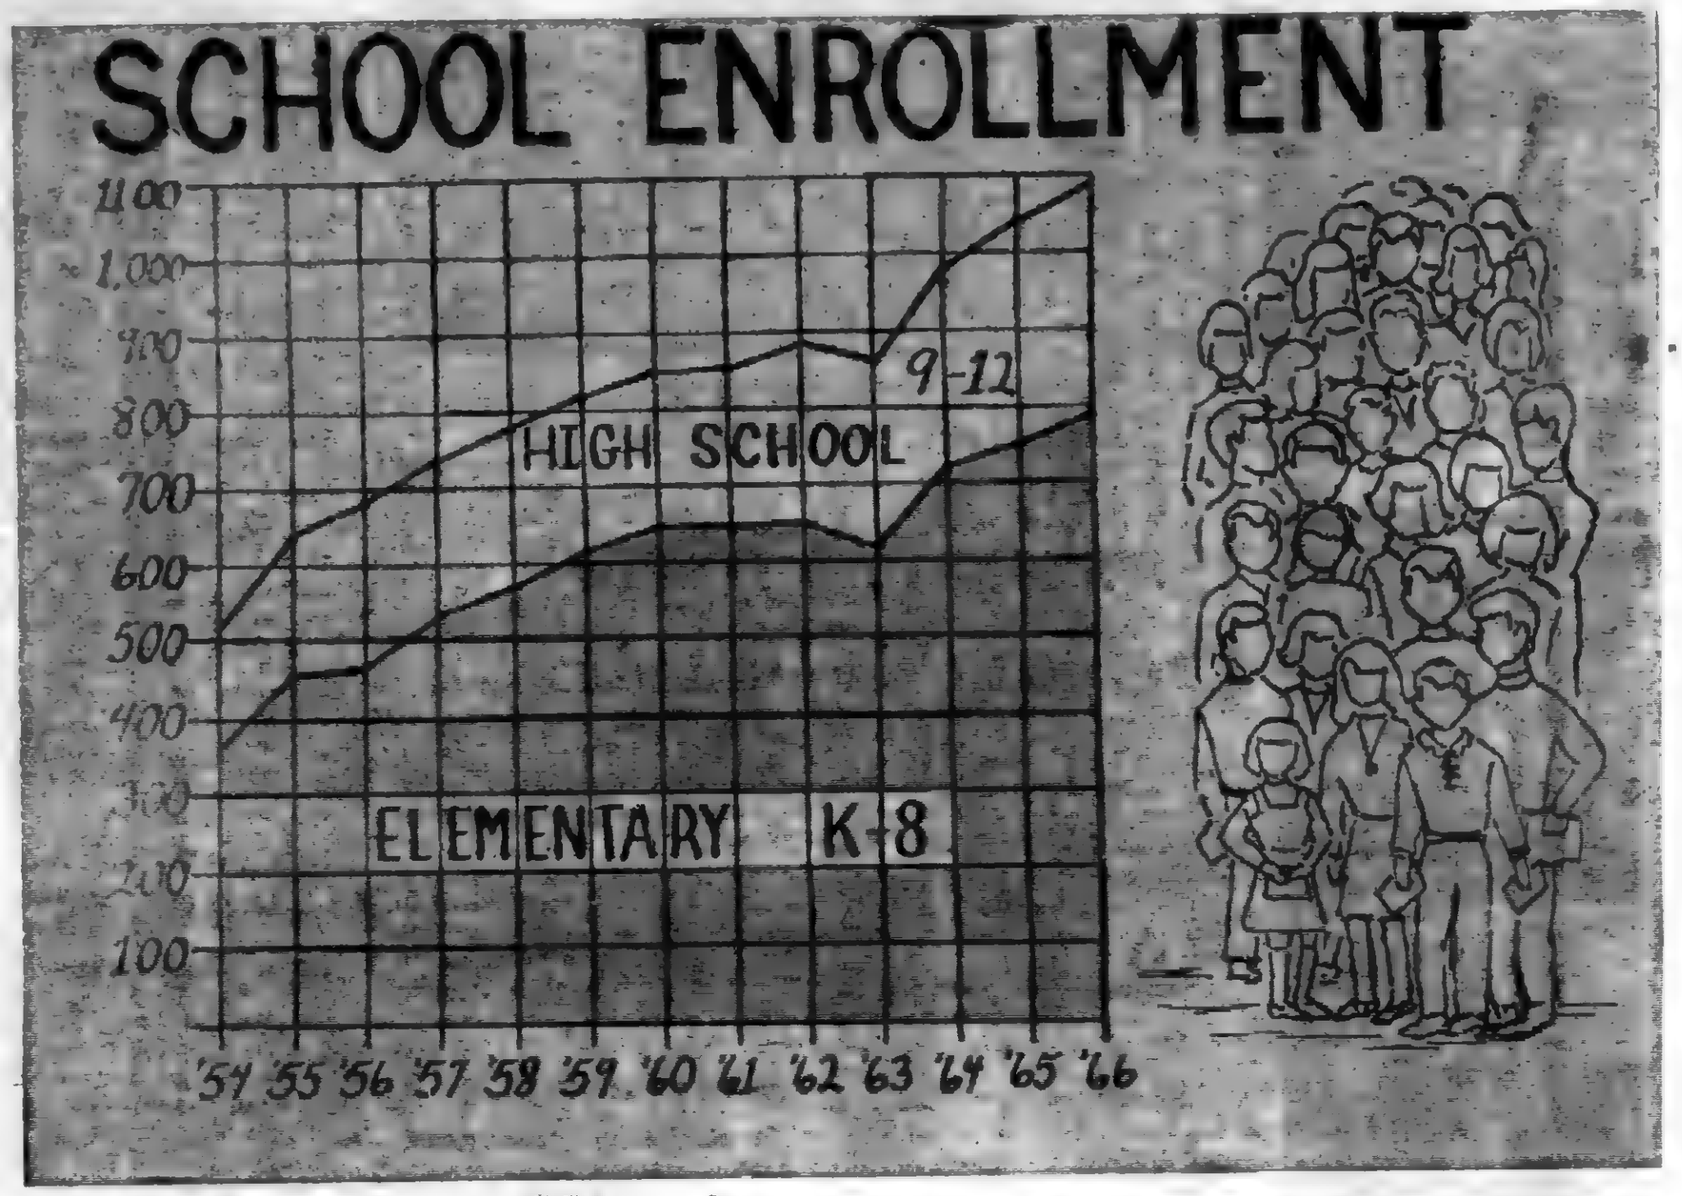
In this particular instance, to provide the necessary classrooms will cost taxpayers an average of 3.5 mills per $100 of real estate tax appraisal for the next 22 years.

VERY FEW taxpayers relish the thought of an extra $35 on their tax bill. (That figure would apply to the assessment on property with a market value of $20,000 placed on the tax duplicate at about half of its true worth.)

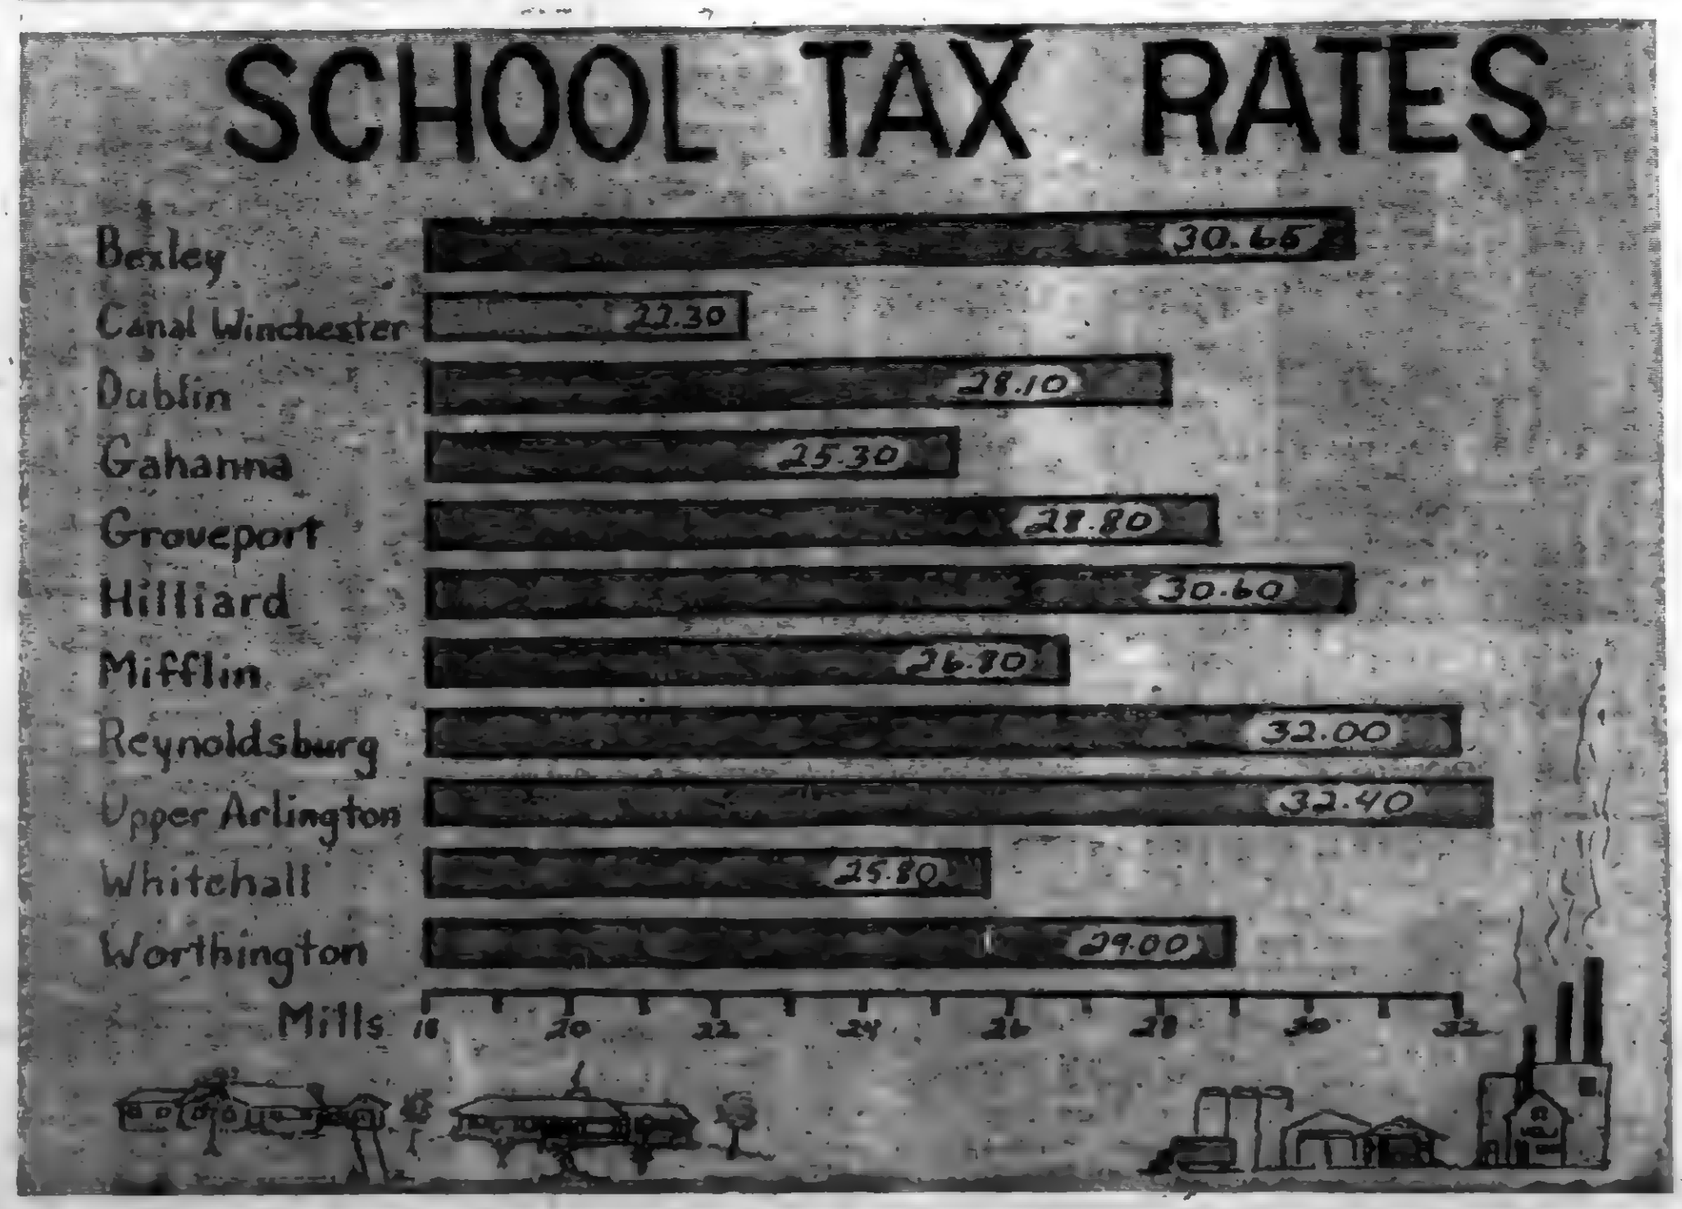
But neither can responsible citizens short change the youth of the community.

A brighter side of the coin is that tax rates in the C-W school district are currently quite low compared with neighborhood districts.

SUCCESS of the bond issue will not take the rate nearly as high as that currently being paid by residents of Bexley, Dublin, Hilliard, Upper Arlington or Worthington.



Instead, it will be slightly lower than that of Mifflin and Groveport and comparable to that of Whitehall and Dublin.



(Only two districts in the county enjoy a lower school tax rate than Canal Winchester—either with or without the proposed increase. They are Hamilton Local which is provided tax relief by federal subsidy made to help educate the children of Lockbourne AFB personnel, and Grandview. The latter district is blessed with an "industrial finger" which lightens the load to be borne by residential properties.

UNFORTUNATELY, Canal Winchester residents have neither of these bonanzas to fall back on.

Consequently, if they wish to maintain a top-flight school system, they must pay for it.

It's not the most pleasant choice in the world, but this is one case when there's simply no "George" to assume the responsibility.

PURDY MEAN — North end Jeff Purdy (86) was a pretty rough customer on this pass play Friday, throwing a straight arm at M-F's Gary Johnson after nabbing the toss. An unperturbed Johnson made the tackle as Devils routed Polar Bears.

Three Area Title Hopefuls 'Dig In'

By JACK WITTENMEIER
Spectator Staff Writer

Teays Valley, Gahanna and Reynoldsburg, the only area elevens still etched in league title pictures, take cautious steps forward to aiding their individual causes this weekend.

George Troutman's Lions (6-0) host scorned Mid-Eight contender Hilliard (5-1), the only ball club to defeat Gahanna in the last 24 outings.

MARION WAITS' Vikings and John Thompson's Raiders —both 2-1 in Metro play—also remain at home, the Vikings (3-3) hosting Whitehall (2-4), the Raiders (3-3) entertaining Hamilton Township (0-6).

In other area games Friday, Canal Winchester journeys to Frankfort-Adena and Carroll (2-3-1) hosts Amanda for Mid-State action while Groveport (1-5) hits the road for London to test the unbeaten (6-0) Raiders.

• • •

Gahanna may well have a "tiger by the tail" Friday, the Wildcats still smarting from that 19-0 defeat at London last weekend.

"THEY'VE GOT a lot of power and size," remarked coach Troutman of the 'Cats. "They'll be the biggest team we've faced this season."

The Wildcat forward wall can average 200 pounds from end to end and that's some mighty impressive beef in front of halfback Bruce Adams (210) and fullback Pete Miller (220).

The 'Cats' slot offense features power sweeps by Miller and Adams with other halfback Ron Brewer providing the "change of pace," according to Troutman.

ANOTHER Hilliard favorite is the off-tackle power play. Basically a rushing team, Troutman promises respect for the 'Cats aerial arm.

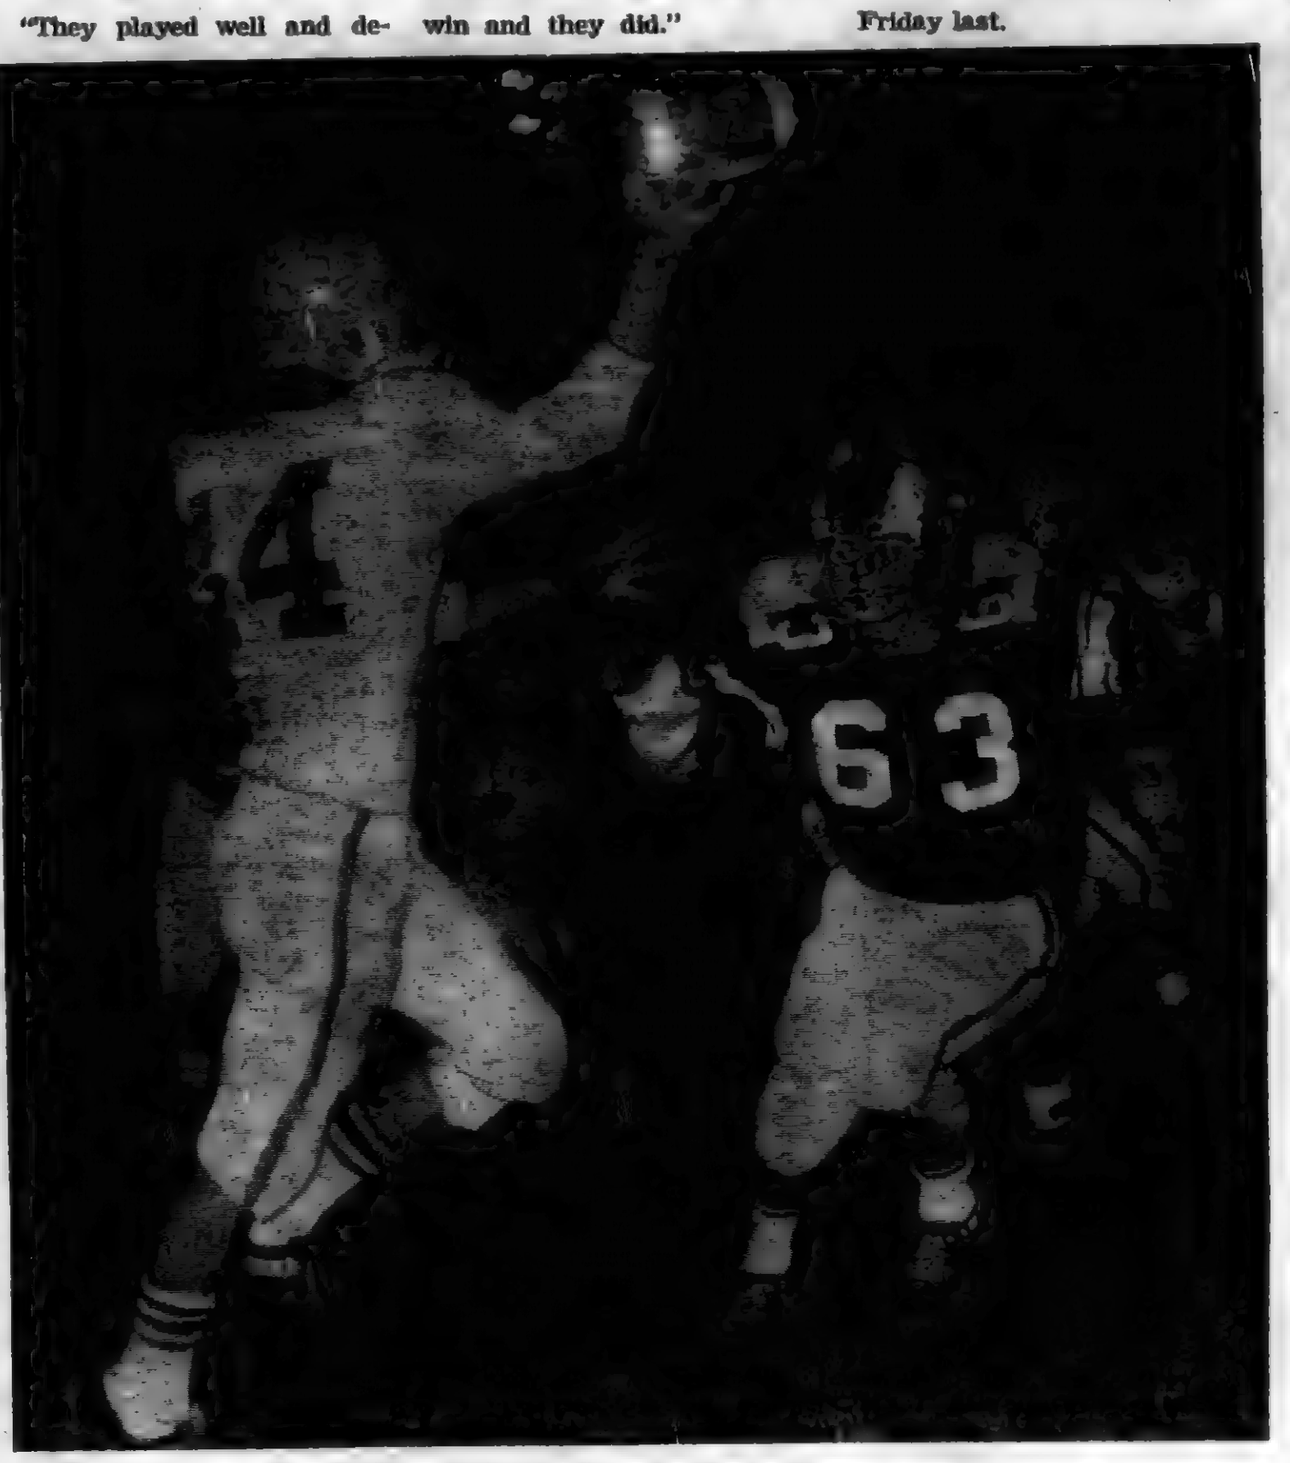
"They've thrown quite a bit in their last two games (14 times vs. London) and both of their halfbacks can put the ball in the air," the Lion coach added.

Hilliard's defense (Troutman figures his Lions will see some variation of a 6-2) has been the Wildcat trademark this fall.

IN FACT the 'Cat unit allowed London only 129 total yards last weekend, the Raider margin largely coming on Hilliard's faltering punting game.

"They beat us last year," Troutman recalls, denying the Lions a clear Mid-Eight title.

"We've got a lot of shaping up to do this week," the Lion mentor added. "I wasn't satisfied with our effort at Groveport (Lions won, 29-7). They were a fired-up ball club but we lost three more fumbles. (Lions have now lost 13 in their last three games)."



STATISTICALLY Gahanna piled up a big advantage (276 to Groveport's 84).

Troutman credited his entire defensive line (held Cruisers to 22 yards rushing), adding fullback Chuck Freeman (68 yards in 13 carries) and quarterback Mike Kane (hit Lawhead on 32 and 54-yard TD passes) to the praise list.

• • •

"They played well and deserved to win. They were the best football team out there Friday night. They came to win and they did."

SO SAYS Reynoldsburg coach John Thompson of his Raiders' 14-8 setback to Pleasant View Friday last.

GOOD GAMBLE — Hamilton Township quarterback Ernie Spires (14) looked cool and calm on this passing attempt from his own end zone Friday with Whitehall's Dave Graff (63) bearing down on the Ranger back. Spires completed a first-down pass to John Gorczyca on the play but H-T lost to Rams, 44-0. (Staff photos by Jack Wittenmeier).

"They wanted part of a championship and they got it — maybe," Thompson added, indicating that the Panthers beat his Raiders on the ground (got 201 of their 235 total yards rushing).

Reynoldsburg totaled 185 yards (120 rushing).

THE FACE-TO-FACE meeting of Reynoldsburg's Gary Shade and P-V's Charlie Hess never quite came off.

Hess passed for only 48 yards (career low) and Shade clicked for only 65 aerial yards.

Both clubs blew good scoring opportunities—P-V getting one TD called back, the Raiders failing to count from the nine on one occasion.

THOMPSON credited fullback-linebacker Denny Spires ("made, was in on or assisted in close to 50 percent of our tackles") and Shade ("he did not get the blocking, made a couple of good saves") with the best efforts Friday.

The Raider mentor is hopeful that end Ken Hergesell (concussion), halfback Mike Herold (ankle) and tackle Jerry Milliron (back) will all be available Friday when the Raiders visit.

Thompson is ready to "expect anything" from Hamilton. "They've shown three different offenses this season with all kinds of patterns. When you're losing games, you try everything. I don't blame him (H-T coach Bill McProuty)," Thompson added.

"THEY'RE A green team and naturally will make a lot of mistakes. But they'll be ready for us. When we play 'em, they all come fired up."

Thompson rated H-T quarterback Ernie Spires as an "outstanding performer" both on offense and defense — and his Raiders' toughest defensive assignment Friday.

PV Stops Raiders; Puts Four Into Metro Loop Lead

Reynoldsburg fell to fired up and daring Pleasant View 14-8 and Teays Valley downed Franklin Heights to toss the newly formed Metro League into a chaotic four team jumble for the top spot.

The Raiders' slick quarterback Gary Shade tossed to Dick Baserman for an extra point following Denny Spires' TD to put the former Franklin County team into the lead 8-6 at halftime. But the stout Raider defenses couldn't ward off slippery Charley Hess as his second six-pointer did the trick.

BRUCE ROESE fired across Franklin Heights for three scores as he led the Vikings to a 20-12 win over the favored Falcons.

CANAL Winchester despite Chris Hamers' early TD fell to Liberty Union, who posted a 32 point second half. In other area action Carroll stopped Pickerington, 16-0 and Whitehall humbled Hamilton Township, 44-0.

RICK RECEPTION—Hamilton halfback Rick Ciborek (48) looks downfield at approaching Whitehall tacklers after taking sideline pass from quarterback Ernie Spires Friday.

SIDESTEP — Hamilton Township halfback John Gorczyca (right) tries a change of pace, sidestepping Whitehall defender Glenn Foltz (33) after taking first-down swing pass from Ernie Spires.

The evening chill has arrived in Ohio, heralding the approach of autumn. Out along the main highways, the distant splashes of vague color can be seen promising another full color spectacular show for all those who can spare the time to stop from their hasty rush into tomorrow and enjoy it.

Surprisingly, in spite of the lack of a nut crop, early season squirrel hunters have met with good success. The 1965 season was the best in five years for the wily bushy-tails, it took an average of 2½ hours to bag each squirrel. And so far this year, Central and Southern Ohio hunters invested just a quarter hour more or a total of 2 3/4 hours for each shot.

ANOTHER pleasant note at this point is the killed hunter ratio. Last year, early eager beavers had maimed 12 hunters and killed two during the first 15 days of the squirrel season across Ohio. This year so far, there have been only five accidents and no fatalities, according to G. Robert Strohm, Division of Wildlife Hunter Safety Supervisor.

This is good news for those 700,000 plus people of Ohio who enjoy guns as a form of recreation. Statistics such as these will go far toward putting the lid on such anti-gun legislation as the Dodd Bill.

I feel that the years of hunter safety training classes held by sportsmen clubs all over the state are finally taking effect. Let's hope the trend to sane gun handling continues.

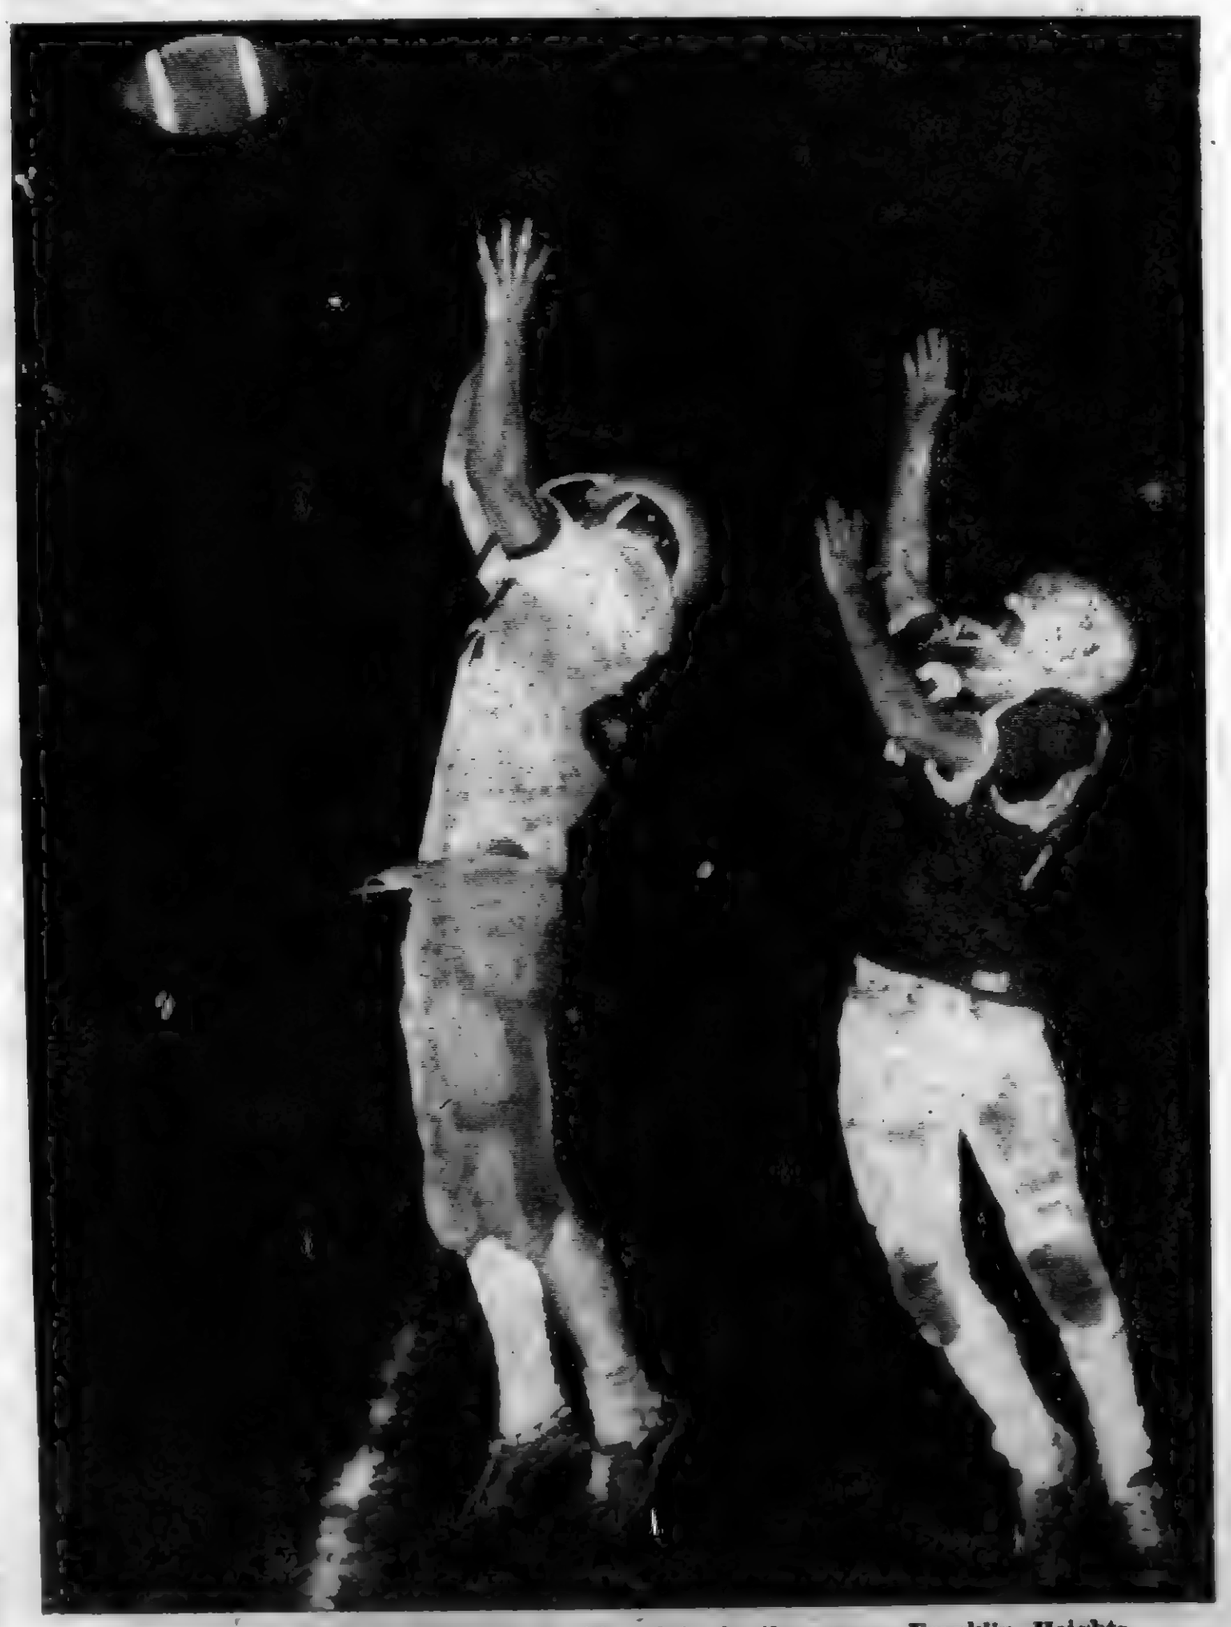
SEPTEMBER and October are very important to the hunter, even though he might think he must wait until November to take to the field for his favorite game. Now is the best time to select the appropriate areas to hunt. 'Case' them with an early field trip. If your choice is private lands, get out and meet the land owners, let them know who you are and arrange definite times to hunt. Buy a dozen eggs or a pumpkin, let the favors flow both ways and you won't meet with a refusal on opening day.

Just as important, get you and your hound in condition by taking long walks across the countryside. If you have been leading a sedentary life all year, don't ask your heart to take on an added burden without a month or so of exercise. A great many more hunters die each year from heart attacks than are killed by careless hunters.

GET OUT YOUR guns and test fire them, break a few clay birds and get that 'eye' back again. Your hunting buddies won't get the chance to laugh at your misses if you don't make them. Make sure your clothes and boots are ready to go. Use a good silicone spray on the leather boots, that will waterproof them and make them softer after a year of storage.

Checkers Open IHL Sked Here With Gems, Oak Leafs

Columbus hockey Checkers, the Capital City's newest sporting innovation, open their 1966 International Hockey League Schedule Friday vs. the Dayton Gems at the Coliseum rink (8 p.m)



After a Saturday visit to Toledo, the Checkers will return home for a Sunday date with the Des Moines Oak Leafs (7 p.m.)

THE CHECKERS introduced hockey to Columbus last week, dropping a 7- 3 verdict to the Chicago Black Hawks —parent club of the Columbus entry in the NHL.

Checker officials promise that ice conditions under par at the exhibition tilt due to hasty preparations after a horse show at the Coliseum, have been corrected for the locals' IHL opener Friday.

Tickets for the Checkers' weekend home stand can be obtained at the Central Ticket Office, Sears' Stores at Northland and Town and Country Shopping Centers and at Discount Records.

CALL 228-1305 or 228-3318 for ticket information.

School's Out

All children in public schools in the area will have a day off Friday, Oct. 28. Schools are closing to allow the faculty to attend a Central Ohio Teachers Association Convention.

Circleville Girl In Top Fifteen

Mary Anne Yates of Circleville is one of the 15 Central Ohio high school seniors whose top rank in recent testing at Ohio State University has earned them a trip to Chicago, Oct. 27-29, for the eighth National Youth Conference on the Atom.

John W. Robinson, representative of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. which has joined with other electric companies throughout the U. S. in sponsoring the student and teachers scholarships to the conference, explained its purpose. The utility companies welcome the opportunity to present the nation's most gifted high school science students and teachers with an "authoritative and inspiring picture" of the peaceful applications of the atom," he stated.

SOUTH HIGH DECA students have long been convinced of the competence of Patrick J. Canini as a teacher and now they have equal respect for his bowling form. With the South's Distributive Education Club planning its second annual headpin tourney, the students lined up to watch their advisor show how it's done. From the left are Richard Roshon, president; Vernon Carpenter, vice-president; Canini; Ruby Ann Lee, treasurer and Susan Hackett, secretary.

South DECA's Plan Annual Pin Tourney

South High Distributive Education Club members are on the prowl for bowlers, young or old, male or female.

They are offering the money, trophies and fun to everyone with but one rule.

If you are a real "pro," stay away.

THE HEADPIN tournament they are planning at Berwick Plaza Lanes, Refugee and Rt. 33, is closed to men with an average over 190 and to women who consistently roll better than 170.

The tourney is scheduled for four consecutive weekends beginning Saturday, Oct. 29. The hours are from noon until 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays through Nov. 27.

Trophies and prizes of $50, $35 and $25 will go to the top three men entering the tourney. The trio taking the women's division will receive $40, $25 and $15 to go along with their trophies.

In the student divisions ("Bantams" 12 and under and "Juniors" between 13 and 18) entries will compete for trophies only.

According to Patrick Canini, South High distributive education teacher who is advising the DECA members, one can enter repeatedly, and in case of ties, roll-offs will be called. Adult tickets are $1 and children's, 75 cents.

New Head Of State Group
